Mr. Gwilym Jones: Responsibility for the Employment Service in Wales rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet (a) Buckley town council and (b) Flintshire county council to discuss the proposed closure of the Buckley Employment Service offices. [34750]

Mr. Jones: No. Responsibility for the Employment Service in Wales rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 19 March, Official Report, column 169, if he will make a statement about his plans for Wales with regard to powered wheelchairs and financial aid for wheelchairs. [34751]

Mr. Hague: Discussions on the future provision of wheelchair services in Wales are continuing. Decisions will be taken when detailed advice is available and has been fully assessed.

GP Fundholding

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of general practitioner practices in Wales as at 1 April 1996, which were (a) total fundholding, (b) conventional fundholdings and (c) community fundholding; how many patients in total were covered by each category of GP; and what proportion this represented of the total patient population. [34767]

Mr. Hague: As at 1 April 1996, in Wales, there were:

(a) Four Total Purchasing Pilot Projects involving 14 practices[1] with a combined list of 130,251 (4.44 per cent. of the population);

(b) 197 Standard Fundholding practices with a combined list of 1,424,535 (48.54 per cent. of the population); and

(c) 13 community Fundholding practices with a combined list of 39,876 (1.4 per cent. of the population).

[1] These practices are included in, not additional to, those in sub-para b).

South East Wales Ambulance Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has had with the chairman of the South East Wales ambulance trust concerning his financial accounting proposals relating to those partially built Mercedes Benz Lifestal ambulances which have been paid for but will not be completed for trust use. [34759]

Mr. Hague: None; this is currently an operational matter for the trust.

ENVIRONMENT

Council House Sales

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total number of houses or flats sold by each of the London borough authorities since 1980. [33706]

Mr. Clappison: Information on sales of council houses and flats reported by each English local authority for financial years from 1979–80 and a cumulative total of sales to the end of December 1995 is available in the Library.

Clinical Waste

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which countries export clinical and medical waste to England and Wales for high temperature incineration; and if he will make a statement. [34036]

(2) what recent discussions have taken place with the Irish Department of Health concerning the export of medical and clinical waste to England and Wales; and if he will make a statement; [34038]

(3) what plans he has to modify the regulations governing the importation of medical and clinical waste; and if he will make a statement; [34039]

(4) if he will list the names and locations of those companies in England and Wales which are licensed to import medical and clinical waste for high temperature incineration; and if he will make a statement. [34037]

Mr. Clappison: The Government's policies on exports and imports of waste from and to the United Kingdom are contained in the United Kingdom management plan for exports and imports of waste which was published on 16 May 1996. The plan has legal effect, and came into force on 1 June 1996.

The Government's policy proposals for waste exports and imports were initially outlined in a statement by the then Minister for the Environment and Countryside, my right hon. Friend the Member for South Ribble (Mr. Atkins) on 15 June 1994. The Department consulted on its proposals, in the form of a draft plan, during February and March 1995; the European Commission and other EC member states, including the Republic of Ireland, were also consulted at this time.

Under the plan, imports of waste for disposal are generally banned, in line with the principle of self-sufficiency in the disposal of waste. However, exceptions to this policy occur in cases of emergency, or where the exporting country does not have, and cannot reasonably acquire, suitable disposal facilities of its own.

Representations were received from the Irish Government, to the effect that they produce certain hazardous wastes in sufficiently small quantities overall per year that the provision of new specialised disposal facilities in Ireland would be uneconomic. As a result of these representations, the Government decided to exclude the Republic of Ireland from the phase-out of imports of waste from other EC member states for high temperature incineration at facilities capable of operating at temperatures in excess of 1100 deg C. Thus, Irish waste destined for high temperature incineration, including some categories of clinical waste, will continue to be allowed access to UK facilities. Imports from the Irish Republic of clinical or other waste destined for low temperature incineration, however, are not permitted under the plan.

In 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available, the following European countries exported hazardous wastes to the United Kingdom for high temperature incineration: Belgium, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Netherlands, Portugal and Spain. Wastes were also imported for high temperature incineration from Brazil, Chile, Mexico, Mozambique, Norway, Thailand, Turkey and Venezuela. Data are not available on the origin of these wastes by economic sector-clinical, medical, industrial, and so on.

There are four sites in England and Wales which are licensed as high temperature incinerators as defined in the plan; these are listed:

Rechem International Ltd.: Pontypool

Rechem International Ltd.: Southampton

Cleanaway Ltd.: Ellesmere Port

Leigh Environmental Ltd. Killamarsh.

We have no plans at present to modify the regulations governing the importation of medical and clinical waste into the United Kingdom. However, the question of clinical waste imports has recently been raised informally with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health by the Irish Minister for Health. As a result, we understand that the Irish Government are considering making a formal request for a temporary dispensation to continue imports of clinical waste for low temperature incineration. We will consider any such request on its merits.

Mercury (Disposal)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made in persuading the lighting industry to take greater responsibility for the safe disposal of mercury. [33866]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on Monday 22 April 1996, Official Report, column 1. I have no further information to add.

Contaminated Waste (Disposal)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the proposals and sites currently under consideration for the dispersal of contaminated waste. [33842]

Mr. Clappison: Applications for waste management licences are made to the Environment Agency. The agency is required to maintain a public register of licence applications made to it and of licences which it has granted. Whether a particular site would take contaminated waste would depend on the terms of the licence granted by the agency.

Environmental Standards (Job Creation)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the number of jobs likely to be created by higher environmental standards announced in the last year; and if he will make a statement. [33907]

Mr. Clappison: The effect of higher environmental standards on competitiveness and jobs is complex and depends on a number of factors, including the design and implementation of each particular standard. Chapter 7 of the third competitiveness White Paper, which was recently published by the Government, outlines some of the issues.

Parapox Virus

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the spread of parapox and its effect on the red squirrel population. [33853]

Mr. Clappison: No research into the parapox virus has been commissioned by my Department.

I am aware of work being undertaken by the Institute of Zoology in identifying the virus in red squirrels and understand that the institute is working in association with wildlife trusts under the north-west red alert scheme, which enables a number of trusts in the north-west of England to collect red squirrel carcases. We will continue to follow this work with interest and await its outcome, together with any recommendations that are forthcoming.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account he took of the unit costs for (a) cavity wall insulation and (b) heating system upgrade as set out in the home energy efficiency scheme proposals for change when setting the current HEES budget; and if he will make a statement. [34242]

Mr. Clappison: The two measures mentioned by the hon. Member are not presently provided under the home energy efficiency scheme. Their costs were not, therefore, relevant factors in determining the current level of funding. The Government are consulting on possible alterations to HEES, and will consider whether any changes are desirable in the light of that consultation.

Business Rates

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the responsibility of (a) the local authorities and (b) the Valuation Office in ensuring that the correct rateable reference is used to calculate the liability of individual businesses for business rates. [34482]

Sir Paul Beresford: Valuation officers, who are employed by the Valuation Office agency, are responsible for compiling and then maintaining an accurate non-domestic rating list for each billing authority in the country. Local authorities are required to inform the valuation officer for their area of any information which suggests that a list requires alteration.

Building Inspectors

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he plans to monitor the performance of approved inspectors appointed under the provisions of the Building Act 1984. [34366]

Mr. Clappison: As with local authority building control, the Department conducts no formal monitoring of the performance of approved inspectors.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he plans to allow new approved inspectors appointed under the provisions of the Building Act 1984 to compete in the new house building sector. [34368]

Mr. Clappison: The existing approved inspector—NHBC Building Control Services Ltd.—has in place, as a statutory requirement, a scheme of insurance which has been approved by the Secretary of State for building control work in relation to dwellings. An applicant for approved inspector status who has a similar scheme of insurance approved by the Secretary of State will, subject to demonstrating technical competence and being awarded approved inspector status, be allowed to operate as an approved inspector in the new house building sector.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to appoint further corporate approved inspectors under the provisions of the Building Act 1984. [34365]

Mr. Clappison: The appointment of further corporate approved inspectors is expected by late summer.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what period of authorisation he intends to adopt for the appointment of new approved inspectors under the provisions of the Building Act 1984 prior to a review of their appointment. [34367]

Mr. Clappison: Under the provisions of the Building (Approved Inspectors etc.) Regulations 1985, an approval by the Secretary of State of a corporate approved inspector remains extant until withdrawn. The appointments are not subject to periodic review.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to apply to new approved inspectors appointed under the provisions of the Building Act 1984 the same regime of departmental authorisation and performance monitoring as that applied to NHBC Building Control Services Ltd. [34369]

Mr. Clappison: Under the provisions of the Building (Approved Inspectors etc.) Regulations 1985, corporate approved inspectors such as NHBC Building Control Services Ltd. are approved by the Secretary of State. There is no regime of departmental authorisation beyond the approval process. As with local authority building control, the Department conducts no formal monitoring of the performance of approved inspectors.

Building Regulations

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement in response to the representations by the Deregulation Committee about the transfer of costs from the private sector to local authorities and the completeness of his Department's consultation in relation to the Deregulation (Building) (Initial Notices and Final Certificates) Order 1996. [34370]

Mr. Clappison: In the 14th report of the Deregulation Committee, it was noted that the transfer of costs to local authorities that would be incurred by the Deregulation (Building) (Initial Notices and Final Certificates) Order 1996, if enacted, may not be as significant as first appeared. On this basis, the Committee indicated its willingness to accept the transfer in this case. It did, however, raise the issue of whether in principle it is acceptable to transfer costs from the private sector to local authorities as a result of deregulation orders, which is an issue that should not be addressed by my Department in isolation.

The comments of the Committee on the completeness of the consultation have been noted, and will be addressed should the occasion arise again. However, the Committee reported that the flaws in the consultation would have no harmful effect because the proposed changes would not undermine necessary protection.

Government Regional Policy

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the roles of the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration as (a) central co-ordinator of Government policy towards the south-west and (b) regeneration sponsor Minister for Leeds, Bradford, Batley and the Thames gateway. [34362]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Prime Minister has asked the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration to act as central co-ordinator of Government policy towards the south-west. Working with colleagues in the relevant Government Departments, the Minister is taking a close interest in the broad issues affecting the whole of the south-west, but is focusing particularly on the concerns and interests of the counties of Devon and Cornwall.

The Minister is continuing to discharge his responsibilities as regeneration sponsor Minister for Leeds, Bradford, Batley and the Thames gateway. His role is to support and promote Government regeneration initiatives through contact with civic and business leaders and other local interests; to act as a channel for communicating local concerns to ministerial colleagues; and to share with sponsor Minister and other colleagues experience and ideas relevant to regeneration.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what instructions or guidance have been given to the regional director of the Government office for the south-west on the implications of the appointment of the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration as central co-ordinator of Government policy towards the south-west and the way in which the Government office should relate to him. [34364]

Sir Paul Beresford: The appointment of the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration as a central co-ordinator of Government policy towards the south-west does not change the accountability of officials in the Government office for the south-west to Ministers in the four Departments of which they are part.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the terms of reference given to the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration in his capacity as a central co-ordinator of Government policy towards the south-west. [34361]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Prime Minister has asked the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration to act as a central co-ordinator of Government policy towards the south-west. The Minister will be working with colleagues in the relevant Departments looking at the broad issues affecting the whole of the south-west, and focusing particularly on the concerns and interests of the counties of Devon and Cornwall.

Domestic Waste

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the average calorific value of domestic waste per cubic metre and the subsequent average reduction in this estimated value after the removal of recyclable components; and if he will make a statement. [34344]

Mr. Clappison: The composition and density of household waste varies significantly between households, and so it is not possible to give a meaningful average calorific value of domestic waste per cubic metre. Typical calorific values fall in the range of 9.5 to 11 megajoules per kilogram.

A summary report[1] of research carried out by AEA Technology entitled "The Impact of Recycling Household Waste on Downstream Energy Recovery Systems", which was published in June 1995, concluded that all of the various source separation options for recyclable materials which were considered increased—rather than decreased—the calorific value in megajoules per kilogram of the waste feedstock. However, they also reduced in total the amount of energy that might be recovered from a given amount of waste. The report therefore concluded that the introduction of source separation schemes for recycling household waste does not prejudice energy recovery from the residual waste.

Regeneration

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the terms of reference given to regeneration sponsor Ministers listed in figure 32 of the Department of the Environment's annual report for 1996. [34363]

Sir Paul Beresford: The role of sponsor Ministers is to support and promote Government regeneration initiatives in their area through contact with civic and business leaders and other local interests; to act as a channel for communicating the local concerns of their area to ministerial colleagues; and to share with sponsor Minister and other colleagues experience and ideas relevant to regeneration.

Local Government Ombudsman

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the circumstances under which the local government ombudsman considers cases referred more than 12 months from the day when the complainant first thought that maladministration was occurring; and what plans he has to introduce legislation to record such circumstances in law. [34498]

Sir Paul Beresford: Under section 26(4) of the Local Government Act 1974, the local government ombudsman may conduct an investigation into a complaint outside the 12-month period if he considers it reasonable to do so. In any such case, it is for the ombudsman to decide on the facts of that individual case whether it would be right to exercise his power to investigate. The local government ombudsman's current arrangements for handling complaints are being considered as part of the second stage of the review, which was announced on 12 February 1996 by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration, Official Report, column 402.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many cases the local government ombudsman has handled in each year of his existence. [34500]

Sir Paul Beresford: The number of cases handled by the three offices of the local government ombudsman service in England is as follows:

Year	Complaints received	Complaints determined
1974–75	473	355
1975–76	2,249	1,916
1976–77	2,277	1,930
1977–78	2,464	1,519
1978–79	2,116	2,031
1979–80	2,181	2,105
1980–81	2,434	2,303
1981–82	2,706	2,501
1982–83	2,743	2,763
1983–84	3,034	3,019
1984–85	3,389	3,284
1985–86	3,502	3,134
1986–87	4,059	3,853
1987–88	4,229	4,158
1988–89	7,055	5,961
1989–90	8,733	7,290
1990–91	9,169	9,104
1991–92	12,123	10,713
1992–93	13,307	14,057
1993–94	14,253	13,718
1994–95	15,525	15,140
1995–96	15,226	16,344

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of recent assessments made of the performance and level of service of the local government ombudsman. [34502]

Sir Paul Beresford: As announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration on 12 February 1996, Official Report, columns 402-03, the second stage of a review of the local government ombudsman service is currently in progress. Copies of the report on the first stage of the review, which examined the need for an independent system for the investigation of complaints, were placed in the Library of the House on that date. The second stage will focus particularly on the efficiency and effectiveness of the local government ombudsman service as an investigatory body.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many complaints he has received regarding the local government ombudsman office's handling of cases in each year since the office was established. [34499]

Sir Paul Beresford: Detailed records of this information are not kept by my Department. As announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration on 26 June 1995, Official Report, column 534, we have received more than 200 written representations expressing some dissatisfaction about the operation of the local government ombudsman service since 1 January 1994.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff are currently employed at the local government ombudsman's office. [34501]

Sir Paul Beresford: At 1 June 1996, 213 staff were employed by the three offices of the local government ombudsman service in England.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current budget allocation for the running of the local government ombudsman's office; and if he intends to review its funding. [34503]

Sir Paul Beresford: The local government ombudsman service is funded by a grant made annually by my Department from the revenue support grant. The grant for 1996–97 is £6.7 million, in addition to which a further £600,000 is available to the service from its own resources—reserves and income earned. The funding of the local government ombudsman service is currently being considered as part of the review which was announced on 12 February 1996 by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing, and Urban Regeneration, Official Report, columns 402-03.

Green Ministers

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish summaries of the discussions and actions agreed upon following the meetings of Green Ministers. [34573]

Mr. Clappison: Green Ministers decided not to publish summaries of their discussions but agreed to publish a list of contact addresses in each Government Department where inquiries on green issues could be directed. A copy of the list is in the House Library. They also agreed to publish a series of case studies which show what measures Departments have taken to ensure that environmental considerations are taken into account in policies and programmes.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the next meeting of Green Ministers is planned; and what will be on the agenda. [34574]

Mr. Clappison: The next meeting of Green Ministers will take place later in the summer. The agenda has not yet been drawn up.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which Government Departments were present at the last meeting of the Green Ministers; and which were represented by a Minister. [34575]

Mr. Clappison: All Green Ministers attended or were represented at their last meeting.

"Policy Appraisal and the Environment"

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff are employed within his Department with responsibility for ensuring that "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" is used by all Government Departments. [34576]

Mr. Clappison: It is for individual Government Departments to ensure that "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" is used within their Departments. Within my Department, no staff have exclusive responsibility for this task.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance has been issued to the Government regional offices to ensure "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" is used in decision making at regional level; and if he will place a copy of that guidance in the Library. [34577]

Mr. Clappison: All Government Departments were advised to use "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" when it was published in 1991. Copies were distributed widely within the Department of the Environment, including the regional offices.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitoring is (a) currently undertaken and (b) planned of the use of "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" by Government Departments and Government regional offices. [34578]

Mr. Clappison: No monitoring has been undertaken, but the Department is about to appoint consultants who will evaluate the degree to which "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" has been used by Government Departments, and will make recommendations as to how the integration of environmental considerations into policy making in government can be reinforced.

Local Government Commission

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will announce the name of the new chairman of the Local Government Commission for England. [35270]

Mr. Curry: Professor Malcolm Grant, the current deputy chairman of the Local Government Commission for England, has been appointed chairman of the commission with effect from 1 July 1996 when Sir David Cooksey's term of appointment is completed. To retain the current membership of seven commissioners a new member has been appointed, Mr. Robin Gray, who takes up post on the same day.

Hedgerows

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government expect to publish the draft Hedgerow Protection Regulations for consultation; and if the Government propose to introduce the hedgerow protection scheme by July. [34572]

Mr. Clappison: Section 97 of the Environment Act 1995 requires that hedgerow protection regulations are subject to consultation and approval by both Houses under the affirmative resolution procedure before they can come into effect. We expect to publish the draft regulations for consultation later in the summer, with the aim of laying the regulations in Parliament by the end of the year.

Purchase Grant Scheme

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to consult on detailed proposals covering the remaining counties of England to exempt small rural settlements from the purchase grant scheme; and if he will make a statement. [35271]

Mr. Curry: In March, we issued a consultation paper on how we propose to exempt small rural settlements in England from the new purchase grant scheme. The paper set out the way we propose to implement the designation in England, and invited comments on our general approach, and on the detailed proposals for the first 15 counties and areas. In May, we issued a consultation paper that covered a further 15 counties. Comments were sought from local authorities, housing associations, rural groups and other interested parties.

We have today issued a supplement to those papers, which gives detailed proposals for the final 15 counties: Norfolk, North Yorkshire, Northamptonshire, Northumberland, Nottinghamshire, Somerset, South Yorkshire, Staffordshire, Surrey, Suffolk, Tyne and Wear, Warwickshire, West Midlands, West Sussex, West Yorkshire.

Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Copies of papers for each individual county or area, including copies of any maps needed, have also been placed in both Libraries.

Housing Investment Trusts

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ensure that housing investment trusts can benefit from the same accounting rules as other investment trusts under the Companies Act 1985. [35272]

Mr. Curry: The Under-Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, my hon. Friend the Member for Amber Valley (Mr. Oppenheim), has agreed, in principle, to extend the definition of investment companies in section 266 of the Companies Act 1985 to cover properties of the type to be held by housing investment trusts so that the same reliefs are available to those companies. As there is a need to consult on any proposal to amend the Companies Act, and to ensure that wider accounting treatment issues are considered thoroughly, it is unlikely the necessary amendment could be introduced this year. We would expect the required order to be laid before the House early in the new year.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list by group, division or other work unit the number of grades of staff working within his Department on animal welfare issues; [34301]

(2) if he will list (a) United Kingdom legislation, (b) EU legislation and (c) international treaties, conventions or other obligations concerning animal welfare for which his Department has responsibility; [34300]

(3) if he will list the animal welfare issues for which his Department has responsibility. [34299]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The animal welfare issues for which my Department are responsible include zoos, the keeping of dangerous wild animals, the ban on the use of certain methods of killing or taking of birds and wild animals, leghold traps and some aspects of the transport of endangered species.

These issues are covered by the Zoo Licensing Act 1981, the Dangerous Wild Animal Act 1976, the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and the EC Leghold Trap Regulation 1991 (EC No. 3254/91 and EC No. 1771/94). Provisions on accommodation and handling during the transport of endangered species are reflected in existing EC regulations (EC No. 3626/82 and 3418/83) which govern the implementation of the convention on international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora.

The wildlife and countryside directorate is responsible for animal welfare issues among its other duties. The grades and approximate number of the directorate's staff involved are:

Director (Grade 3): less than 1 full-time equivalent

Assistant Secretary (G5): less than 1

Principal (G7): less than 1

Higher Executive Officer: 1

Executive Officer: 1–2

Administrative Officer: Assistant: 1–2.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Employment Department Offices

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much was spent on Employment Department office refurbishment in Swansea before its sale; and what were the sale proceeds. [34483]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Alan Williams, dated 26 June 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the cost of the Employment Department office refurbishment in Swansea.

The refurbishment of one of my offices in Swansea started in February 1994. The work was essential for the following reasons;

(i) to meet our organisational requirements at that time in order to efficiently deal with the needs of the business;

(ii) to fulfil our lease obligations to maintain the standard of our estates responsibilities ie redecoration and maintenance/upgrade of the heating system;

(iii) to meet health and safety requirements by upgrading light levels to ensure compliance with the Health at Work Act.

Subsequent to these alterations taking place our operational requirements changed and, in order to meet these and to continue to improve the delivery of services to our clients, the decision was taken to fully integrate the functions undertaken at Grove House with those at my other Jobcentre in High Street.

Although the premises have not been open to the public since September 1995, the Employment Service has continued to use the premises for its business and will do so until the lease break at the end of June 1996.

By maintaining the standard of the office, the refurbishment will greatly offset any dilapidation claim the landlord may have against us at the end of our tenure in June.

There were no sale proceeds as the building is leasehold, not freehold. Disposal of our lease in June will realise savings of £42,500 rent and £20,000 rates per annum to the ES. Additional running cost savings of £10,500 per annum in respect of fuel, utilities etc, will also be achieved.

I hope this is helpful.

Employment Service

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many callers and inquiries have been handled at the Buckley Employment Service premises in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995; [34728]

(2) if she will review her decision to close the Employment Service premises in Buckley, Flintshire; [34730]

(3) if she will visit the Employment Service premises in Buckley, Flintshire; [34727]

(4) if she will meet the (a) Flintshire county council and (b) Buckley town council to discuss the future of the Employment Services premises in Buckley, Flintshire; [34729]

(5) how many Employment Service premises have been closed since 1992; and if she will make a statement. [34731]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 27 June 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your questions concerning the closure of the Buckley Jobcentre, Flintshire later this year.

In response to your question about the number of callers and enquiries that have been handled at the Buckley Employment Service (ES) premises in 1994 and 1995, I am unable to provide the precise information you ask for. Jobcentres are not required to collect this information as a matter of course, however the following information does provide a good indication of regular callers at Buckley:

The number of clients claiming benefit and signing each week averaged 300 per week for 1994 and 270 per week for 1995.

The number of job submissions each week averaged 156 per week for 1994 and 170 per week for 1995. (These figures are not necessarily in addition to the number of clients signing as many would be submitted to job vacancies on their signing day.)

Since 1992, ES has closed 37 offices nationally.

The ES always keeps its operations under review and the decision to close Buckley Jobcentre was not taken lightly. Buckley is a small town 2½ miles from Mold. Mold ESJ offers clients the full range of ES services. There is a regular bus service every 15 minutes between Buckley and Mold and other ESJs within easy reach are Wrexham (12 miles) and Shotton (6 miles). The ES can do more to help its clients through its larger offices which offer the full range of ES services than small offices which offer only a limited service. Office closures are also linked to the ES programme to bring Jobcentre and Benefit Services together under one roof, a policy now required by the ES' role in the delivery of the Jobseekers' Allowance.

In respect of your request that the Secretary of State visits the ES premises at Buckley and meets Flintshire County Council and Buckley Town Council, perhaps the most appropriate course of action would be for the District Manager, Ted Pinch and the Director for Wales, Bernard Pearce, to meet with you to discuss Employment Service provision in Buckley and Flintshire. Should you wish to contact Ted Pinch, his telephone number is 01978 203500 and Bernard Pearce can be contacted on 01222 380705.

I hope this is helpful.

All-work Tests

Mr. Alan Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the administration cost per claimant of referrals to adjudication where a doubt has arisen about availability for work, actively seeking work, or willingness to accept work; [34788]

(2) how many adjudication decisions have been made on questions of availability for work, actively seeking work and willingness to accept work, where the adjudication officer considered claims related to the application of the student regulation for part-time study; [34786]

(3) how many adjudication decisions have been made on questions of availability for work, actively seeking work and willingness to accept work, where doubts have arisen (a) from the student questionnaire "People Attending Training and Further Education Courses", (b) as a result of voluntary activity and (c) as a result of part-time employment. [34787]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 27 June 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your questions about adjudication decisions relating to unemployed people who are undertaking courses of training or further education, doing voluntary work or who are in part time employment.

Unfortunately, information is not available in the form you have requested.

Information about the number of adjudication officer decisions and opinions, is contained in a published document entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions". This provides information on all the main entitlement questions arising on claims. Copies of this document are held in the Library of the House. The latest available information relates to the quarter year and year to 31 March 1996.

However, no statistics are held specifically in relation to availability and actively seeking work decisions on claims made by people who complete student questionnaires, declare participation in voluntary work or are in part time employment.

I am unable to state the administration cost per claimant where referral to adjudication is necessary because of doubts on these questions. Information on administration costs is not broken down in this way.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobcentre Computers

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice has recently been received from the Furniture Research Establishment concerning the steps necessary to make safe the new jobseeker's allowance computer systems in jobcentres; what action her Department is taking in respect of this advice; what is the estimated cost; and if she will make a statement. [34792]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 27 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question, in the absence of the Chief Executive, about the advice received from the Furniture Industry Research Association (FIRA) concerning electrical safety, the action being taken in respect of this advice, and the estimated cost.

Following the recent accident at Barnsbury Jobcentre we have taken immediate steps to improve safety. The risk which we have to deal with arises not so much from the installation of new personal computers as from the cabling of electrical equipment generally. We have instructed staff to make visual checks of all cables which pass through or near their desks for signs of damage. We have also brought forward our regular six monthly check of electrical appliances. Costs arising from these actions will depend on the faults found, but are likely to be small.

As an additional precaution we asked FIRA for advice about the earthing of desks. FIRA are providing technical specifications for our electrical contractors to enable them to begin a programme of earth bonding desks. Initial estimates are that the programme will cost around £1.75 million. The exact figure will be available when the technical specifications have been fully costed.

Supported Employment Programme

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what changes will be made to the entry procedures for the Employment Service's supported employment programme as a result of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if she will make a statement. [35116]

Mr. Forth: We have recently completed a public consultation on the entry criteria for this programme. The consultation was announced by my hon. Friend the Minister for Disabled People in January 1995 in the publication "Ending Discrimination against Disabled People". A substantial majority of those responding were in favour of keeping the current entry criteria apart from the modifications needed to comply with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995.

Entry to the programme is currently based on registration under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944 and judgments by the Employment Service on a disabled person's capability of undertaking open employment. The Disability Discrimination Act amends the 1944 Act by introducing a new employment right and a new definition of disability. Once these apply, towards the end of 1996, registration as disabled will cease.

We have decided that the current entry criteria—that disabled people should be 30 per cent. to 80 per cent. productive relative to a non-disabled person and that they cannot otherwise obtain or retain employment on account of the severity of their disability—should continue to apply. Once registration as disabled has ceased, all disabled people entering the programme will need to comply with the definition of disability in the Disability Discrimination Act. Disabled people who were on the register on 12 January 1995 and on the date the new employment right comes into effect will be deemed to be disabled for the purposes of the Act without having to provide other evidence of disability.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans he has to review the CSA computer system; [33827]

(2) what plans he has (a) to revise and (b) to rebuild the CSA computer system. [33814]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the chief executive of the Child Support Agency to the hon. Member for Rochdale (Ms Lynne), on 20 June, Official Report, column 603.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) for what period of time the Child Support Agency is authorised to keep records of cases of former clients on its computer systems; [34313]

(2) what safeguards are applied to ensure that data held about former clients by the Child Support Agency cannot be accessed; [34312]

(3) in what circumstances data relating to former clients of the Child Support Agency is held on the Child Support Agency computer system after a case is closed; [34316]

(4) how many cases of former clients of the Child Support Agency whose cases have been closed still have records on the Child Support Agency computer system; [34314]

(5) what requirements are placed on the Child Support Agency to delete the records of former clients whose cases have been closed. [34315]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 27 June 1996:

In the absence of Miss Chant, the Chief Executive, I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Computer System (CSCS).

Under the Data Protection Act 1984 the Agency is empowered to retain information for as long as there is a business need. There are no other requirements placed on the Child Support Agency to delete records whose cases have been closed other than the Data Protection Act.

The 6th Principle of the Data Protection Act is that "Personal Data held for any purpose or purposes shall not be kept for longer than is necessary for that purpose or purposes."

All accesses to the CSCS require the input of a unique Personal Identification Device (PID) which registers the access on an Audit trail which is subject to management checks. In addition all devices use password techniques which prevent unauthorised access. Standard physical security practices are in place near all Agency terminals.

Users of the CSCS are also restricted by the system, to updating only those areas of the system which are relevant to their duties.

Data which have been archived off the CSCS cannot be retrieved through the system, but hard copy records can be obtained by authorised users.

In the case of nationally sensitive or locally sensitive cases only designate officers with a higher security profile are allowed access to that case.

At present all closed cases are retained on the CSCS. A programme to introduce archiving and weeding of data has begun and some redundant data which have been superseded is already being removed from all cases.

There are business reasons why the Agency needs to retain data for a specified period after the case is closed ie. enquiries, appeals, monitoring of cases for Secretary of State targets.

There are also circumstances where it would be necessary to retain data for a longer period. This would be applicable where "Good Cause" for not pursuing a case has been established; in such a case the Agency is not permitted under its regulations to pursue the same case in future. There are other instances where it is in the best interests of Agency clients to retain data. For example, where DNA testing has been undertaken the Agency would not wish to go over ground previously covered with a client in the event of a repeat claim.

The picture is complicated by the fact that a person may be linked to more than one assessment unit or case. Thus an assessment unit may be closed but the individual personal records may still be considered active if they are also linked to another open case. Similarly a person can legitimately leave an assessment unit, for example a non qualifying child, and their record closed but the actual assessment unit remain open and active.

There are currently approximately 650,000 closed cases on the CSCS which represents 38% of the 1.7 million cases on the system. There are approximately 753,000 personal records which are regarded as "inactive" on the computer system which represents approximately 20% of the total 3.8 million person records on the file. These personal records include records of children.

Whilst the Agency accepts the principle of removing or archiving much data from closed cases there are nevertheless important reasons to retain some evidence of legitimate clients in the event of repeat applications. It is important that such records are retained for a longer period.

I hope this is helpful.

Family Credit

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the forthcoming changes in respect of eligibility for family credit; what steps were taken to advise recipients of the changes; and what estimate he has made of the likely average impact of the changes upon single parents. [33844]

Mr. Roger Evans: From 2 July, family credit awards will terminate when the last remaining dependent child in a family leaves full-time, non-advanced education. We have written to all families who may be immediately affected and a further letter will be sent around 2 July to all such families to give information about the new rules. From 2 July, information will be included on award notices and on forms and leaflets.

Of the 287,000 lone parents who receive family credit, we estimate that under 4 per cent. will be affected by the change. The impact will depend on how many weeks of the 26-week family credit award remain when the child leaves school.

Income Support

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were disqualified from income support under the notional income rules in respect of earnings of (a) the claimant and (b) the claimant's partner in the year 1995–96. [34215]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Independent Tribunal Service will inform the Benefits Agency in writing of the outcome of the tribunal hearing in Harrow on 4 June in respect of an appeal by Miss B. D. (ref. youth training 138196D), against the withholding of income support. [34224]

Mr. Evans: The Benefits Agency will be informed of the result of the hearing during the week commencing 24 June 1996.

Child Care Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total spending on the child care allowance (a) during 1995–96 and (b) since its introduction. [34229]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is not yet available for the full financial year 1995–96, or for the expenditure on the child care disregard in housing benefit and council tax benefit. Expenditure in family credit and disability working allowance is provisionally estimated at £17.8 million between introduction of the disregard in October 1994 and February 1996. The latest date for which information is available.

Benefits

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average number of hours worked by (a) lone parents and (b) couples who claim (i) family credit, (ii) disability working allowance, (iii) housing benefit and (iv) council tax benefit. [34238]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Family credit and disability working allowance: average weekly hours worked by recipients

	Family credit	Disability working allowance
Couples	33.9	28.9
Lone parents	24.9	23.9

Note:

1. Data for family credit and disability working allowance, is for October 1995 and January 1996 respectively.
2. Figures for housing benefit and council tax benefit are not available.

TREASURY

Value Added Tax

16. Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been made to him on recent VAT receipts. [33421]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We receive many representations on VAT receipts.

Beer Duty

17. Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to bring duties on beer into line with those in other EU member states. [33423]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Any change that my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor makes to the level of beer excise duty will be a matter for his forthcoming Budget deliberations. In reaching his decisions he takes account of all relevant factors, including the rates of duty applied by our European partners.

Transfer Pricing

18. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many inquiries into transfer pricing abuses have been carried out in the last three years; and what estimate he can give of revenues recovered. [33424]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue keeps multinational companies' tax affairs under constant scrutiny and any evidence of non-compliance with the transfer pricing legislation is carefully investigated. In the last three years inquiries by the Revenue's head office international specialists generated more than £500 million additional tax. Further significant amounts of tax were generated by work in the Revenue's oil taxation office and its local office.

Public Finances

19. Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been made to him recently on the state of the United Kingdom's public finances. [33425]

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. and learned Friend has not received any such formal representations recently.

The public finances are improving steadily, with the PSBR on a clear downward trend.

Private Finance Initiative

20. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the benefits of the private finance initiative to London. [33426]

Mr. Michael Jack: Projects with a capital value of over £3.7 billion have been agreed in the last year in and around London. These include the channel tunnel rail link, which has a capital value of £3 billion; a new fleet of trains for the Northern line of the Underground, with a capital value of £400 million; the creation of 170 new housing units in Waltham Forest with a capital value of £15 million; and the Croydon tramlink deal, which has a capital value of £160 million. Many more are under consideration. Comprehensive details of small-scale projects or projects by region are not held centrally.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil servants have been given formal training on the private finance initiative; and what plans his Department has to increase awareness of the private finance initiative among all Government Departments. [34579]

Mr. Jack: Nearly 2,000 civil servants have already attended or are currently booked to attend the PFI training course announced at Budget time last year. The private finance panel hopes that between 5,000 and 10,000 will be trained in total. Government Departments, other public sector bodies and private sector organisations now run more specialised PFI courses and training of their own.

Other measures to ensure that all civil servants involved with the PFI are fully informed about it include the publication of a comprehensive handbook "Private Opportunity, Public Benefit: Progressing the Private Finance Initiative"; "Guidelines for Smoothing the Procurement Process"; and a series of case studies, the latest of which is "Report on the procurement of custodial services for the DCMF prisons at Bridgend and Fazakerley". The "Private Finance Journal", provided under contract for the private finance panel executive, publishes regular information about the initiative. Departments are increasingly developing guidance and newsletters of their own, specific to enhancing knowledge of the PFI in their own areas.

Investment

21. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase levels of investment in the United Kingdom. [33427]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Industry is expanding capacity as needed. In 1995 manufacturing investment was over 7½ per cent. up on a year earlier, and almost 15 per cent. higher than in 1993. Virtually all independent forecasters expect whole economy investment to accelerate in both 1996 and 1997.

23. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic effects of current investment levels in the United Kingdom. [33430]

Mrs. Knight: Investment in recent years has been sufficient to underpin sustained economic growth, rising most in sectors where it has been needed to prevent capacity constraints.

25. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of disincentives to business investment in the current tax systems. [33433]

Mr. Jack: The Government's on-going programme of tax reform has sought to create a climate in which businesses can thrive and invest and where individual initiative and risk taking are rewarded. Lower marginal tax rates and a stable economy are the best ways to encourage investment. The UK has the lowest main rate of corporation tax of any major industrialised country and a particularly favourable regime for small firms.

Taxation

22. Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic impacts of current levels of taxation. [33428]

Mr. Jack: The Government have sharpened work incentives for individuals by cutting the basic rate of income tax from 33 to 24 per cent., the lowest rate for 50 years. Likewise, by cutting corporation tax rates, from 42 per cent. to 24 per cent. for small business and from 52 per cent. to 33 per cent. for other businesses, we have created the conditions under which wealth can grow. GDP has risen by 35 per cent. in real terms since 1979.

Privatisation

24. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from (a) business leaders and (b) politicians overseas regarding privatisation. [33431]

Mr. Jack: My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor frequently meets business men and politicians from all over the world, and the success of the British Government's privatisation programme and the lessons it holds for other countries is often a subject of discussion at these meetings. For instance, he has recently been visited by senior Government representatives from as far afield as China, South Africa, New Zealand, the Netherlands and the state of São Paolo in Brazil.

The promotion of British expertise in privatisation and private finance was also one of the primary objectives of the Chancellor's trip to South Africa in March, during which he addressed the South Africa Foundation, a group representing 50 top South African companies.

Mansion House Speech

26. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in response to his speech at the Mansion house on 12 June. [33434]

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. and learned Friend's speech at the Mansion House was well received.

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved. [33452]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The table gives the number of reported accidents in the Treasury, Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, the Office for National Statistics, Paymaster, the Valuation Office and the Royal Mint in each of the past five years:

1992:	1,382
1993:	1,299
1994:	1,462
1995:	584[1]

[1] Data for Customs and Excise are not available for 1991 and 1995.

The Health and Safety Executive was involved on six occasions.

The Inland Revenue does not hold health and safety records centrally and could provide this information only at disproportionate cost.

Manufacturing Output

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the reasons for the change in the level of manufacturing output less food, drink and tobacco between 1989 and 1995. [34478]

Mr. Waldegrave: A detailed breakdown of the latest data on manufacturing output is shown in table 2 of the "Index of Production First Release for April 1996", which was published by the Office for National Statistics on 11 June. The Government pay close attention to all national accounts data, including those for manufacturing output, in monitoring and analysing developments and trends in the UK economy.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from organisations and individuals concerning the use of the public sector borrowing requirement as the primary instrument of fiscal control. [34431]

Mr. Waldegrave: A number of representations have been received by Treasury Ministers.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the advantages and disadvantages of using (a) the public sector borrowing requirement and (b) the general Government financial deficit as the primary fiscal control regime. [34415]

Mr. Waldegrave: The PSBR is a cash concept which covers the whole public sector. It has the benefits of continuity, comprehensiveness and timeliness of data. But the Government also monitor and publish projections of other fiscal indicators, including the GGFD.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current estimate of the public sector borrowing requirement for 1996–97. [33429]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget projection of 1996–97 PSBR was £22½ billion. An updated forecast of the PSBR will be published in the summer economic forecast on 9 July.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to reduce the public sector borrowing requirement over the next six months. [33432]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget projection of the 1996–97 was £22½ billion, a fall of £6½ billion compared with the Budget estimate of the PSBR in 1995–96. An updated forecast of the PSBR will be published in the summer economic forecast on 9 July.

Financial Management Certificate

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the submissions his Department received on a financial management certificate. [25595]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Public responses to the consultation document, "Responses to the Financial Management Certificate Consultation Document", are now available in the Libraries.

Securities and Investment Board

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the annual report of the Securities and Investments Board to be published. [35078]

Mrs. Angela Knight: A copy of the board's report, made in accordance with section 117 of the Financial Services Act 1986, was laid before Parliament today. The report covers the period from 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996. Copies are now available in the Libraries of the House.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of the cost of the measures taken to deal with the BSE crisis so far. [35122]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The latest estimates, updating those given by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the hon. Member of Northampton, North (Mr. Marlow) on 26 April at columns 321–22, are shown in the table:

Estimated cost of measures in the UK taken in response to BSE

(£ million)

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	Total cost over three years
Net cost borne by the UK	848	516	623	1,987
Net contribution from the EU	189	232	62	483
Total cost	1,037	748	685	2,470

This reflects an increase over the previous estimate of £40 million to the total cost over the three years from £2,430 million.

The table includes the following measures:

(a) the compensation and destruction arrangements for cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain.

(b) the calf slaughter premium;

(c) the package of aid for the renderers and the abattoir and cutting industries announced on 3 April and 16 April respectively;

(d) the feed recall scheme;

(e) additional running costs for the agriculture departments.

The figures for the net contribution from the EU take account of both the UK's contribution to additional EU spending and the effect of additional receipts on the UK abatement.

The figures do not include either the costs of increased beef intervention or the costs of the accelerated cattle slaughter programme, for which precise estimates are not yet available.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the effect on the public sector borrowing requirement in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the BSE crisis in United Kingdom farming, including the associated compensation measures; and if he will make a statement. [34752]

Mr. Clarke: The direct costs of BSE measures in 1996–97 will be met either from existing departmental programmes or from the contingency reserve. Spending plans for 1997–98 also contain an unallocated reserve for meeting unforeseen commitments; BSE costs in 1997–98 will be met from this reserve. Because the reserve is part of the public expenditure control total for each financial year, there is no reason to change the published forecasts of public sector borrowing in 1996–97 or 1997–98 as a consequence of BSE measures.

The estimated aggregate impact of BSE measures on gross domestic product is small, although there will be a significant impact on certain sectors of the economy. So there are not likely to be any significant indirect effects on the PSBR.

Financial Services Act

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he intends to amend the Financial Services Act 1986 as recommended by the Law Commission's report (No. 236) on fiduciary duties and regulatory rules. [35120]

Mrs. Angela Knight: At the time of the reference to the Law Commission in 1990, there was some concern about the possible mismatch between regulatory rules and common law fiduciary duties owed by firms. Structural changes of the financial markets in the mid-1980s, particularly with firms offering a wide range of financial services, increased the potential for such conflicts. This led the DTI, in April 1990, to refer the issue to the Law Commission. A parallel reference was made to the Scottish Law Commission. Since then, responsibility for this area has passed to the Treasury.

The Law Commission's report represents a thorough review, which has exposed whether the original concerns were indeed well founded and has led to an informed consideration of all the issues. As the Law Commission's report recognises, since consulting on this issue regulatory and legal developments have helped clarify the relationship between fiduciary duties and regulatory rules. Both Law Commissions recommend that legislation would be desirable to clarify the effect of Chinese wall arrangements, so as to provide statutory protection to firms which comply with regulatory rules against any claims for breach of fiduciary duties arising out of the use of such arrangements.

Consultation with relevant representatives within the financial services sector suggests that there is now sufficient confidence in the effectiveness of Chinese wall arrangements, without concern of exposure to possible legal uncertainties. Experience of operating under the financial regulatory system, with few practical problems of the sort feared in 1990 avoids the need to amend the Financial Services Act in this respect.

Abortion

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many late abortions were performed in the latest year for which figures are available in pregnancies of 24 weeks or more; if he will indicate the numbers and percentages of those abortions which were performed on each of the legal grounds; and what numbers and percentages of those abortions were performed by each of the six doctors who performed the largest number of such abortions. [34259]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 25 June 1996]: In 1993, 74 abortions were performed in England and Wales beyond 24 weeks of gestation (residents and non-residents).

The breakdown by statutory ground is:

	Number	Percentage of total abortions beyond 24 weeks
E (alone)[1]	73	99
F or G[2]	1	1
Total	74	100

Statistical information is not produced about individual doctors.

[1]to save the life of the pregnant woman, or to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman.

[2]that there is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many abortions have now been performed in total under the provisions of the Abortion Act 1967; and how many and what percentage of those abortions were performed in emergency to save the life of the mother. [34261]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The total number of legal abortions performed under the Abortion Act 1967 in England and Wales from 1968 to the end of September 1995 was 4,177,665. During this period 140 abortions—0.003 per cent. were performed in an emergency, certified as immediately necessary, to save the life of the women.

Higher Rate Tax

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of taxpayers are currently paying tax in each £10,000 band of income above the current starting point for higher rate tax. [34570]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 June 1996]: Available estimates for higher rate taxpayers in 1996–97 are given in the table. It is not possible to provide reliable estimates for bands of taxable income above £100,000.

Taxable income range[1] £ per year	Number of taxpayers (thousands)	Proportion of taxpayers
25,500–30,000	680	0.026
30,000–40,000	750	0.029
40,000–50,000	300	0.012
50,000–60,000	150	0.006

[1] Taxable income is defined as gross income for income tax purposes less those allowances and reliefs which are available at the taxpayer's marginal rate.

Mr. Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of raising the starting point for higher rate tax by an additional (a) £5,000 and (b) £10,000; and how many and what proportion of taxpayers will be affected. [34569]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 June 1996]: The full year cost of increasing the basic rate limit and the number and proportion of people affected at 1996–97 income levels are given in the table.

Increase in basic limit (£)	Cost in full year (£ billion)	Number of taxpayers affected (million)	Proportion of taxpayers affected

Venture Capital Trusts

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money has so far been invested in venture capital trusts; how many of the trusts have invested in new businesses; what percentage this represents of the total; what sums have been invested; and in how many businesses. [34120]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 June 1996]: The first 12 venture capital trusts between them have now raised over £160 million in the first few months of the scheme. It may not be possible to obtain an impression of the profile of their investments until they have published reports on the first year of their activities.

SCOTLAND

Clinical Waste

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to modify the regulations governing the importation of medical and clinical waste; and if he will make a statement; [34034]

(2) if he will list the names and locations of those companies which are licensed to import clinical waste for high temperature incineration; and if he will make a statement; [34040]

(3) which countries export clinical waste to Scotland for high temperature incineration; and if he will make a statement. [34035]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government's policies on exports and imports of waste from and to the United Kingdom are contained in the United Kingdom management plan for exports and imports of waste which came into force on 1 June 1996.

Under the plan, imports of waste for disposal are generally banned, in line with the principle of self-sufficiency in the disposal of waste. However, exceptions to this policy occur in cases of emergency or where the exporting country does not have, and cannot reasonably acquire, suitable disposal facilities of its own.

There are no licensed high temperature incinerators, as defined in the plan, in Scotland. Therefore, medical or clinical waste is not imported for high temperature incineration in Scotland.

There are no current plans to modify the regulations governing the importation of medical and clinical waste into the United Kingdom.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions have taken place with the Irish Department of Health concerning the export of clinical waste to Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [34033]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by the Under-Secretary of State, for the Environment, my hon. Friend the Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison), regarding the Government's policies on the imports and export of waste.

Shields Report

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what consultation he intends should take place with local authorities in Scotland in respect of the changes to public health departments proposed by the Shields report; [34397]

(2) pursuant to section 6.1.1 of the Shields report, what arrangements are currently in place across Scotland for communication and liaison between directors of public health and local authorities. [34447]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is no formal consultation on the Shields report or the NHS management executive letter that implements it. In their capacity as designated medical officers, directors of public health have the opportunity for regular contact with local authorities. A recent management executive letter emphasised the contribution designated medical officers could make to increased collaboration with local authorities on health matters, bearing in mind the potential the new single tier structure for a co-ordinated approach to health improvement. I would expect any proposed changes at local level in consequence of the Shields report with implications for local authorities to be the subject of discussion between the health boards and local councils concerned.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes in the numbers of those employed by health boards in Scotland he estimates will result from the implementation of the Shields report recommendations. [34446]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The most recent estimates suggest health board management and administration spending will average £13.28 per head in 1996–97. A £10 per head target therefore implies a reduction in spending of one quarter. There may well be consequent reductions in administrative staff.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment he has made of correlations between levels of health and overall expenditure by health boards in Scotland; and if he will list the available date by health board; [34448]

(2) for what reasons the committee which prepared the Shields report was not required to consider links between levels of mortality, morbidity and social and economic deprivation. [34449]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The revenue funding allocation formula for health boards is based on population adjusted for age, sex and morbidity. The data are given in Scottish health authorities revenue allocation tables published annually by the information and statistics division of the common services agency of the national health service in Scotland. The committee reviewed the roles and responsibilities of health boards. Considering links between levels of mortality, morbidity and social and economic deprivation was not therefore in the committee's remit.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list evidence on the effectiveness of different models of health promotion delivery presented to the committee preparing the Shields report evaluated by his Department; and with whom consultation took place on this part of the report; [34450]

(2) what assessment he has made of the recommendations contained in section 6.1.2 of the Shields report in respect of arm's length delivery of health promotion. [34456]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A number of health boards in Scotland already contract with NHS trusts for the delivery of health promotion services. The report suggests that all boards should consider contracting for this service element in order to evaluate the service on a more objective basis. The letter implementing the report suggests that the contract would normally be with an NHS trust, but that other models that improve local partnerships may be appropriate.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if funds for health service development will be exempted from target costs for health board management and administration of £10 per head of population set out in the Shields report. [34451]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The purpose of the £10 target is to produce additional funds for health care and developments for patients.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to section 6.1.1 of the Shields report, if directors will retain the right to independent comment and the publication of independent reports on all matters affecting the health of their local population. [34452]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Section 6.1.1 of the report makes it clear that the committee would not wish to undermine the freedom of directors of public health to make an independent report or statement about the health of the local population.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the recommendations contained in the Shields report, if health boards will be permitted to keep centrally those functions which they consider necessary to protect and promote public health. [34453]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The report makes it clear that protecting and promoting public health is a key responsibility of health boards. However, it is not necessary for all of the services to be provided by boards themselves.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) for what reason the Shields report committee was not required to analyse variations in expenditure on management and administration between health boards in Scotland; and to what extent such analysis was required to be carried out on the basis of individual functions or departments across health boards in Scotland; [34454]

(2) for what reason the Shields report committee was not required to analyse variations in expenditure between health boards in Scotland; and to what extent analysis was required to be carried out on the basis of individual functions or departments. [34455]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Shields committee was given figures showing that the variation in management and administration was from £10.46 per head to £18.82 a head in mainland health boards based on their 1994–95 annual accounts. Health boards themselves have analysed the variation in costs and numbers of staff across 10 functions. This work was aided by the Accounts Commission.

Forestry Commission (Land Sales)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much money has been raised from the sale of Forestry Commission woodland in each year since 1981; [33808]

(2) what is the percentage of Forestry Commission woodland sold with public access protected (a) from 1981 to the latest available date and (b) from 1989 to the latest available date; [33805]

(3) if he will list all Forestry Commission woodlands currently for sale, and indicate for each one which English or Welsh county or Scottish region it falls in; and if an access agreement has been made with the local authority guaranteeing continuing public access; [33806]

(4) how many Forestry Commission woodlands have been sold in each year since 1981, indicating for each year (a) the number sold without access to the public protected and (b) the number sold with access to the public protected. [33804]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 20 June 1996]: The subjects of the questions relate to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Gordon Cowie, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Gordon M. Cowie to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 27 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Scotland has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of woodlands sold, the money received from their sale, the percentage sold with public access protected and the woodlands currently for sale.

In the early years of the disposal programme no distinction was made between sales of woodland and sales of other land and properties and it is not possible to give you a breakdown of how much money has been raised specifically from the sale of Forestry Commission woodland areas for each year since 1981. However, we do know the proceeds from the sales of all our properties (including woodland areas) by year and this is shown below:-

1982	6.9
1983	14.6
1984	23.6
1985	22.1
1986	17.0
1987	14.7
1988	13.1
1989	12.4
1990	13.0
1991	12.0
1992	14.5
1993	9.9
1994	17.4

You asked for information about public access from 1981 to 1989 to the latest available date. I attach a list of all woodlands sold with completed public access agreements. You asked for information from 1981 but the arrangements for public access agreements were only introduced in October 1991 and the list, therefore, only covers disposals since then. You will see that at 31 March 1996, there had been 48 sales of woodland with completed agreements totalling some 1724 hectares. In addition, there have been 13 sponsored sales to the local authority or other nominated body totalling 2644 hectares have been sold with public access protected. During the same period, there were 679 other sales totalling 35578 hectares. Sales with protected access comprised 8% of the number and 7% of the area sold.

You also asked for information about Forestry Commission woodlands currently for sale. I attach a list showing all the woodlands currently on the market with the details you have asked for and those with a continued public access (CPA) agreement being asterisked.

You asked about the number of woodlands sold since 1981 and whether they were sold with public access protected. Lists of all Forestry Commission disposals for the years 1981–1995 are placed yearly in the Library of the House of Commons and I enclose copies of these for your use. They contain details of all sales of Forestry Commission land. The numbers of sales with access to the public protected are given above.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures are being taken to improve public access in Forestry Commission land which (a) has already been sold off and (b) may be sold in the future; and what further options are currently under consideration. [33807]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 20 June 1996]: We encourage private owners to allow public access to their woodlands, irrespective of whether the woodlands were previously owned by the Forestry Commission. We also provide grants to help private owners provide facilities for public recreation.

The Forestry Commission encourages public access to all its woodlands, subject only to legal constraints or considerations of safety, irrespective of whether the woodlands may be sold in the future. The commission is now increasing and enhancing its recreation facilities for day visitors; promoting access on foot by identifying its forests on Ordnance Survey maps and by placing distinctive "Walkers Welcome Here" badges at the entrances to forests; and encouraging local residents and visitors to take advantage of the many leisure activities that are possible in its woodlands.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the occasions on which a Minister from his Department has made policy statements about continued public access to forests when Forestry Commission land is sold off, indicating the name of the Minister and the date and context of the statement in each case. [33803]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 20 June 1996]: The information is as follows:

16 June 1989, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in a statement to the House of Commons about the Government's future plans for the disposal of Forestry Commission land;

21 November 1990, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in a statement to the House of Commons about continued public access to woodlands disposed of by the Forestry Commission;

September 1991, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in "Forestry Policy for Great Britain", published by the Forestry Commission;

19 July 1994, by right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in a statement to the House of Commons about the Government's conclusions from the forestry review;

August 1994, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in "Our Forests: The Way Ahead", (Cm 2644); 26 March 1996, by me in a statement to the House of Commons setting out the revised procedures for protecting continued public access.

DEFENCE

Customer Charters

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the customer charters which are currently in use within his Department and its executive agencies and (b) the charters which have been withdrawn. [32830]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department keeps no central record of the customer charters which are currently in use. Many areas of the Ministry of Defence have drawn up statements of the service standards which they have committed themselves to provide to internal or external customers as appropriate. Of the Ministry of Defence's agencies, the Pay and Personnel Agency and the Meteorological Office have customer charters. The Defence Secondary Care Agency and the Queen Victoria School abide by the national patient's charter and the Scottish parents charter, respectively. None of the Department's agencies' customer charters has been withdrawn.

Porton Down

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons files with the classmarks WO 188/473–4, WO 188/652 and WO 188/656 recorded at the Public Record Office concerning the work of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down are currently retained by his Department; and if he will consider opening them under the open government initiative. [34467]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Arrangements are being made to review the papers listed at the Public Record Office under references WO 188/473–4, WO 188/652 and WO 188/656 to establish whether release into the public domain is now possible. I will write to the hon. Member on completion of the review process.

Property Sales

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the amount of revenue received by his Department from the sale of ex-military accommodation in the United Kingdom during 1995. [34632]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The receipts from the disposal of married quarters are not recorded separately from the receipts from the sale of other property and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Overall disposal receipts for financial year 1995–96 were £63.4 million.

Decimomannu

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the last RAF deployments to Decimomannu will take place; what range facilities will be used for the training currently undertaken at Decimomannu; and what is the estimated saving from ceasing to use Decimomannu. [34642]

Mr. Soames: It is currently envisaged that RAF flying will cease at Decimomannu in autumn 1997. Some of the training currently undertaken there will be transferred to existing ranges in the UK and Germany, where spare capacity exists. It is expected that the decision to withdraw from Decimomannu will save some £8 million to £10 million per annum.

RAF Deployment (Arizona)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the dates of the next scheduled RAF deployment to Marine Corps air station Yuma, Arizona. [34643]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 12 March 1996, Official Report, column 509.

Procurement Costs

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list his Department's 25 most expensive current procurement projects; what was the original estimated cost of each of these projects at today's prices; what is the current estimated final cost of each of the projects; and if he will list the delays in the in-service dates of these projects. [33999]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department's most recent annual "Major Projects Report", MPR95, to the Committee of Public Accounts, lists the current 25 most expensive projects and details the original estimated cost, the current cost estimate and the delays in the in-service dates. A copy of this document is in the Library of the House.

Army Equipment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the trends in the availability of Warrior vehicles, Challenger tanks and the multiple-launch rocket system, as indicated by the Army's battlefield equipment reliability returns, have improved over the past three years; and if he will make a statement. [34460]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The battlefield equipment reliability return system was introduced during 1994 and BERR data are not therefore available for the whole period. However, the figures obtained from Army equipment availability reporting systems indicate that availability rates for Warrior and Challenger 1 have improved considerably over the past three years. Both these vehicles have consistently achieved availability rates in excess of 90 per cent. when deployed to Bosnia. The multiple launch rocket system fleet was undergoing a major base modification programme during 1994–95, which meant that availability rates for this equipment fell. Although two of the three MLRS regiments have undertaken operational tours in Northern Ireland during 1994–95, there has been a slight improvement in MLRS availability over the last year.

Roll on/Roll off Ferries

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the purchase by his Department of two roll on/roll off ferries; and if he will state the nationality of the crews to be deployed on these ferries. [34457]

Mr. Arbuthnot: A number of possible enhancements to the civil and military strategic lift available to the Joint Rapid Development Force have been examined. In the short term, the intention is to issue an invitation to tender and take subsequent contract action to charter one roll on/roll off ship, for transporting lead elements of the JRDF.

The longer-term option, for the second of the two vessels required, include new build, the purchase or lease of an existing vessel and the involvement of the private finance initiative.

Subject to the outcome of tender evaluation, the options for crew would be either Royal Fleet Auxiliary or nationals from countries in NATO or western Europe.

Royal Navy (Fuel)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much feel was allocated to the surface flotilla in 1995–96; and how much is planned for 1996–97. [34458]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is shown in the table, in cubic metres. The figures for 1995–96 show the quantity of fuel procured for issue to the surface flotilla. The figure for marine gas oil is approximate because its use is not centrally controlled after budgets have been agreed. The figures for 1996–97 reflect current plans; actual amounts will be governed by operational circumstances during the year.

	FY 1995–96	FY 1996–97
Dieso F76[1]	209,000	225,000
Marine gas oil	20,000	33,000

[1] Fuel produced by refineries to specific NATO standards.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much fuel was purchased for allocation to the Royal Navy fleet in 1992–93. [34459]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Total quantities of fuel purchased in 1992–93 are shown in the table. These include fuel purchased for shore establishments and vessels other than Her Majesty's ships, as well as those for allocation to the fleet. Segregation of quantities for allocation to the Royal Navy fleet alone could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

Dieso F76[1]: 596,000 cu m

Avcat F44[1]: 46,000 cu m

Marine Gas Oil[2]: 35,000 cu m

[1] These fuels are produced by refineries to specific NATO standards.

[2] Commercially supplied fuel for ships.

Correspondence

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to answer the correspondence he has received from the hon. Member for Dunfermline, West concerning the sale of his property in Rosyth to the Home housing association. [34795]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence wrote to the hon. Member today.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has to ensure that each legislative measure put forward by his Department contains a compliance cost assessment (a) relating to small firms and (b) in respect of which small firms have been consulted. [34142]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding reply 26 June 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on Wednesday 26 June 1996, Official Report, column 119.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Licensing Authority

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date he last attended a meeting in his role as a member of the Licensing Authority. [33849]

Mr. Moss: The Licensing Authority does not meet to consider its functions under the Medicines Act 1968. There is no statutory requirement for such meetings to be held.

Pacific Institute

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what expenditure has been incurred by each department in respect of courses delivered by the Pacific Institute. [34088]

Sir John Wheeler: Expenditure incurred by the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office in respect of courses delivered by the Pacific Institute is:

Department of Environment: £90,000.

The DOE also has a contract with the institute for the supply of the institute's investment in excellence programme to its staff with delivery being undertaken by the Department's trainers over three financial years. The contract is formulated on a per capita basis for some 8,500 staff and it is estimated will cost in the region of £750,000. In addition, £11,000 has been provided through the Making Belfast Work initiative to enable a version of the investment in excellence programme to be made available to disadvantaged groups.

Department of Finance and Personnel: £4,200.

Department of Economic Development: £12,194.

The Departments of Agriculture, Education, Health and Social Services and the Northern Ireland Office have not incurred any expenditure in respect of the Pacific Institute.

Citybus and Ulsterbus

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cars are currently provided to managers to service their work who are employed by Citybus and Ulsterbus; and what is the cost of the provision of private mileage in respect of cars provided to managers in Citybus and Ulsterbus. [34072]

Mr. Moss: Currently, 40 managers employed by Citybus and Ulsterbus are provided with cars. Information on the cost of private mileage is not readily available.

De Lorean Case

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the total legal fees to date incurred in the Government's lawsuit against Arthur Andersen and Co. in the De Lorean case. [34565]

Mr. Ancram: The amount of legal fees incurred in the Government's action against Arthur Andersen and Co. in the De Lorean case is a matter between the Government and their lawyers. Disclosure while the legal action continues would not be in the public interest.

Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to publish revised codes of practice prepared under article 65 of the Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989, and when he intends to publish a code of practice on tape-recording of interviews under article 60 of the same order. [35079]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend has today laid before both Houses draft codes of practice prepared under articles 60 and 65 of the Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 with the intention of making an order to bring the codes into operation from midnight on 28 July 1996. The drafts were prepared following wide consultation last year. They cover the exercise of stop and search powers and the searching of premises and in regard to the treatment, questioning and identification of suspects by police. A draft code of practice on the tape-recording of interviews has also been included with the revised codes laid today.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for further changes to the administration of the Child Support Agency. [35204]

Mr. Moss: I am pleased to announce that a new Child Support Agency compensation scheme has been introduced in Northern Ireland following its introduction in Great Britain.

The scheme includes a provision to make compensation payments for delays in issuing maintenance application forms, MAFs, which are issued to the parent with care, and maintenance enquiry forms, MEFs, which are issued to the absent parent.

Where the assessment is completed before 1 April 1996, compensation will be considered where a delay exceeding three months, for which the agency is culpable, and which leads to a loss of opportunity to receive child maintenance which would otherwise be received, occurs. Where the assessment is completed on or after 1 April 1996, however, payments will be made if the delay exceeds one month, unless the agency needs to make further inquiries before issuing a MEF, when the delay period will be two months. The respective delays in cases where the assessment replaces an existing court order are six months, two months and four months.

Additionally, a new type of consolatory payment will be introduced. In cases where the agency is culpable of sending a MEF to a person who is not the parent of the child, or children, in question, that person will be entitled to a consolatory payment of £100 to compensate for the upset and inconvenience caused by this error. This new payment will apply where the MEF is issued on or after 1 April 1996.

These changes build on the existing arrangements which cover other losses incurred as a result of maladministration. They should ensure that compensation reaches those who do not receive an acceptable level of service in this area from the agency. The new arrangements mean the Child Support Agency now has a compensation scheme which has been designed in the light of experience to meet the special circumstances of its responsibilities.

Prison Service

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Northern Ireland Prison Service intends to publish its 1996 corporate and business plan; and what performance targets have been set for 1996–97. [35205]

Sir John Wheeler: The Northern Ireland Prison Service's 1996 corporate and business plan was published today. For 1996–97, the following key performance targets have been set:

1. To ensure 100 per cent. security for prisoners in high and top-risk categories; and to ensure at least 99.5 per cent. security of prisoners in medium and low risk categories.

2. To ensure that the number of significant breaches does not exceed 7.9 per 100 prisoners.

3. To increase the proportion of prisoner places with access to sanitation at all times of the day and night to 100 per cent.

4. To achieve an average 10 per cent. improvement in constructive activity hours.

5. To conduct a customer satisfaction survey of visitors in each establishment; and to complete an extension to the visitors centre at Her Majesty's prison, Maghaberry.

6. To extend eligibility for sentence planning to life sentence prisoners and to ensure that at least 50 per cent. of all eligible prisoners have a sentence plan and that all new committals who are eligible and who want a sentence plan will have one within three months of the date of committal.

7. To ensure that the average cost per prisoner place does not exceed £76,329.

8. To achieve an average of five days' training per member of staff.

Higher Education Expenditure

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list public expenditure on higher education in Northern Ireland, including public expenditure on student maintenance, in (a) cash terms, (b) real terms and (c) expressed as a percentage of United Kingdom gross domestic product, for the financial years from 1989–90 to 1998–99; [34093]

(2) if he will list public expenditure on higher education in Northern Ireland, excluding public expenditure on student maintenance, in (a) cash terms, (b) real terms and (c) expressed as a percentage of United Kingdom gross domestic product for the financial years from 1989–90 to 1998–99. [34094]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 26 June 1996]: Public expenditure on higher education in Northern Ireland for the financial years 1989–90 to 1998–99 is as follows:

Financial year	Higher education expenditure excluding student maintenance (£ million)		Higher education expenditure including student maintenance (£ million)
	Cash terms	Real terms	Cash terms	Real terms
1989–90	102	128	155	194

1998–99	127	115	263	238
As percentage of UK GDP	0.015	—	0.031	—

1. Student maintenance expenditure has been taken to include all student support expenditure including tuition fees and loans.
2. Financial year figures for 1989–90 to 1995–96 are actual out-turn, figures for 1996–97 to 1998–99 are planning figures.
3. Real term figures are calculated at 1994–95 prices.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that injured cattle are given priority in abattoirs during the bovine spongiform encephalopathy culling programme. [34107]

Mrs. Browning: One of the key principles of the allocation of slaughtering to abattoirs under the over-30-month slaughter scheme is that the slaughter of casualty animals should be given priority. Special arrangements have therefore been made for the handling of such animals. Cattle which are unfit to travel or injured can be slaughtered on-farm by licensed slaughtermen and subsequently transported to a designated slaughterhouse on a dedicated day or direct to an approved incinerator for disposal. A freephone service provides farmers with a single contact point to arrange for the efficient and humane slaughter of casualty animals.

Ruminant Protein Feed Ban

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what agency had responsibility for policing the ruminant protein feed ban introduced in 1988. [34432]

Mrs. Browning: The state veterinary service and local authorities are jointly responsible for policing the 1988 ruminant protein feed ban in ruminant feed and subsequent legislation.

Cod Prices

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the wholesale and retail price of cod for each quarter period in the past two years. [34335]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is shown in the table. The average retail prices are for fresh cod fillets. The available data for first-hand selling prices relate to average landed values for whole fish.

Period	Retail price (p/kg)	Average landed value (p/kg)
1994
Quarter 2	582	95
Quarter 3	584	98
Quarter 4	577	112
1995
Quarter 1	549	95
Quarter 2	555	83
Quarter 3	551	87
Quarter 4	555	97
1996
Quarter 1	[1]451	89

[1] Not comparable with earlier quarters because of changes in specification.

1. The average retail prices are based on price information used by the Office of National Statistics in compiling the Retail Prices Index.
2. Landed prices throughout this table are based on realisations for first hand sales of fish to all outlets, i.e. for human consumption and also for other uses such as fish meal and animal feedingstuffs. The average value is based on the total landings by the UK fleet, i.e. landings by UK vessels into both the UK and abroad.

Slaughterhouse, Nuneaton

Mr. Olner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of the closed slaughterhouse situated in Nuneaton. [34407]

Mrs. Browning: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the premises of ABP Ltd. The Abattoir, Saint Mary's road, Nuneaton. These premises are licensed under the Fresh Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995. Decisions about its future are a commercial matter for the company.

Beef Ban

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on the assumption that the United Kingdom fulfils all its obligations and commitments agreed at Florence, when he expects the beef ban to be lifted in its entirety. [34741]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made by the Prime Minister on 24 June, Official Report, column 21, on the outcome of the European Council, Florence.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans next to publish a report on bovine spongiform encephalopathy. [35203]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A further report on BSE in Great Britain will be placed in the Library of the House on Monday 1 July. Copies will also be made available at the royal show.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure the safe disposal of fleshings from the hide of BSE cull cattle; and if he will make a statement. [33649]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The whole bodies, including the hides and fleshings, of cattle confirmed or suspected of having BSE are destroyed.

Fleshings and trimmings from hides of other cattle aged over 30 months must be stained with tartrazine, kept separate from other by-products and removed in a sealed container to either an officially approved rendering plant or an incinerator for destruction.

Quarantine

Mr. Soley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to change the quarantine rules for pets coming to Britain from (a) Australia and (b) other countries. [30252]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 21 May 1996]: The Government have no plans to change the current import regulations for pet animals entering the UK.

Slaughtered Cattle

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle were slaughtered in the United Kingdom under the 30-month scheme in the weeks beginning (a) 6 May and (b) 13 May. [32453]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 12 June 1996]: The number of cattle slaughtered under the scheme for the weeks in question was (a) 5,873 and (b) 21,260.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) United Kingdom legislation, (b) EU legislation and (c) international treaties, conventions or other obligations concerning animal welfare for which his Department has responsibility. [34294]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by group, division or other work unit the number of grades of staff working within his Department on animal welfare issues. [34295]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The number of posts complemented in the Ministry's animal welfare division and welfare at slaughter section and the associated sections of veterinary staff based at Ministry headquarters is as follows:

	Number
Grade 5	1.5
Personal Sec	1.5
G7	4
SEO	3.75
HEO(D)	2
HEO	4.25
EO	5.55
AO	5.5
AA	7.5
Typist	0.8
Veterinary Advisers	2.5
Livestock Transport Adviser	1

For the veterinary field service, analysis of work recording data for 1995–96 show that the following full-time equivalent staff years were spent on animal welfare by broad grade band:

	Staff years
Veterinary grades (GB)	49.0
Technical grades (GB)	11.5
Administrative grades (England)	5.4
Total	66.9

The above figures do not include time spent by the Veterinary Laboratory Agency, the Meat Hygiene Service or ADAS on welfare matters, or the time of other officers of the Ministry—senior officials, lawyers, press officers and others—who spend part of their time on animal welfare.

EU Agriculture Council

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Luxembourg on 24 to 26 June; and if he will make a statement. [35202]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I represented the United Kingdom at this Council, accompanied by my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland. Following the decision by Heads of Government in Florence to increase the amount of financial aid for EU beef farmers affected by the current crisis, the Council unanimously allocated 850 mecu among member states for urgent income support measures. Of this, I secured some £112 million for UK farmers, which, at about 15.5 per cent. of the total sum, compares favourably with our 13.8 per cent. share of the EU beef cattle herd.

The Council discussed in detail the Commission's proposals to set CAP prices for 1996–97 and to reform the EU fruit and vegetable regimes. It reached no conclusion on these dossiers and will resume discussion on them at its July meeting. However, in order to avoid a legal hiatus, the Council unanimously adopted five regulations setting prices at the same level as currently apply, in sectors where regulations are due to expire on 30 June.

At my request, the Agriculture Commissioner undertook an urgent review of the arrangements applying to malt export refunds and agreed to make appropriate proposals in time for the 1996–97 export season to ensure stability and confidence in this important sector, taking account of the need for market balance and the EU's international commitments.

I pressed the Commission and incoming presidency for early progress on the proposals to improve the welfare of veal calves. I also supported a German request for urgent steps to be taken on the welfare of hens in battery cages.

The Council adopted by qualified majority (Germany and Sweden voting against) a proposal concerning the financing of veterinary inspections. It adopted by qualified majority, with Germany and Greece opposing, a proposal to reduce the entry price relating to imports of sour cherries. The Council also appointed Dr. Bart Kiewiet as President of the Community Plant Variety Office.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 1 July 1996

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Performance Assessment

Mr. Spearing: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, to what extent the Commission has (a) encouraged and (b) permitted competitive performance assessment (i) within Departments of the House and (ii) between their respective employees. [34670]

Mr. Beith: (a) Performance-related pay was introduced several years ago for staff in the non-industrial grades in the civil service and the Commission approved the introduction of similar arrangements for appropriate groups of staff in the House in order to keep "broadly in line" with the civil service as required by the House of Commons (Administration) Act 1978.

(b) Performance pay in the House takes two different forms, depending upon the grade of the post. Competitive performance assessment exists for staff in grade 7 and above. Pay increase are dependent upon the box marks awarded in the staff annual report and the competitive element arises because the performance awards are paid from a performance budget, usually equal to 2 per cent. of the pay bill. For staff in grade 8 and below, the competitive element does not exist because performance awards, again dependent upon annual report box marks, are made in accordance with a progression chart without regard to a predetermined budget.

(i) The performance pay budgets are set on a House-wide basis for each of the grades at grade 7 and above, rather than by Department. The element of competition is therefore House-wide.

(ii) There is competition between individual members of staff at a particular grade level, at grade 7 and above.

Parliamentary Groups Inquiry

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee when he expects the Committee to conclude its inquiry into all-party and parliamentary groups; and if he will make a statement. [35212]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I am pleased to advise my hon. Friend that at its meeting on 18 June, the Administration Committee agreed its report on all-party and parliamentary groups. The Committee makes several recommendations which, if approved by the House, would mean that the current written undertaking given by such groups seeking registration would be amended significantly to remove any existing imprecisions, and to be otherwise tightened up. Hon. Members may obtain copies of the report, HC (1995–96)494, from the Vote Office.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Launch Aid

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to review the take-up and effectiveness of launch aid; and if he will make a statement. [34998]

Mr. Eggar: My Department already reviews regularly the returns from previous launch aid contracts.

EU Research Programme

Mr. Randall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the research projects in Britain which have been financed in whole or in part by the European Union's third research framework programme. [34948]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Full information on research projects funded in individual member states by the European Union's third framework programme for research and technological development, which ran from 1990 to 1994, is held only by the European Commission. It is not distributed to member states. UK researchers have, however, participated vigorously in the EU's framework programmes. Commission statistics show that 2,337 UK research teams participated in projects funded under the third framework—more than in any other member state. The indications are that UK researchers are continuing to participate strongly in the fourth framework programme, which runs from 1994 to 1998.

European Funding

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on progress in respect of the Barmac N166 site objective 1 application. [34833]

Mr. Eggar: The approval of the European Commission is required under the terms of the seventh shipbuilding directive for public investment in Barmac's project as presently constituted.

Since the end of February, there have been a number of discussions and meetings between the company, officials of the Scottish Office and those of my shipbuilding unit and oil and gas project supplies office. An informal meeting was held on 13 June between those DTI officials and those of the European Commission's directorate general IV responsible for interpreting and enforcing the seventh shipbuilding directive, at which the Commission asked for clarification of certain issues before approval of the grant could be considered.

A further meeting was held between the company and my officials on 24 June to review the progress of its application, the information requested by the Commission and the options open to Barmac.

EU Internal Market

Mr. Merchant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what decisions were taken at the EU ministerial Council on the internal market on 28 May; and what matters were voted upon. [35113]

Mr. Oppenheim: The right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the deputy UK permanent representative and I represented the UK at the Internal Market Council in Brussels on 28 May.

The Council reached common position by qualified majority voting on the sweeteners directive—Germany and Sweden opposed. The Council also reached unanimous political agreement on the common position on the directive on temporary authorisations for foodstuffs. Common positions on comparative and misleading advertising, exchange of information on measuring air pollution, monitoring of waste and protection of passengers in frontal collisions were agreed by A point procedure.

In accordance with UK non-co-operation in EU business, we blocked four measures requiring unanimity: two Council resolutions—administrative co-operation and legislative simplification in the internal market; a set of Council conclusions, accounting strategy; and an A point, Council decision on implementation of a Community action programme to strengthen the competitiveness of European industry.

Deregulation (Weights and Measures) Order 1996

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated saving to business from the Deregulation (Weights and Measures) Order 1996. [34678]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The draft order contains three proposals to reduce the burdens on business:

verification of weighing or measuring equipment by manufacturers and others;

third party testing of equipment;

pre-test stamping of equipment.

The total savings will depend on how many businesses take up these options. Assuming take-up by about half of the businesses that already have equipment verified, it is estimated that businesses might save £4.3 million per annum in fees formerly paid to trading standards officers, to which can be added savings in businesses' indirect costs less the cost of operating one or other of the new options.

Radiation Illness

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment the Clifford Chance report on nuclear privatisations made of the number of workers likely to pursue damages claims for radiation-induced illness in the years (a) 1998, (b) 1999 and (c) 2000; and what was the estimated cost of meeting these claims. [34327]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 27 June 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him during the debate on 18 June, Official Report, column 780.

It is inevitable that some of those affected by radiation-induced illnesses, such as cancer, will work in the nuclear industry, but it is scientifically impossible to distinguish between a radiation induced cancer and a naturally occurring one.

ENVIRONMENT

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the constituencies he has visited in the past three months on official business and the constituencies he intends to visit in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [34356]

Mr. Gummer: During the past three months, I have visited:

Battersea
Brighton, Pavilion
Ipswich
Coventry, South-East
Holborn and St. Pancras
Dorset, West
Guildford
Spelthorne
Rutland and Melton
Sheffield, Attercliffe
Barnsley, East
Doncaster, Central
Brentford and Isleworth
Twickenham
Northavon
Milton Keynes—North-East
Birmingham—Selly Oak
Brighton, Kempton
Hove
Braintree
Ludlow
City of London and Westminster
Cambridge
Chichester
Rushcliffe
Sheffield, Central
Sheffield, Brightside
Don Valley
Kensington
Suffolk, Central Salisbury
Milton Keynes, South-West
Birmingham, Small Heath

I have a number of visits planned over the next three months, but it is not my policy to make public details of my forward diary.

Rendering Plants

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many animal rendering plants there are in Britain; what are the procedures for the treatment of their effluent; how many discharge their effluent into the domestic sewerage system; and how many spray their effluent on to agricultural land. [34509]

Mr. Clappison: There are 36 rendering plants in Great Britain, authorised under the Animal By-Products Order 1992. Treatment of effluent will normally include the removal of solids and will reflect conditions in trade effluent consents issued by sewerage undertakers for discharges to sewer, or conditions in consents from the Environment Agency for discharges direct to receiving waters. No central records of the number of rendering plants discharging effluent to sewer, or spraying it on agricultural land, are held by my Department or the Environment Agency.

Energy Saving Trust

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what mechanisms exist to reallocate money from the Energy Saving Trust to the home energy efficiency scheme. [34666]

Mr. Clappison: Uncommitted resources may be redeployed between the different parts of my Department's environment protection programme in accordance with the Government's priorities.

Mr. Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what Government funding has been made available to the Energy Saving Trust in the current financial year; what proportion of this funding has been committed to specific programmes; and what estimates he has made of the trust's actual expenditure during the period. [34667]

Mr. Clappison: The Government will make up to £25 million available to the Energy Saving Trust in 1996–97. More than 95 per cent. of this is for specific projects within a programme of work that has been agreed with the trust, the remainder covers the trust's management and administration costs. It is too early yet to estimate the outturn expenditure.

Waste Disposal

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received opposing the implementation of a tax on waste disposal. [34587]

Mr. Clappison: The consultation paper setting out the Government's proposals for the introduction of a new tax on the disposal of waste to landfill was published on 21 March 1995 by seven Government Departments, including the Department of the Environment. Of the 720 responses that were received, 166 opposed the introduction of the tax.

Although this Department has received further representations about the introduction of the landfill tax, it keeps no central record of the number of representations that have been submitted.

Castle Cement

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitoring of plume grounding at Castle Cement in Clitheroe the Environment Agency has carried out since the earlier testing of air quality by the National Physical Laboratory. [34738]

Mr. Clappison: Observations of the plumes are made on a regular basis by Environment Agency inspectors. However, the agency does not consider that further monitoring would provide any additional useful information, since the monitoring carried out by the National Physical Laboratory during August and September 1995, using a mobile laboratory and differential scanning lidar, provided sufficient information for the Environment Agency to evaluate the position and to determine appropriate action. As a result, Castle Cement was required to submit proposals to the Environment Agency to resolve the problem of plume grounding, and these proposals are required to be implemented by 31 December 1996. Castle Cement has appealed to the Secretary of State for the Environment against the implementation time scale.

Homelessness

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money was given to each London borough council in revenue support grants settlement in relation to homelessness in the current financial year. [34594]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is not possible to specify a portion of revenue support grant—RSG—for revenue expenditure on homelessness because RSG is not hypothecated to particular services.

Energy Efficiency Voucher Scheme

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has completed the assessment of his Department's energy efficiency voucher scheme; what has been the total cost to his Department of this initiative; how many householders have installed practical energy efficiency measures benefiting from discounts offered under the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [34865]

Mr. Clappison: The assessment is not complete, and I can not add to the answer given to the hon. Member on Wednesday 22 May, Official Report, columns 222–23.

Community Charge

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of community charge still outstanding and owed to local authorities; and how much has been written off. [34858]

Sir Paul Beresford: The latest information relates to 31 March 1995. As at that date, we estimate that community charge arrears totalled £1,200 million, and write-offs totalled £430 million.

Albert Dock, Merseyside

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations have been made to the Government office on Merseyside by the Albert dock residents association concerning its lease when the Merseyside development corporation is wound up. [34461]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government office for Merseyside has received three letters during the past two years from the Albert dock residents association concerning that lease and other issues.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many residents have had court proceedings taken against them by the Albert Dock company for leasing their apartment between 1 January 1989 and 1 January 1995. [34384]

Sir Paul Beresford: This is a confidential matter between the Albert Dock Company and each and every occupier, and I am unable to provide this information.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the clawback clauses included in the terms of the sale of the leases of properties by (a) the Albert Dock Company, (b) Barratt and (c) other companies within the Merseyside development corporation. [34487]

Sir Paul Beresford: The detailed terms of each and every sub-disposal by the Albert Dock Company, Barratt and, indeed, any other developer within the corporation's area is really a matter of negotiation between a purchaser of an interest and the seller of that interest. It is a confidential matter, and I am unable to provide the information required.

National Rivers Authority

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of the National Rivers Authority's receipts from water abstraction licensing and changes in each year of its operation. [34845]

Mr. Clappison: The receipts from water abstraction licensing and charges generated by the National Rivers Authority in each of the years of its operation are set out in the table.

National Rivers Authority: Income from water abstraction licensing and charges 1989–90 to 1995–96

	£ million
1989–90	79.2
1990–91	58.3
1991–92	64.6
1992–93	77.0
1993–94	77.3
1994–95	64.7
1995–96	80.3

Abattoirs

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what research he has evaluated as to the size of filter pore needed to prevent possible contamination of potable water from abattoir discharges; [34776]

(2) what information he has collated as to how many water companies are requiring abattoirs involved in the national BSE cull to provide fine filter systems; [34777]

(3) what is his policy with regard to the provision of fine filter systems at abattoirs dealing with cattle from the national BSE cull; and if he will make a statement. [34778]

Mr. Clappison: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee has advised that filtration systems in abattoirs that are capable of removing particulate matter from effluent are adequate to prevent the infective agent being carried into the aquatic environment. The Environment Agency and water companies, who have statutory responsibilities for authorising discharges from abattoirs, ensure that the required standards are applied at relevant abattoirs. In addition, waste water receives further treatment at sewage treatment works. Natural processes within catchment areas and drinking water treatment processes form a further multiple barrier providing adequate protection for drinking water supplies.

Water Abstraction

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the income from water abstraction licensing and changes came from (a) water undertakers, (b) industrial concerns and (c) private individuals last year. [34846]

Mr. Clappison: Last year—1995–96—87 per cent. of the income from water abstraction licensing and charges came from the water undertakers. Industrial concerns and private individuals accounted for the remaining 13 per cent. The Environment Agency does not keep central records enabling it to distinguish between the last two categories.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new licences for water abstraction have been granted in each year since 1989 and in 1996 to date. [34847]

Mr. Clappison: The total number of new licence applications determined each year in England and Wales since March 1989 are as follows:

Year (April to March)	Licences determined
1989–90	1,041
1990–91	1,599
1991–92	1,781
1992–93	1,849
1993–94	1,489
1994–95	1,313
1995–96	1,339
1996–97 to date	399

These determinations include those of applications for impoundment. Records of applications granted are not kept centrally.

Torbay Ring Road

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish the findings of the inspector's report on state 3/4 of the Torbay ring road; and if he will make a statement. [35128]

Sir Paul Beresford: The public local inquiry into this called in application closed on 10 June 1996, after 32 days sitting. Details of the expected time scale for announcing the decision will be published when the inspector's report is received by the Government officer for the south-west later this year.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his plans for special grants to local authorities following the Court of Appeal's judgment on 21 June in respect of regulations withdrawing benefits from asylum seekers. [35447]

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security announced on 24 June that the Government intend to amend the Asylum and Immigration Bill so as to exclude from eligibility for benefit certain asylum seekers and certain other persons from abroad. Other provisions in the Bill would make similar changes to eligibility for assistance under the homelessness legislation at about the same time as the benefit rules are changed. Any remaining costs to local housing authorities should be minimal.

Because housing benefit payments are now available to persons housed under the homelessness legislation since 5 February, the Government have decided that the proposed persons from abroad housing benefit special grant to local housing authorities is no longer required.

There is likely to be some continuing burden on social services departments in connection with supporting children in need and their families, and the Government's commitment to assist social services authorities with those costs, given earlier this year, remains unchanged. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health intends to lay a revised special grant report proposing a special grant to social services authorities. The terms of this grant are likely to be similar to the persons from abroad children's grant in the special grant report (No. 19) which was laid before Parliament on 6 June. The special grant report (No. 19) has been withdrawn.

Sulphur Protocol

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations he plans on proposals for meeting the United Kingdom's commitments under the second sulphur protocol of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe—UNECE. [35348]

Mr. Clappison: Because of the rapid progress which is being made in the United Kingdom in reducing emissions of sulphur dioxide—one of the main constituents of acid rain—we are on course to meet our international obligations under the second UNECE sulphur protocol. We published last Friday—28 June—a consultation paper setting out our preliminary conclusions on how this will be achieved. I have placed a copy in the Library of the House.

Under the terms of the protocol, the United Kingdom is committed to reducing national emissions of sulphur dioxide by 80 per cent. by 2010 compared with 1980 levels. This target is to be met through intermediate reductions of at least 50 per cent. by 2000 and 70 per cent. by 2005.

The paper shows that, in the light of current programmes for reducing emissions, particularly from power stations, the targets for 2000 and 2005 should be met without the need for additional measures. Over the longer term, we propose to keep the position under review in the light of any measures which may be required to meet short-term air quality standards—on which we shall shortly be publishing a consultation draft of a national air quality strategy—and any new initiatives in this area which may be agreed by the European Community.

The paper also reviews the performance of the existing national plan, which gives effect in the United Kingdom to the requirements of the EC large combustion plant directive, and sets out proposals for changes in its future operation. The aim of these changes will be to ensure future allocations of emissions quota under the national plan are more closely in line with regulatory consents under integrated pollution control.

The Environment Agency has introduced new flexibilities in the revised authorisations for the electricity supply industry in England and Wales which allow the generators to switch emissions between stations, provided that no adverse impact on the environment occurs. The agency is now examining how these arrangements can be extended to allow emissions to be similarly adjusted between different industrial plants by mutual agreement of the operators. Under the revised national plan for large combustion plant, there is no longer any gain in providing a scheme of transferable sulphur emissions quotas as was originally envisaged.

SCOTLAND

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved; [33508]

(2) how many (a) minor, (b) major and (c) fatal injuries have been suffered by staff in his Department and its agencies in work-related incidents in each of the past five years, showing in each year how many were related to information technology and giving details of all incidents involving fatalities. [33509]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information about injuries is set out in the table:

Year	Fatalities	Major injuries	Minor injuries	Information technology related (all minor)
1995–96	Nil	4	219	2
1994–95	Nil	10	203	3
1991–92	Nil	4	271	0

During the past five years, the Health and Safety Commission has become involved in six cases—two in 1991–92 and four in 1993–94.

A central record of health and safety problems is not kept, since many are minor and dealt with routinely by line management. On average, however, my Department's health and safety adviser deals with about 15 queries a week.

Council Housing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the expenditure on council housing in (a) Scotland and (b) Dundee in (i) 1989–90 and (ii) 1995–96, expressed in 1995–96 prices. [33845]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The table gives estimated expenditure in 1995–96, and actual expenditure in 1989–90 expressed in 1995–96 prices. It should be noted that expenditure in any year depends, in part, on the success of local authorities in generating capital receipts.

In 1989–90, the level of capital receipts generated by Scottish local authorities, including Dundee, considerably exceeded the estimated amount for 1995–96.

Total capital expenditure on Council Housing in Dundee and Scotland (£ million)

	Dundee	Scotland
1989–90 expenditure (at 1995–96 prices)	27.2	625.0
1995–96 estimated expenditure	15.6	425.1

Local Government Finance

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about (a) the expenditure programmes and (b) the level of central Government funding provided to Perth and Kinross council and Angus council; and if he will make a statement. [34239]

Mr. Kynoch: I have received a number of representations about the revenue budgets set by Perth and Kinross and Angus councils and about the level of central Government funding which supports those budgets. On each occasion, I have taken the opportunity to point out that it is for each council to determine its own spending priorities within the total level of resources available to it. I have also drawn attention to the very generous level of Government support for Scottish local authorities.

Perth and Kinross council was able to increase its expenditure by £5.8 million, or 4.60 per cent., over its notional 1995–96 budget figure without breaching its capping limit; Angus council had scope to increase its expenditure by £4.7 million, or 4.47 per cent. In both cases, the increases were before any account was taken of the scope for efficiency savings.

Perth and Kinross council will receive Government support totalling £115.5 million in the current year, which is 20 per cent. more per head of population than the average level of support for English authorities. Angus council will receive support totalling £100.3 million, which is 23 per cent. more than the average English figure.

Agricultural Wages

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many permits issued to individuals who are incapacitated for the purposes of the Agricultural Wages (Scotland) Act 1949 for the payment of lower minimum rates are currently in force; and what is their distribution by rates of pay. [34584]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: There are seven permits in force. They are distributed as shown in the table.

Number of permits	Classification of worker	Full minimum weekly wage
4	General farm worker	£150.55
1	Tractor worker	£168.55
1	Stockworker	£180.60
1	Supervisory	£181.30

Actual rates of pay vary in the range of 25 to 90 per cent. of the full minimum weekly wage, reflecting the degree of disability experienced by the worker.

Business Rates

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland to what extent local assessors are permitted to take account of local economic circumstances when making assessments for business rates. [34588]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Assessors are entirely independent of both local and central Government in the exercise of their statutory duties, and reach decisions on the rateable value of business premises in accordance with statute and case law. Economic circumstances in each area will affect rateable values to the extent that they will affect the rental evidence used by assessors in setting appropriate rateable values.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the advantages of introducing a differential business rate for rural and urban areas. [34589]

Mr. Forsyth: I am well aware of the burden rates place on Scottish businesses, both rural and urban. That is why the Government have been pursuing a policy of harmonisation, to bring Scottish business rates to the same level as apply in England.

We are also very sympathetic to the problems of village shops and post offices. Research has shown that, while for most businesses rate bills are relatively small in relation to total turnover, they impose a more substantial burden on the smallest businesses, particularly in the retail sector. Shops and post offices in villages often exist on very low turnovers and, for them, the rates bill can represent a significant burden.

In the White Paper "Rural Scotland: People, Prosperity and Partnership" the Government announced their plans to bring forward a scheme to reduce the burden of rates on general stores and post offices which fulfil a special role in the life of the rural community, and I recently issued a consultation paper on the operation of such a scheme.

In line with the Government's aim to harmonise rating across the country, the intention is to introduce the scheme in Scotland, England and Wales simultaneously.

Statutory Measures

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many statutory measures his Department introduced in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) between 1 January 1996 and 1 May 1996 which had the effect of repealing one or more previous statutory instruments without replacing them with a new regulation. [35029]

Mr. Kynoch: This information is not available in the form requested, but a list of regulations that have been repealed or amended was placed in the House Library by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 8 May.

Firearms (Circular Letters)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will place in the Library an index of all Scottish Office circular letters, to police authorities since 1967 relevant to the Firearms Acts of 1968, 1988, 1992, and 1994 indicating the number and reference of the circular together with the date of issue and title; [34838]

(2) if he will place in the Library an index of all Scottish Office circular letters, to chief officers of police since 1967 relevant to the administration of the Firearms Acts of 1968, 1988, 1992 and 1994 indicating the number or reference of the circular together with the date of issue and title. [34840]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Details of circulars relating to firearms in the numbered series are as listed:

Index of Scottish Office circular letters to chief constables since 1967

Child Abuse Inquiries

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost to public funds of (a) the Fife inquiry and (b) the report of the inquiry into child care policies in Fife. [35219]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The costs incurred by the Scottish Office in relation to the inquiry were £830,000. They include direct running expenditure for Scottish Office staff, of £239,356, wholly seconded to the staff on the inquiry. The cost of printing the report of the inquiry was £15,000. Information on the costs to public funds incurred by others involved in the inquiry is not available.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost to public funds of the Orkney child abuse inquiry by Lord Clyde. [35140]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The costs incurred by the Scottish Office in relation to the inquiry were £3,380,000. They include direct running expenditure for Scottish Office staff, estimated at £157,000, wholly seconded to the staff of the inquiry. The cost of printing the report of the inquiry was £10,500. Information on the costs to public funds incurred by others involved in the inquiry is not available.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on training and development in the civil service. [35442]

Mr. Freeman: I am pleased to announce that I have presented to Parliament today the White Paper "Development and Training for Civil Servants: a Framework for Action". I have also placed in the Libraries of both Houses copies of tables detailing progress in the civil service towards gaining investors in people status.

The Government place great importance on increasing the skills of the UK work force in order to meet the challenges set out in the recent competitiveness White Paper, Cm 3300. The civil service has a vital role to play in delivering national competitiveness. The White Paper published today sets out a framework for achievement this necessary step change in training and development in the civil service.

The White Paper has three key themes: a strengthened commitment to the achieving of the investors in people standard across the civil service; a drive to raise the levels of skills and awareness of civil servants; and an emphasis on civil servants taking responsibility for their own development and careers in a supportive partnership between top managers, line managers and the individual.

In addition to key targets being monitored centrally for initiatives in the senior civil service and its feeder grades, Departments and agencies will be required to draw up action plans with their own stretching targets in the specific areas listed in the White Paper. There will be an annual progress report to Ministers on the collective performance of the civil service, which will be published.

The proposals in the White Paper will strengthen the civil service and give greater opportunities to individual civil servants. This White Paper is an important step in ensuring that the civil service is fully equipped to face the challenges of the future.

Health Information

Mr. Cann: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what action he has taken since March to establish an independent committee to review the supply and dissemination of information within the services dealing with people in need of treatment; care and control. [34601]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

Following widespread consultation we published on 7 March guidance for the National Health Service—"The Protection and Use of Patient Information Between Agencies". Specific guidance on these matters is also contained in "Building Bridges". Copies of both documents are available in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what was the cost in each of the past five years of (a) sick pay and (b) compensation paid to employees of his Department or their families, or members of the public, as a result of (i) minor, (ii) major and (iii) fatal injuries related to the work of his Department, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000; [33490]

(2) on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved; [33488]

(3) how many (a) minor, (b) major and (c) fatal injuries have been suffered by staff in his Department and its agencies in work-related incidents in each of the past five years, showing in each year how many were related to information technology and giving details of all incidents involving fatalities; [33489]

(4) what was the cost in each of the past five years of rectifying working conditions that were the responsibility of this Department and its agencies, to bring them up to acceptable health and safety standards, detailing incidents involving information technology and additionally those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33491]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes, my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the replies given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, on 27 June, Official Report, columns 189–92.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 27 June.

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is attending the G7 summit in Lyon.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Council what was the cost in each of the past five years of (a) sick pay and (b) compensation paid to employees of his Department or their families, or members of the public, as a result of (i) minor, (ii) major and (iii) fatal injuries related to the work of his Department, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33458]

Mr. Newton: Nil.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Lord President of the Council on how many occasions in each of the past five years health and safety problems in his Department and its agencies have been reported via internal monitoring; and on how many occasions the Health and Safety Commission has become involved. [33456]

Mr. Newton: No such problems have been reported. I am not responsible for any agencies.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) primary and (b) secondary legislative measures would be required to allow the comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty to be implemented. [34586]

Mr. David Davis: We anticipate that legislation may be required to implement certain provisions of the comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty. We shall consider the precise form and nature of any legislation in the light of the outcome of the negotiations.

BBC World Service

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed with British high commissioners the role and perception of the BBC World Service in the countries in which they serve; and if he will make a statement. [34592]

Mr. Hanley: All FCO posts overseas, including the high commissions, are asked in an annual information return to assess the impact of the BBC World Service in the country to which they are accredited. The last such exercise took place in April this year. The results show the BBC World Service is highly valued in Commonwealth countries.

Kashmir

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed Kashmir with the Indian Government; and what specific problems were addressed. [34599]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary last discussed Kashmir in general terms with the previous Indian Foreign Secretary in London in November.

Mr. Mohd Bashir

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects a decision to be taken on an application made by Mr. Mohd Bashir, date of birth 8 January 1971, to the British post in Dubai to join his wife in the United Kingdom. [34813]

Mr. Hanley: I have asked the embassy at Dubai for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

Mr. Amanat Ali

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects a decision to be taken on the application made by Amanat Ali ref: Imm/D2604 to the British post in Islamabad to enter the United Kingdom; when Mr. Ali was interviewed; and if he will make a statement. [34812]

Mr. Hanley: I have asked the high commission at Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

Cyprus

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with the British representatives at the European Parliament as to the refusal of Mr. Denktash to allow members of the European Parliament to visit the Karpass area in occupied northern Cyprus and if he will make a statement. [34768]

Mr. David Davis: MEPs attending the 9th meeting of the EU/Cyprus Joint Parliamentary Committee discussed the issue of the Karpass with EU ambassadors in Nicosia 3 to 5 March. The Turkish Cypriot leadership is well aware of our views on the need to revoke the remaining restrictions on the basic freedoms in the Karpass. High commission officials regularly visit the Karpass.

UNESCO

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received about the United Kingdom rejoining UNESCO. [34821]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has received nine letters from Members of Parliament, organisations and members of the public in the last six months about the United Kingdom rejoining UNESCO. In addition there have been three parliamentary questions in the same period.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the financial implications of the United Kingdom rejoining UNESCO. [34828]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We estimate that it would cost the United Kingdom approximately £11 million annually to rejoin UNESCO. In addition there would be extra staffing costs which have yet to be calculated.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current management and functioning of UNESCO. [34831]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have frequently acknowledged the progress made by UNESCO in putting its house in order since we left in 1985. But we believe that there is still scope for further reform. In particular, we are keen to see greater focus of programmes, greater decentralisation, tighter budgetary discipline and more transparency in management practices.

Visa Applications (Language Students)

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to speed up the processing of visa applications made by language students in Moscow seeking to learn English in the United Kingdom. [34974]

Mr. Hanley: All applications for UK visas have to satisfy the requirements of the immigration rules. The visa section at Moscow, like all our other entry clearance issuing posts, processes all straightforward visa applications within 24 hours. However I inspected Moscow's visa section and approved plans to enlarge and improve the old premises at a cost of £700,000, better to accommodate visa applicants. The renovated visa section opened on 13 May and provides waiting space for 160 persons and new counter positions for eight visa officers at a time, out of a total of 17.

TREASURY

Promotion (Women)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures her Department has implemented during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions with his Department and its executive agencies; and what progress her Department has made in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years. [31546]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information in respect of the Chancellor's Departments and agencies is as follows:

HM Treasury

As part of a package of measures designed to ensure equality of opportunity within the department, the Treasury has targets to measure the progress of women and ethnic minority staff. Amongst these targets are objectives (i) to achieve a similar pattern of promotion for men and women which is related to their representation in the 'feeder grade'; (ii) to increase the proportion of women in the higher grades over time; and (iii) in the longer term, for women to be represented in the most senior grades in the same proportions as they are recruited into the Treasury in the 'feeder grades'.

While all promotions are made on the basis of merit, further measures to encourage the promotion of women include: action to address the perceived 'long hours culture' within the Treasury; the introduction of an open system of postings within the Department with the presumption that all posts are open to alternative working patterns, except where a valid case is made to the contrary; and flexible working hours made available to more than one third of the staff. The Treasury is also a member of Opportunity 2000.

Customs and Excise

The Department has implemented the following measures during the last 12 months to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions.

The board led by Chairman Valerie Strachan is committed to developing professionalism and responsibility. The Departmental strategy includes "investing in and supporting the continuous development of our people as a key element".

Agreeing clear personal objectives and performance measures and rewarding people according to their contribution is another key factor. This links in with the new appraisal system and revised competencies. These serve to ensure that promotion is on merit.

The new appointments system has removed the seniority requirement. This is particularly important to women who may have had a break in their service for family reasons. Training needs are being met to equip people with skills and knowledge which also enhances development.

Mrs. Strachan, the chairman, is seen as a role model for women within the organisation and outside. She supports the Department's commitment to Opportunity 2000 and has recently agreed to be a member of the target team which plays a vital role in determining the overall direction of Opportunity 2000.

The Department has also made the following progress in encouraging the promotion of women over the last five years.

Balancing work and family

Providing a wide range of options to help women return to work after the birth of a child or as their family grows up;

A full range of non-traditional working patterns is now in place;

Career break and domestic absence schemes.

This kind of flexibility allows women to plan their careers around their individual needs and family responsibilities.

Child care provision, including workplace nurseries, buying nursery places and play schemes.

Reimbursement of extra child care and possibly elder care expenses incurred when attending residential training courses.

Positive action training.

Membership of key organisations like Opportunity 2000, and demonstrating our commitment to the membership by setting forecast figures for women at higher executive officer level and above by the years 1996 and 2000.

Establishing a comprehensive equal opportunities policy and putting into place strategies and practices which make those opportunities a reality.

Inland Revenue

During the last 12 months, the Inland Revenue has taken the following measures to encourage the promotion of women into senior positions:

As part of "Lifting the Barriers"—an initiative aimed at meeting the Department's strategic objective to increase the representation of women and ethnic minority people—at senior levels:

"Diversity in Action" a new advanced equal opportunities training course for senior managers was introduced;

"Springboard", a three-month personal development course for women, was piloted;

Mentoring schemes were piloted.

A career tracking project which looked at the careers of men and women who entered the Department in 1975 and 1985 was carried out to establish whether there were any barriers or stepping stones to progression which hindered or helped certain groups of people. Recommendations are still being considered.

A review of the existing arrangements whereby staff can be reimbursed additional child care costs if they have to attend A training course which affects their normal working hours was commenced.

A series of pilots on alternative working patterns focused on homeworking and extensions to flexible working hours. And guidance to managers and staff on job sharing, part-time working, flexible working hours, and alternative working patterns generally was issued. Since the publicity there has been a marked increase in term-time working.

A report into the equality aspects of the Inland Revenue's performance management system was completed by independent consultants. The main conclusion was that there was nothing inherent in the system design which would inevitably lead to differing impacts on various groups.

Extensive equal opportunities information was included in the "Guide to Working in the Inland Revenue", available to all members of staff.

The Inland Revenue has made the following progress since 1991:

Two women became non-executive directors on the management board.

The biggest increase at senior management level during the last five years has been at grade 7 level where women increased their representation from 12 per cent. to 24.3 per cent. The first woman controller (Grade 4) was appointed in January 1994.

Valuation Office Agency (VOA)

The Valuation Office Agency follows the Inland Revenue's strategic objective of improving the representation of women at senior levels and supports the "Lifting the Barriers" initiative. The VOA issued an equal opportunities programme of action for 1996–97 in May 1996, which includes goals for women's representation by the year 2002–3. Over the last 12 months they have analysed a sample of promotion boards to identify whether there was any basis or discrimination against women. No bias or discrimination was identified.

Paymaster

Paymaster promotes people to vacant posts on the basis of a competency framework and merit. During the past twelve months two women have been appointed to grade 7 posts and joined the chief executive's team, the senior management team in the agency. This increased women's representation from zero to almost 25 per cent. In addition, the agency has appointed a woman as a non-executive director who provides independent advice to the management board.

Royal Mint

A woman was appointed at assistant director level—Grade 7—in the last 12 months—the first female ever to be appointed at this level in the Royal Mint.

The total number of females in executive senior management posts has increased from three to four over the last five years. Also in 1993 one female non-executive director was appointed.

Within the last year a new policy of recruiting to a post and not a grade was introduced. Monitoring of fairness of opportunity takes place at each stage of recruitment and promotion processes. The same applies to our appraisal scheme which emphasises individual objectives scored against job evaluation factors. The Mint tries to ensure that at least one member of recruitment/selection panels is female. The proportion of women in senior positions has risen in the last five years from 7.5 per cent. to 10 per cent.

National Savings

The recent reorganisation of National Savings has had the effect of restricting the number of promotions and recruitment.

Despite these factors, development of equal opportunities policies has continued with a highly successful awareness training course for managers being introduced, and the seniority requirement for promotion being reduced to two years, both within the past year. Self-nomination for promotion arrangements which have been effective for two years have also had an effect in helping women to progress with the organisation.

National Savings also operates workplace nurseries and school holiday play schemes. Special unpaid leave is also available if needed during school holidays to enable staff to be with their family.

Office for National Statistics

As part of its programme for action on equal opportunities, the Office for National Statistics actively encourages women.

Over the past 12 months, ONS—and its predecessor departments, the Central Statistical Office and the Office for Population Censuses and Surveys—has operated a range of family-friendly policies including holiday play schemes, a nursery, flexible working hours and career breaks aimed at encouraging experienced members of staff to continue their careers alongside their domestic responsibilities. Other initiatives pursued by the Department in 1995–96 included:

offering women-only training courses to meet demand; actively encouraging women to apply for posts in grades above executive officer, while ensuring that selection was based on merit; and monitoring the success rates of women against white males in recruitment, performance promotability assessment, promotion and internal postings.

Information about the number of promotions in earlier years is only available for the CSO. Restructuring of CSO led to fewer promotion opportunities overall. Because the new Office for National Statistics was created on 1 April 1996, analysis of monitoring data has not yet been undertaken. ONS is presently developing a new equal opportunities programme of action for 1996–97. The programme will include proposals for monitoring, analysis of the results and for action to remedy any significant disparities highlighted.

Works of Art

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost of the conditionally except works of art list in uncollected inheritance tax (a) in 1995 and (b) since the list started, inflation adjusted. [34221]

Mr. Jack: The estimated overall cost to the Exchequer of granting conditional exemption from inheritance tax/capital transfer tax to works of art and chattels is about £55 million in 1994–95 and around £700 million over the period 1984–85 to 1994–95, at constant 1994–95 prices using the GDP market deflator. Comparable information for earlier years to 1977–78 when the list started is not available. And there are no separate estimates of the cost of exempting items included in the list.

The exemption is conditional, not absolute. Its broad effect is to defer payment of tax on the qualifying items for so long as the conditions of the exemption are met. the figure of £700 million given above does not take into account any deferred tax subsequently paid.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals have been asked by the Inland Revenue to remove items from the exempt works of art list as a result of denial of access (a) in 1995 and (b) since the list has existed. [34223]

Mr. Jack: In 1995 one owner has had items removed from the list because of a failure to provide public access. The capital taxes office has no record of any previous such removal of items.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average inflation adjusted gross yearly income of individuals owning conditionally exempt works of art in (a) 1995, (b) 1980 and (c) the first year of the relevant list. [34220]

Mr. Jack: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many complaints have been received by the Inland Revenue regarding denial of access to conditionally exempt works of art (a) in 1995 and (b) since the scheme came into existence. [34222]

Mr. Jack: The capital taxes office has received no complaints from members of the public regarding denial of access to conditionally exempt works of art. If anyone feels that he or she has been unreasonably denied such access, they should write to that office.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to equalise the inheritance tax treatment of surviving partners in long-term homosexual couples with the treatment of the surviving partner in heterosexual marriages; and if he will make a statement. [34949]

Mr. Jack: There are no such plans. Inheritance tax exemption for transfers between spouses is not available to unmarried couples.

Actors and Actresses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many actors and actresses are currently unemployed. [35008]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In May 1996, 13,033 of the claimant unemployed in the United Kingdom usually worked as actors, entertainers, stage managers, producers or directors. Figures for actors alone cannot be separately identified.

National Savings

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets he has set National Savings on its creation as an executive agency of his Department; and if he will make a statement. [35472]

Mrs. Angela Knight: National Savings has today been established as an executive agency of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Its main aim is to support the Government's management of its debt and its policies for personal savings by attracting and retaining investments from the retail market efficiently and cost effectively. It will be set clear targets to continue to improve value for money for the taxpayer and the level of service to customers. Accordingly, I have set the following performance targets for its first year, 1996–97.

(i) To work within the terms of the 1996–97 funding remit '

(ii) To manage National Savings so as to deliver its aims within the resources allocated by Parliament.

(iii) To improve efficiency by 6 per cent. in 1996–97.

(iv) To develop a consistent agency-wide unit costing system drawing on the development of resource accounting by end March 1997.

(v) To achieve a 97 per cent. outturn against all national savings published timeliness targets.

(vi) To set up a consistent system by end March 1997 to measure accuracy of those transaction processes that most affect customers (repayment and purchase).

(vii) To show 85 per cent. of customers surveyed are either satisfied or very satisfied.

' The funding remit sets out the costs and volume assumption that National Savings works to. It is not published because of commercial confidentiality.

I have today placed copies of the agency's framework document in the Libraries of both Houses.

Following open competition Peter Bareau has been selected as the new agency chief executive. He will take up post on 15 July 1996.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish for each of the constituent nations of the United Kingdom and for United Kingdom as a whole for the last three years in constant prices the cost to the Exchequer of enforcement of current laws on illegal drugs, broken down by the costs of (a) policing, (b) prosecutions, (c) medical treatment of abusers and (d) border controls. [33930]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The overall expenditure of the Government on tackling drug misuse across the United Kingdom in 1992–93 was estimated to have been £520 million. The comparable figures for 1993–94 was estimated as £526 million. These are the most recent figures available. The information in the form and breakdown requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Abortions

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the next edition of the "Abortion Statistics Monitor" will be published; and what factors account for the interval in publication between it and its predecessor. [34891]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The most recent edition of the "Abortion Statistics Monitor", covering legal abortions for the December 1995 quarter, was published on 27 June 1996. The next edition, which will cover the March 1996 quarter, has an expected publication date of 1 October 1996. Publication dates are determined by the date of receipt of HSA4 notification forms by the chief medical officers at the Department of Health and the Welsh Office, and the statistical processing and analyses of the notifications by the Office for National Statistics.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many legal abortions were performed in England and Wales in each month of 1995. [35091]

Mrs. Knight: The data presented for 1995 in the table are provisional as they are based on quarterly returns. Finalised annual figures for 1995 are expected to be published in an annual monitor on legal abortions performed in England and Wales on 10 September 1996.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to ensure that each legislative measure put forward by his Department contains a compliance cost assessment (a) relating to small firms and (b) in respect of which small firms have been consulted. [34146]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 June 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 26 June 1996 by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Official Report, column 119.

Utility Prices

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will express as an index where the year of privatisation equals 100 the utility component of the retail prices index including value added tax in (a) 1979 and (b) the latest available period for (i) gas prices, (ii) electricity prices, (iii) electricity and gas prices, (iv) water prices and (v) gas, electric and water prices. [30343]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 May 1996]: The information is as follows:

Period	Gas	Electricity	Electricity and gas	Water	Gas, electricity and water
Year of privatisation	1986	1990	1990	1989	1990
1979	44	44	42	36	41
May 1996	125	121	118	194	127

Although the gas/water/electricity prices has risen to 127 compared to 100 in 1990, a wider range of utility prices, which also includes the price of telephone services, rail fares and postage, has risen to only 121.3. In real terms, this is an increase of only one and half percentage point.

Note:

The components of the retail prices index for electricity and gas, and for gas, electricity and water, assume a privatisation year of 1990—the year that electricity utilities were fully privatised.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Spending Statistics

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the spending per pupil (a) in primary schools and (b) in secondary schools in each local education authority in England. [34674]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table sets out, for each local education authority, net institutional expenditure per pupil in LEA-maintained (a) pre-primary/primary schools and (b) secondary schools in England for 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available.

Kirklees Borough Council

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the amount of grant for Kirklees metropolitan council for the education revenue budget for each year since 1979–80. [34798]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 27 June 1996]: It is not possible to identify a portion of revenue support grant for the education revenue budget since RSG is not hypothecated to particular services. Details of the education standard spending assessment for Kirklees from 1990–91 to 1996–97 are set out in the following list. The previous system of local government finance that applied before 1990–91 was different in structure and coverage from the current system and comparable figures are therefore not available.

1991–92: £148.129 million

1992–93: £157.647 million

1993–94: £140.873 million

1996–97: £141.523 million

School Nursery Units

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many nursery units have been provided at Church-aided schools through the private finance initiative; [34829]

(2) how many nursery units have been provided at local education authority schools through the private finance initiative; and if she will make a statement. [34830]

Mr. Robin Squire: We are aware that many local education authorities and voluntary aided schools are exploring the use of the private finance initiative or similar arrangements for education projects, including nursery units. PFI in schools and nursery units is at an early stage, and as yet we are not aware of any nursery units provided through the PFI.

Unemployment Benefit Rules

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the professions where unemployed people are able to seek employment in their chosen occupation while receiving unemployment benefit without being asked to seek alternative employment; and if she will make a statement; [35003]

(2) what is the maximum time during which actors and actresses are able to claim unemployment benefit before being asked to seek alternative employment; and if she will make a statement. [35102]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr Martin Redmond, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking for a list of the professions where people who are unemployed are able to seek employment in their chosen occupation whilst receiving unemployment benefit, without being asked to seek alternative employment.

Under the provisions of the Social Security Act 1989, people may limit themselves to seeking and accepting work in their usual occupation and at their usual rate of pay for a period of up to 13 weeks from the date they claim unemployment benefit. After this, people claiming benefit are expected to broaden their jobsearch and to accept work for which they are capable, even if that work is not in their usual field. Anyone who takes up such an offer of employment is, of course, still free to continue to look for work in their chosen occupation.

I hope this is helpful.

Barnsley and Doncaster Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the visit of a Minister from her Department to the area covered by the Barnsley and Doncaster TEC to discuss measures to reduce unemployment in the travel-to-work areas of Doncaster and Mexborough. [34984]

Mr. Paice: My noble Friend the Minister of State undertook the most recent visit of a Minister from the Department to the area covered by the Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council on 8 May 1996, in his capacity as a sponsor Minister. He visited sites in the Barnsley north-east corridor city challenge area and attended the launch of the Dearne Valley college, at the University of Sheffield. The visit was not specifically to discuss measures to reduce unemployment in the travel to work areas of Doncaster and Mexborough. However, he did meet a representative of the Barnsley and Doncaster TEC during the visit. He will be visiting the Doncaster area again, on 1 July 1996, to hold a reception for excellent, good and improving schools in the Yorkshire and Humberside region identified by Ofsted inspections.

Secondary Schools

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) when she last met the chief inspector to discuss admission policy for secondary schools;[34771]

(2) what advice she received from Office of Standards in Education on the re-introduction of admission by selection to secondary schools. [34772]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend meets the chief inspector regularly, most recently on 5 June, to discuss a range of education matters.

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she or her ministerial colleagues have recently visited Germany to study the selection methods under which pupils are allocated to each type of secondary school in that country; and if she will make a statement. [35085]

Mrs. Gillan: No such visits have recently taken place. The White Paper "Self-government for Schools", Cm 3315, stresses the value of many different kinds of selection and specialisation in extending diversity and so giving parents more choice.

School Security

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many persons have been (a) challenged and (b) apprehended for being found in (i) a school or college building and (ii) the precincts of a school or college, without any lawful authority, in each eduction authority area for each month in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [34843]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not collected centrally.

Unemployed Claimants

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many claimants in 1995–96 were referred to (a) jobplan workshops, (b) restart courses and (c) workwise and worklink; and for each how many attended and what were the outcomes; [35276]

(2) how many claimants had reductions in their income support for non-attendance or failure to complete (a) jobplan workshops, (b) restart courses and (c) workwise and worklink. [35275]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your questions to her about Jobplan, Workwise and Worklink and Restart Courses.

The attached tables show how equal many claimants were referred to Jobplan, Workwise and Worklink and Restart Courses in 1995–96, how many attended and the outcomes.

The responsibility for adjudication on people who fail to attend or complete these programmes rests with the Benefits Agency (BA). In approximately 90% of cases that are adjudicated upon a reduction of either 40% or 20% of personal Income Support is applied. Details of the total number of disallowances by programme are included in the table.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants are currently participating in the voluntary jobsearch element of the project work pilots. [35284]

Mr. Forth: The most recent figures available, covering the period from the start of the pilots up to 13 June, show a total of 2,012 people in the Hull and Medway and Maidstone pilot areas have had their initial restart interview, and entered the first 13 weeks of the pilot process.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants have participated in each of the four jobmatch pilots in each quarter since inception; and what have been the outcomes of those who completed. [35283]

Mr. Forth: The following table gives the number of long-term unemployed people who have participated in each of the four jobmatch pilots. The table shows the number of new participants in each 12 week period since the pilots began on 3 April 1995 and until 24 May 1996.

Information is not yet available on the employment status and experience of participants in the period after the jobmatch allowance ceases. A follow-up survey of participants is being conducted from which results will be available next year.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many restart interviews took place in 1995–96; and from these how many claimants (a) were placed in a job, (b) claimed other benefits and (c) entered other programmes and signed off the claiming benefit. [35281]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of Restart interviews which took place in 1995/96 and the outcomes from them. This falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Employment Service.

I have set out the information you have requested in the table below. It may be helpful if I explain the scope and purpose of the Restart interviews which are offered at regular six monthly intervals as part of an advisory and information service aimed at helping people back into work. These interviews provide clients with the opportunity to discuss with a Client Adviser the steps they are taking to find work, how to access the employment and training opportunities that are available to them, and the course of action which, if followed, will offer the best prospects of returning to work.

Total Restart Interviews	3,271,561
Job Placings	54,903
Family Credit and Other Benefit Starts	64,124
Programme Starts[1]	764,886
Sign Offs as a direct result of Advisory action	117,644

[1] Jobclub, Business Start-Up, Restart Course, Training for Work, JIG, Work Trials, JSS, Jobplan, Job Review Workshop, Workwise, Community Action.

While the primary aim of this service is to help people back into work, advisers also have a duty to make sure those claiming benefit understand and comply wit the conditions under which they are paid. These conditions require people to be available to start work immediately; not to place such restrictions on the work they are willing to do as to leave them with no real prospects of finding a job; and to take those steps, each week, which offer the best prospects of obtaining work.

As part of this process, advisers ensure that people are claiming the most appropriate benefit. If, during an interview, discussions between the client and the adviser identify that an alternative benefit is more appropriate, then the adviser will ensure a smooth transition to the correct benefit.

I should emphasise that the figures shown in the table represent only the immediate result of Restart interviews. Many other people subsequently take up a job or a place on an employment or training programme as a result of the guidance given to them at their interview. Independent researchers who have studied the Restart interview programme have all concluded that this indirect effect is extremely significant.

I hope this in helpful.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants were (a) referred to 1–2–1 interviews in 1995–96, (b) attended and completed these interviews and (c) received sanctions for non-attendance or failure to complete their programme. [35280]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how many people were referred to and completed 1–2–1 interviews in 1995–96 and how many received benefit sanctions for non-attendance or failure to attend the interviews. This falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Employment Service.

You will see the information set out in the table. It may also be helpful if I explain that 1–2–1 was piloted in 1994/95 and introduced nationally from April 1995 for 18–24 year olds unemployed a year. It involves placing people on a caseload operated by an ES adviser for up to six interviews. This caseload approach provides an extended period for advisers to support clients' job search and to help them develop realistic plans to return to work. Clients are given information about jobs and other opportunities and extensive job search advice and help, including help with the preparation of CVs, the completion of application forms and interview techniques. The interviews also provide an opportunity to confirm that clients understand and are meeting the conditions under which benefit is paid. In April 1996 the initiative was expanded; to provide 239,000 opportunities from the previous 95,000. The extra places has enabled help to be extended to clients over 25 and people at other unemployment durations.

1–2–1 Cases opened	67,557
1–2–1 Cases completed	40,921
Number of Benefit Sanctions applied	5,423

For those 1–2–1 is unable to help, a linked four week course, Workwise, provides further help with job search and confidence building. Workwise is also made available immediately, in preference to 1–2–1, for those clients to whom it is more appropriate.

I hope this is helpful.

Employment Service

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the performance of the Employment Service against its targets in 1995–96. [35289]

Mr. Forth: The Employment Service performed very well in 1995–96, meeting or exceeding 10 of the 12 targets set in the annual performance agreement. A total of 1,935,300 unemployed people were placed into jobs, against an annual target of 1.9 million. This represents 58,500 more placings than in 1994–95. Performance against all the targets for 1995–96 is set out in the following table:

Employment service performance against target
April 1995 to March 1996

Annual performance targets	Target levels	Performance
1. To place 1.9 million unemployed people into work at a planned unit cost of £185, assuming 2.65 million vacancies are notified	1.9 million	1,935,300
2. 29.5 per cent. of total unemployed placings achieved to be long-term claimants	29.5 per cent. (560,500)	29.2 per cent. (565,800)
3. 27 per cent. of total unemployed placings achieved to be people in inner cities	27 per cent. (513,000)	27.5 per cent. (531,400)
4. 55 per cent. positive outcomes for unemployed claimants invited to a 12 month advisory interview	55 per cent.	57 per cent.
5. 45 per cent. positive outcomes for unemployed claimants invited to a 24 month advisory interview	45 per cent.	49 per cent.
6. 80 per cent. of starts on training for work to be referrals from the Employment Service	80 per cent.	83 per cent.
7. 9.5 per cent. of initial claim enquiries not to be pursued as new claims	9.5 per cent.	10.8 per cent.

Employment service performance against target
April 1995 to March 1996

Annual performance targets	Target levels	Performance
8. 185,000 submissions to adjudication where there is an arguable case, with supporting information to show that the claimant is not available for, actively seeking or willing to accept work	185,000	273,900
9. At a planned unit cost per claimant of £15.80 for all benefit claims
—despatch 75 per cent. of first payments of unemployment benefit within 12 days of claim	75 per cent.	74.6 per cent.
—97 per cent. of unemployment benefit payments by value to be correct	97 per cent.	96.7 per cent.
10. 4 per cent. of total unemployed placings achieved to be people with disabilities	4 per cent. (76,000)	4.5 per cent. (87,400)
11. 82,000 claims to be withdrawn of those suspected of obtaining benefit by deception following fraud investigation	82,000	88,500
12. To achieve £58 million in efficiency savings	£58 million	£74.63 million

Career Development Loans

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful applications for career development loans there have been in each year since 1990–91; and what is the projection for the current year. [35277]

Mr. Paice: The following table sets out the information requested:

Year	Loans approved	Loans rejected
1990–91	8,054	1,767
1991–92	10,432	4,260
1992–93	10,230	3,978
1993–94	12,159	4,966
1994–95	15,169	4,790
1995–96	13,287	5,129

The target for 1996–97 is 16,000 approved applications.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many unemployed recipients of career development loans entered full-time employment on completion of their training. [35279]

Mr. Paice: Information on the number of trainees in work following training is obtained from a follow-up survey of trainees, which has been conducted since the start of the scheme in 1988. On the basis of this ongoing survey, 61 per cent. of career development loans supported trainees who were unemployed prior to training have found work within three months of completing their course.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many recipients of career development loans have been served with default notices; and what proportion are unemployed. [35278]

Mr. Paice: At 31 May 1996, the number of career development loans which have been defaulted is 9,619 out of 78,874 loans issued. Information about numbers of defaulters who are unemployed is not available.

Project Work Pilots

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which organisations have been awarded contracts to run work experience placements for the project work pilots. [35285]

Mr. Forth: The Employment Service agreed contracts with nine organisations. In the Hull pilot they are:

Q-Mat
The British Trust for Conservation Volunteers
GrandMet Trust
Instant Muscle
Forum for Work

and in the Kent pilot:

Community Link
Career Ahead
Training Network
GrandMet Trust

Participants will be referred to placements with these organisations later this month.

Training for Work Scheme

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the weekly average number of working hours of participants in the training for work scheme; what is the current level of training premium they receive; when this figure was last reviewed; and what plans she has to increase this figure. [35149]

Mr. Paice: There are no figures available for the weekly average number of working hours for training for work trainees. The Government's agreement with training and enterprise councils stipulates that trainees shall have planned training of 21 hours or more in each seven-day period. Trainees receive an allowance based on the benefit they were receiving the day they joined the programme plus a premium of £10 per week. Training allowances are increased annually in line with benefit payments. The £10 premium was introduced in 1988. My right hon. Friend has no plans to increase this premium.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what circumstances claimants of jobseeker's allowance will have the right to a copy of their jobseeker's agreement prior to the new claim interview. [35287]

Mr. Forth: A jobseeker's agreement can be drawn up only after a full discussion between the jobseeker and an Employment Service adviser. This will normally take place at the new claim interview, and until then the jobseeker will be treated as having an agreement. People who are already claiming when the jobseeker's allowance is introduced in October 1996 will also initially be treated as having an agreement, and the actual agreement will be drawn up at their next advisory interview. If a new claim for JSA is made within 14 days of a previous period of entitlement, the previous agreement will continue to have effect, but otherwise there are no circumstances in which an agreement can exist prior to the new claim interview.

Community Action

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants attended community action in each year since 1993; and what outcomes were achieved by leavers in each year. [35282]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about participants and outcomes on the Community Action programme.

The information you requested is in the tables attached.

Community Action started in July 1993 and recruitment to the programme ceased at the end of December 1995. Data relates to the three operational years over which the programme operated.

Information on outcomes is based on follow up surveys of leavers. Consequently, data is not yet available for participants who have left the programme more recently.

I hope this is helpful.

Table 1: Community action participants

Operational year	Number of starters
1993–94	23,389
1994–95	47,646
1995–96	28,770

Table 2: Community action outcomes

	Percentage
Operational year	Entries into employment	Other outcomes[1]
1993–94	16.8	9.3
1994–95	14.5	12.3
1995–96[2]	14.0	9.1

[1] Other outcomes are entries into training for work or full-time education.
[2] Data for April to November 1995 (latest available).

Learning for Work Programme

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library a copy of evaluation for the learning for work programme. [35286]

Mr. Paice: Copies of the evaluation reports were placed in the Library on 1 February.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list, by order of the sum involved, the figure per child represented by the 1996–97 education standard spending assessment for (a) primary and (b) secondary school children in each local education authority in England and Wales; and what were the figures for each year since 1979–80. [34442]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 26 June 1996]: The information requested for English local education authorities from 1990–91 to 1996–97 is set out in the following table. Comparable figures are not available for the previous system of local government finance that applied before 1990–91. Figures for Welsh local education authorities are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Open Prisons

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners convicted since 1979 of a crime involving violence against the person served the greater part of their sentence in an open prison. [34428]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 1 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners convicted since 1979 of a crime involving violence against the person who had served the greater part of their sentence in an open prison.

The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Green Issues

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the green issues mentioned in the list of ministerial responsibilities for his Department; and if he will make a statement. [34343]

Mr. Howard: Green issues in the Home Office are the responsibility of my right hon. and noble Friend Baroness Blatch. They consist of the green housekeeping strategy, which sets out the Department's policy on conserving natural resources and reducing environmental pollution. The strategy is supported by action plans incorporating recycling and energy efficiency schemes and a range of other green housekeeping initiatives.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many times during the last 12 months prison officers were required to work a double shift at Doncaster prison; and what was the reason for the requirement; [35006]

(2) how many prison officers have been seconded during the last 12 months to Doncaster prison; from which prison establishment they came; and if Her Majesty's inspectorate of prisons was informed of the seconded prison officers working at Doncaster prison when it visited the prison; [35014]

(3) how many prison officers have been seconded during the last 12 months from Doncaster prison; to which prison establishment they went; and if Her Majesty's inspectorate of prisons was informed of the Doncaster seconded prison officers when it visited the prison. [35012]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alan Walker to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 1 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about staffing at Doncaster prison.

Premier Prison Services' policy is not to operate double shifts and there is no record of staff working double shifts, neither have any prison officers been seconded to Doncaster prison in the last 12 months. However, five prisoner custody officers, who were attending a control and restraint course at the national training centre on 15 November 1995, were seconded to Full Sutton prison for two days to assist in quelling a disturbance. Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Prisons was made aware of this incident and the use of Premier Prison Services' staff during the inspection in March 1996.

Royal Family (Policing Costs)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total cost in each of the past five years in policing events attended by members of the royal family. [35018]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not collected centrally.

Drug Seizures

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many seizures of illicit drugs have been made by police and customs from 1990 to date; and what is the estimated value of the drugs seized. [35051]

Mr. Sackville: The information requested on the number of seizures of controlled drugs made by police and customs from 1990 to 1994 is contained in tables 1.1 and 2.2 of the Home Office statistical bulletin "Statistics of drugs seizures and offenders dealt with, United Kingdom , 1994", copies of which are in the Library.

In addition, Her Majesty's Customs and Excise informed us that the following number of seizures of controlled drugs were made by it during 1995:

Heroin: 185

Cocaine: 496

All synthetic drugs: 291

of which amphetamines: 158

MDMA: 133

Cannabis (all forms): 6,049.

Data for 1995 for police forces will be published later in the year.

Chiefs of Police Conference

Dame Elaine Kellett-Bowman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the paper presented by Judge Goldstein to the conference of chiefs of police on 17 June; and if he will make a statement. [34656]

Mr. Sackville: Courts in this country have powers to ensure that, in appropriate cases, drug misusing offenders receive treatment as part of a community sentence. Treatment for minor offenders is also arranged through arrest referral schemes set up between the police and drug treatment agencies.

In the light of Judge Goldstein's paper on the American system of drug courts, the scope for maximising the use of non-custodial drug treatment options is currently under review.

Racial Discrimination (Drugs)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has recently undertaken of the extend of racial discrimination in respect of drugs enforcement and penalties. [34658]

Mr. Maclean: The police have conducted ethnic monitoring of stops and searches since April 1993, and ethnic monitoring was extended from 1 April this year to include arrests and cautions, among other matters. Drugs enforcement is not separately identified in ethnic monitoring.

International Association of Women Police Training Conference

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will renew his offer of grant aid to the International Association of Women Police training conference in Birmingham on 31 August; and if he will make a statement. [34887]

Mr. Maclean: No such offer of grant has ever been made or withdrawn. This was confirmed in writing to the organisers of the conference last year.

Missing Patients

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken since March to ensure that all police forces have formal missing patients procedures in co-operation with local hospitals and social services departments to include a system for inquiry into cases of repeated absconding by patients with restriction orders. [34608]

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office, the Association of Chief Police Officers and the national health service executive are currently discussing this issue.

Police (Training)

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken since March to ensure that police forces nationally adopt training and procedures for dealing with mentally ill people comparable to those currently practised by the Metropolitan police. [34603]

Mr. Maclean: The national director of police training circulated the Metropolitan police distance learning document "Understanding Mental Disorder" to all police forces in 1995. A further Metropolitan police document was cited as an example of good practice.

The national director has invited the National Schizophrenia Fellowship to conduct a series of conferences at police training centres around the country, dealing with the vulnerability of the mentally disordered suspect.

Prisoners' Records

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken since March to review the confidentiality of prison medical records. [34605]

Miss Widdecombe: The Prison Service accepted the recommendation of the independent inquiry report into the case of Jason Mitchell that the question of confidentiality of prison medical records should be fully reviewed. It will, as that report recommended, shortly be consulting the General Medical Council and other professional bodies for their views.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department has taken since March in respect of the role of C3 division acting in relation to information relating to (a) patients' index offences, (b) ensuring that the procedures of C3 division are in line with the Home Office practice in relation to discretionary lifer powers, (c) reviewing the notes for guidance of social supervisors to take account of potential conflicts in the roles of social workers arising from changes in community care, mental health and criminal justice legislation and (d) updating the case worker guide to require information from all who will bear responsibility for patients after care. [34631]

Miss Widdecombe: Since March, the role of the mental health unit—formerly C3 division—of the Home Office in these four areas of its caseworking functions in respect of restricted patients under the Mental Health Act 1983 has been reviewed. We have concluded that the proposal that the mental health unit should act as a repository of information about patients' index offences should be addressed as part of a wider review of risk assessment already under way. No changes in the mental health unit's practices in relation to the other elements of the question are proposed. Comparison between mental health review tribunals and discretionary lifer panels, and the statements provided to each, are not valid; the social supervisor's role in respect of restricted patients is not subject to the conflict of role implied in the question; and the caseworker guide already requires information from all parties who will be responsible for the supervision of conditionally discharged patients in the community.

Vehicle Purchases (Metropolitan Police)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Mercedes vehicles the Metropolitan police has purchased in the current financial year and in each of the past two years. [34866]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner that the Metropolitan police have not purchased any Mercedes vehicles in the current financial year, that six were acquired for evaluation in 1994–95, and that 40 were purchased in 1995–96.

Crown Court Witness Service

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what support services are made available by the Crown court witness service to victims and other witnesses. [34881]

Mr. Maclean: The Crown court witness service is run by Victim Support and funded by the Home office to help victims and witnesses through the stress of attending court. It provides a range of services, including general information, pre-trial familiarisation visits, explaining how the court works, supporting witnesses before, during and after they have given evidence, and linking witnesses to other sources of support.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) victims and (b) other witnesses have used Coventry Crown court witness service since its establishment; and what this figure is as a percentage of the total number of witnesses appearing in Coventry Crown court. [34882]

Mr. Maclean: Victim Support advises that the Coventry Crown Court witness service has helped 777 people since September 1994. The Crown Prosecution Service advises that information about the total number of witnesses could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Appropriate Adult System

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what study has been undertaken since March of the appropriate adult system in criminal justice; and what plans he has to extend its role. [34611]

Mr. Maclean: An appropriate adults review group was set up in 1994 in response to a recommendation of the royal commission on criminal justice. The group reported last year. The Home Office is consulting the Association of Chief Police Officers before issuing guidelines to the police service in response to the report. The review group did not recommend an extension of the role of appropriate adults.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims are outstanding for compensation under the pay book scheme for firearms recommended for compensation under the terms of the Firearms Act 1988; and what is the value claimed in each case. [34836]

Mr. Maclean: None. The Department has considered all claims made under the Government buy-in scheme for weapons which became prohibited by virtue of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 and has advised the claimants of the outcome. Offers have been made to all claimants entitled to receive compensation.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of the agenda and minutes of a meeting held at the Home Office on 30 November 1987 between officials of the firearms division and representations of the International Shooting Sportspersons Liaison Committee. [35291]

Mr. Maclean: We have been unable to locate details of the meeting referred to. Routine papers are destroyed after five years.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library an index of all Home Office letters, circulars, guidance and memorandums to the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and for Scotland since 1967 relevant to the administration of the Firearms Acts of 1968, 1988, 1992 and 1994 indicating the number or reference of the letter or document, together with the date of issue and title. [34837]

Mr. Maclean: The Home Office does not issue guidance on firearms administration to either the Association of Chief Police Officers for England and Wales or to the Association of Chief Police Officers for Scotland. An index of correspondence and letters of consultation with these two organisations does not exist and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library an index of all Home Office circular letters to police authorities since 1967 relevant to the administration of the Firearms Acts of 1968, 1988, 1992 and 1994 indicating the number or reference of the circular together with the date of issue and title. [34839]

Mr. Maclean: Police authorities receive copies of Home Office circulars to chief officers of police, an index to which is already in the Library. I am not aware of any other documentation relating to firearms administration which has been issued to police authorities.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library an index of all Home Department circular letters, to chief officers of police since 1967 relevant to the administration of the Firearms Acts of 1968, 1988, 1992 and 1994 indicating the number or reference of the circular together with the date of issue and title. [34841]

Mr. Maclean: Copies of those circular letters to chief officers relating to firearms administration which are readily available have already been supplied to the hon. Member. No comprehensive index of any such letters exists and it could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Bombs

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further steps he intends to take to prevent the sale of materials which can be used to formulate explosive devices and bombs. [34842]

Mr. Maclean: There are extensive legal controls on the manufacture and possession of explosives, and these are kept under constant review. It would not be practical to restrict all materials which might be used in the manufacture of explosives. Many have other legitimate uses.

Mr. Raghbir Singh

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the representations he or Ministers in his Department have received from hon. Members on the case of Mr. Raghbir Singh; and if he will give the political affiliation of the hon. Members. [34956]

Mr. Howard: Two hundred and thirty-two letters have been received from 197 Members of Parliament about the case of Mr. Raghbir Singh. One hundred and twenty-five were received from Labour Members, 86 from Conservative Members, 14 from Liberal Democrat Members, two each from Ulster Unionist and Plaid Cymru Members, and one each from Members representing the Social Democratic and Labour party, Democratic Unionist party and the Scottish nationalists. In addition, 16 parliamentary questions and one early-day motion have been tabled by eight Labour Members.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what requests have been made on behalf of Mr. Raghbir Singh for him to make compassionate or family visits under escort; and how many were agreed to. [34987]

Mr. Howard: Mr. Singh has made two requests to make a compassionate or family visit. On 31 January, he was granted permission to attend his father-in-law's funeral. On 3 June, an application to attend his niece's wedding was rejected.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the average time between the reception of letters over the case of Mr. Raghbir Singh and the issue of replies; and if replies to correspondents who were not hon. Members have been signed by Ministers. [34957]

Mr. Howard: A full answer is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Correspondence from members of the public is not routinely answered by Ministers.

Prisoners (Drug Tests)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisoners were found to be free of illegal drugs in each of the prisons in which drug tests have been undertaken in the past two years. [34955]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alan Walker to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 1 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the percentage of prisoners found to be free of illegal drugs in each of the prisons in which drug tests have been undertaken in the past two years.

Mandatory drug testing was introduced in eight first phase establishments from February 1995. From September 1995 to March 1996 the process of implementation to all other establishments was undertaken. Data on the full prison estate is therefore only available from April 1996 to date.

The attached table shows the percentage of prisoners providing a sample under the random mandatory drug testing programme which was found to be negative for drugs for each of the prisons from their date of commencement for mandatory drug testing to 10 June 1996. The number of prisoners tested to date at each prison is also shown.

A copy of this table has been placed in the Library.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated saving to business from the Deregulation (Employment in Bars) Order 1996. [34677]

Mr. Kirkhope: We understand that public houses have high rates of staff turnover and recruitment costs of more than £100 million a year. Extension of apprenticeship schemes to 16 and 17-year-olds should provide high quality, well trained and motivated recruits. Many would be likely to remain in the industry, thereby leading to significantly lower recruitment costs and to efficiency savings.

Morgan Report

Ms Janet Report: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 April, Official Report, column 524, if he will list the local authorities engaged in crime prevention partnership as endorsed in the Morgan report. [35136]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the animals welfare issues for which his Department has responsibility; [34302]

(2) if he will list (a) United Kingdom legislation, (b) EU legislation and (c) international treaties, conventions or other obligations concerning animal welfare for which his Department has responsibility. [34303]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

Domestic legislation

Game Act 1831

Protection of Animals Act 1911 (as amended)

Performing Animals (Regulation) Act 1925

Protection of Animals Act 1934

Pet Animals Act 1951 (as amended)

Cockfighting Act 1952

Abandonment of Animals Act 1960

Animals (Cruel Poisons) Act 1962

Animal Boarding Establishments Act 1963

Riding Establishments Acts 1964 and 1970

Conservation of Seals Act 1970

Breeding of Dogs Acts 1973 and 1991

Farriers (Registration) Acts 1975 and 1977

Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986

Protection against Cruel Tethering Act 1988

Deer Act 1991

Protection of Badgers Act 1992

Wild Mammals (Protection) Act 1996

EU legislation

Directive 86/609/EEC on the Approximation of Laws, Regulations and Administrative Provisions of the Member States Regarding the Protection of Animals Used for Experimental and Other Scientific Purposes (and subsequent amendments)

International treaties, conventions or other obligations

European Convention for the Protection of Vertebrate Animals used for Experimental and other Scientific Purposes

European Convention for the Protection of Pet Animals

The Home Office is responsible for animal welfare issues relating to animal experimentation and to domestic, captive and wild animals listed in the legislation set out above.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by group, division or other work unit the number of grades of staff working within his Department on animal welfare issues. [34304]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

The relevant work is undertaken by 1.8 senior executive officers, 2.7 higher executive officers, 1.5 executive officers, 8.5 administrative officers, 6.1 administrative assistants and secretarial support, and is overseen by a grade 6 officer as part of his wider responsibilities. The animal (scientific procedures) inspectorate comprises: one chief inspector, three superintendent inspectors, 15 inspectors and secretarial support.

Prisons (Capacity)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the certified normal accommodation for each gaol in England and Wales and what was the actual population for the last day for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [33438]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 20 June 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 1 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question requesting details of the actual population and certified normal accommodation for each jail in England and Wales.

The attached table shows the actual population and the in use certified normal accommodation (CNA) on 24 June 1996.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those parliamentary constituencies he has visited in the last three months on official business and those constituencies he intends to visit in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [33860]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have visited the following constituencies on official business in the last three months:

South Antrim

East Belfast

North Belfast

West Belfast

North Down

Fermanagh and South Tyrone

For security reasons I am unable to state those constituencies I intend to visit in the next three months.

Pacific Institute

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many employees of (a) the department of economic development, (b) the local enterprise development unit, (c) the Industrial Development board and (d) the Training and Employment Agency have been involved in courses of seminars delivered by the Pacific Institute. [34087]

Mr. Ancram: The numbers attending courses or seminars organised by the Pacific Institute are as follows:

(a) Department of Economic Development HQ—3 staff;

(b) The Local Enterprise Development Unit—Nil;

(c) The Industrial Development Board—20;

(d) The Training and Employment Agency—7.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's definition of a farm holding in relation to BSE. [34336]

Mr. Ancram: The Department defines a farm holding in relation to BSE as an independent agricultural establishment in which bovine animals are regularly kept or bred.

Northern Ireland (Entry to Negotiation) Act 1996

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to give effect to the Northern Ireland (Entry to Negotiation) Act 1996. [35347]

Sir Patrick Mayhew [pursuant to his answer, 8 May Official Report c.190]: Elections were held on 30 May, and the initial resulting meetings of both the negotiations and the forum have taken place.

Parliamentary approval for the consequential expenditure is being sought in a summer supplementary estimate for the Northern Ireland Office's administration, law, order, protective and miscellaneous services vote (class XV vote 1). Pending that approval further urgent expenditure to cover the costs of the elections and the initial costs of setting up and servicing the forum and negotiations estimated at £3,800,000 will be met by a further repayable advance from the contingencies fund.

EU Collection Centres

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many EU approved collection centres there were in Northern Ireland in (a) 1995 and (b) 1996. [33770]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 21 June]: There were 19 such centres in Northern Ireland in both these years.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what inter-departmental collaboration is undertaken to identify and restrict systematic housing benefit fraud by organised crime syndicates. [30449]

Mr. Heald: The Department's investigators collaborate with other agencies where appropriate, where offences may have been committed by the same individuals against more than one agency. The Department is also represented on a number of inter-agency bodies which share intelligence on organised criminal activity. Information is shared on all benefits, including housing benefit.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will announce the introduction of a national housing benefit computer system; and if he will make a statement on the progress of the development of the system. [33791]

Mr. Heald: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced in March this year that he was inviting the local authority associations to join in a study of how local authority systems can be linked, to share information with each other and with the new Benefits Agency computer system. In particular, this study would examine the merits of introducing a unified computer system covering all local authorities' housing benefit work. This work is in its early stages and a further announcement will be made in due course when the study team has reported its findings.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the distribution and average levels of hours of work, earnings and amounts of benefit paid under the disability working allowance. [33829]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is in the tables:

Compensation Recovery Unit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been recouped by the compensation recovery unit during the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96, by amount and type of benefit. [34274]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 27 June 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how much has been recouped by the Compensation Recovery Unit during the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 by amount and type of benefit.

The information is given in the attached table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Data is provisional and subject to amendment.

Adult Dependants Benefits

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the spending on increases to benefits for adult dependants during 1995–96 in respect of (a) incapacity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance and (c) unemployment benefit. [34243]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Estimated expenditure on adult dependency increases in 1995–96

	£ million
Incapacity benefit	770
Severe disablement allowance	5
Unemployment benefit	85

Estimates rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) male and (b) female claimants of (i) severe disablement allowance, (ii) incapacity benefit and (iii) unemployment benefit also claim an allowance for an adult dependant; and if he will indicate the average amount of benefit payable in each case. [34214]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Benefit	(a) Males to whom an adult dependency increase is payable	Average amount in payment £	(b) Females to whom an adult dependency increase is payable	Average amount in payment £
Severe disablement allowance	3,000	20.69	1,000	21.15
Incapacity benefit	361,000	31.75	5,000	34.16
Unemployment benefit	53,000	27.78	1,000	27.11

[1] Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.

[2] Severe disablement allowance and incapacity benefit figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample of cases recorded on the incapacity benefit computer system and exclude a small number of clerically paid cases. The figures are for claimants in receipt of an adult dependency increase at 29 February 1996.

[3] Unemployment benefit figures are taken from a 5 per cent. sample of unemployed claimants taken on 8 February 1996.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the costs of raising the invalid care allowance to (a) the level of unemployment benefit and (b) the level of retirement pension. [34227]

Mr. Burt: The estimated cost, at 1996–97 rates, of raising the rate of invalid care allowance to the levels of unemployment benefit and retirement pension is £150 million a year and £330 million a year respectively.

Note:

The rate of invalid care allowance is equivalent to the rate of retirement pension, category B (lower) based on spouse's contributions.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have been disqualified from invalid care allowance during 1995–96 broken down by reason for disqualification. [34226]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the tables.

Disallowed claims 1995–96

Reason	Numbers
Claimant under 16	8
Claimant over 65	2,072
Qualifying benefit not in payment	21,818
Caring less than 35 hours a week	201
Gainfully employed	1,891
In receipt of other benefits[1]	3,119
Other reasons	20,099
Total	49,208

Awards terminated 1995–96

Reason	Numbers

Qualifying benefit ceased	4,130
Overlapping benefits[1]	8,607
Gainfully employed	5,390
Other reasons[2]	6,575
Total	67,398

Notes:

[1] Underlying entitlement to invalid care allowance may remain with consequent entitlement to carers premium within the income-related benefits if appropriate.

[2] "Other reasons" includes disallowances on grounds of residence/presence, full-time education, more than one carer claiming for same disabled person, and carer claiming for more than one disabled person.

Freeline Service

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for the future of his Department's freeline service. [34634]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Milton Keynes, North-East (Mr. Butler) on 21 June, Official Report, column 629.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many IB50 questionnaires have been (a) issued and (b) returned; and how many people have been examined for the all-work test in the year ended April 1996. [34268]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows:

April 1995–March 1996

Questionnaires issued: 1,317,715

August 1995–March 1996[1]

Examinations conducted: 328,551

Notes:

[1] Separate figures for the number of people who have been examined for the all work test have been kept only since August 1995.

1. Data are provisional and subject to change.

2. No records are kept of questionnaires returned. However, a recent sampling exercise indicates that 93 per cent. of questionnaires are returned within the six weeks time limit.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who have been disallowed (a) incapacity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance, (c) income support with a disability premium and (d) credits, have subsequently signed on as unemployed during the year ended April 1996 and received (i) unemployment benefit, (ii) income support and (iii) both. [34267]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested.

Up to the end of March 1996 there were 40,257 claims for unemployment benefits from people who have been found capable of work under the provisions of the Incapacity for Work Act 1994.

National Insurance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in receipt of (a) family credit and (b) disability working allowance are currently earning below the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions. [34319]

Mr. Heald: There are 133,000 family credit awards and 2,752 disability working allowance awards where the main earner earns less than lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions.

Notes:

1. The exact number is quoted for disability working allowance. Number of family credit claims is rounded to the nearest thousand.

2. The lower earnings limit referred to for the purposes of this question is the amount for April 1995–April 1996 which was £58.00 per week.

3. Data for family credit and disability working allowance, is for October 1995 and January 1996 respectively.

Source:

1. Family credit 5 per cent. sample of awards.

2. Disability working allowance 100 per cent. count of claims.

3. Social security statistics 1995.

Overpayments

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recoverability determinations of overpayment have been made by adjudication officers under section 71 of the Social Security Admissions Act 1992 and equivalent previous provisions in each year since 1988; what amounts of such overpayments were recovered in cash terms and at constant prices, in each year since 1988 for which figures are available; and what estimate he has made of the annual recovery of overpayments which would be achieved under the provisions of the Social Security (Overpayments) Bill. [34784]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The Benefit Agency's 1996–97 target for recovering benefit overpayments is £91.5 million. In addition, £43.5 million is expected to be recovered under the agency's security and control programme, although the full amount will not be recovered during 1996–97.

The provisions of the Social Security (Overpayments) Bill 1996 would not increase the amount of overpaid benefit recovered. It has been introduced following a decision by a social security commissioner on overpayment recovery. The Bill reinstates the long standing policy and practice of correcting benefit in payment immediately an overpayment is discovered and allowing a decision on the overpayment to be made at a later date.

		Amount recovered[2]
Year	Number of recoverable determination[1]	£ million cash prices	£ million 1996–97 prices
1991–92	87,337	24.3	27.99
1992–93	256,078	43.5	48.15
1993–94	405,984	79.6	85.62
1994–95	590,218	116.0	122.47
1995–96	546,861	122.1	125.46

[1] The number of determinations includes recoveries under sections 71 and 74 of the Act. Although separate records are not held for section 71, they would constitute the bulk of recoverable overpayments.

[2] Includes a small amount arising from recovery of "official error" overpayments which cannot be disagregated as separate records are not held.

Records of overpayment recovery are not held prior to 1991–92.

Industrial Injury Pensions

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many industrial injury pensions were paid in the last complete year for which figures are available; what proportion was for industrial diseases; of these how many were for (a) pneumoconiosis, (b) asbestosis, (c) occupational deafness and (d) chronic bronchitis and emphysema. [34950]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

As at 1 April 1995 the number of industrial injuries disablement benefit assessments in payment was 237,208. Of these, 44,544 assessments or 18.78 per cent. were in respect of prescribed industrial diseases.

Assessments in payment at 1 April 1995

	Number
Pneumoconiosis[1]	12,913
Asbestos-related diseases[2]	1,794
Occupational deafness	14,201
Chronic bronchitis and/or emphysema	3,536

Notes:

[1] Pneumoconiosis, prescribed disease D1, includes pneumoconiosis, silicosis and asbestosis. Information relating to asbestosis cases alone could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[2] The figures relating to asbestos related diseases include assessments relating to diffuse mesothelioma, prescribed disease D3; carcinoma of the lung, prescribed disease D8, and bilateral diffuse pleural thickening, prescribed disease D9.

Benefits Agency: Based on a 10 per cent. sample with an allowance for late returns. A recipient may be in receipt of more than one pension assessment.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of industrial injury pensions paid in the last complete year for which figures are available relate to workers or former workers in (a) coal mining, (b) construction and (c) heavy engineering. [34951]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information is not available in the format requested.

As at 1 April 1995, the number of industrial injuries disablement benefit assessments in payment was 237,208. Of these, 14.76 per cent. or 35,014 relate to workers, or former workers in the coal mining industry, including deep coal mining, opencast coal working and the manufacture of solid fuel and 12.48 per cent. or 29,594 relate to workers, or former workers, in the construction industry.

Information relating to heavy engineering is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what will be the impact on (a) housing benefit and (b) mortgage interest payments of a benefit sanction for non-compliance with a jobseeker's direction during the two-week and four-week periods under the jobseeker's allowance. [35288]

Mr. Roger Evans: Sanctions will have no effect on housing benefit. Entitlement to mortgage interest payments will depend on whether a jobseeker can demonstrate that he is in hardship. Mortgage interest payments will continue where jobseeker's allowance is awarded under the hardship provision during the sanction.

Funeral Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to appoint an independent regulator of the funeral industry. [34411]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

I have no such plans.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what powers he has to regulate the funeral industry; and what self-regulatory structures exist; [34423]

(2) what powers he has to limit the prices charged by the funeral industry. [34422]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

I have no powers to limit prices charged by the funeral industry. Competition is the best regulator of prices. On self-regulation, I understand that codes of practices are operated by the relevant trade associations—the National Association of Funeral Directors, the Funeral Standards Council and the Society of Allied and Independent Funeral Directors.

HEALTH

Dental Practices, London

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental practices in each London borough council accepted NHS patients in 1995. [33105]

Mr. Malone: The information available is shown in the table.

General Dental Service: number of dentists who had additions to their register, by London local borough council for year ending 31 December 1995

Local authority	Number of dentists
All local authority districts	3,294
City of London	11
Barking and Dagenham	41
Barnet	169
Bexley	79
Brent	138
Bromley	136
Camden	143
Croydon	148
Ealing	146
Enfield	105
Greenwich	77
Hackney	65
Hammersmith and Fulham	93
Haringey	121
Harrow	89
Havering	74
Hillingdon	96
Hounslow	105
Islington	78
Kensington and Chelsea	74
Kingston upon Thames	71
Lambeth	113
Lewisham	114
Merton	62
Newham	70
Redbridge	98
Richmond upon Thames	84
Southwark	111
Sutton	90
Tower Hamlets	76
Waltham Forest	85
Wandsworth	145
City of Westminster	187

Additions to the register include instances of patients registering with a dentist after a break in attendance and instances of reinstatement of registrations that have been cancelled in error. Some dentists have contracts in more than one London Borough Council area. Where appropriate, these dentists have been included in the calculation for each London Borough Council area in which they are under contract.

Counts relate to registrations for which payments were authorised during the year. Payments are made one month in arrears.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those parliamentary constituencies he has visited in the last three months on official business and those constituencies he intends to visit in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [33863]

Mr. Dorrell: In the past three months, I have visited the following constituencies:

Kensington
City of London and Westminster, South
Welwyn Hatfield
Leeds, Central
Ealing, Southall
Bow and Poplar
Holborn and St. Pancras
Cambridge
Rutland and Melton
Meriden
Chelsea
Leicester, East
Coventry, South-west
Coventry, South-east
Coventry, North-east
City of Chester
Halton
Birmingham, Ladywood
Harrogate

The constituencies which I expect to visit in the next three months are as follows:

Leicester, South
City of London and Westminster, South
Chelsea
Hartlepool
Stratford upon Avon
Wigan

Burgner Report

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Burgner report on the responses to "Moving Forward" will be published. [34494]

Mr. Bowis: More than 500 submissions were received in response to the Government's consultation paper "Moving Forward". Mr. Burgner is now assessing these, and will be reporting his conclusions to me in due course.

Social Services Inspectorate (West Yorkshire)

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the work of the social services inspectorate in West Yorkshire over the past 10 years; [34337]

(2) what reports he has received from the social services inspectorate in the last 10 years in respect of individuals in West Yorkshire who had not received the service and assistance to which they were entitled under Government regulations; and if he will make a statement; [34338]

(3) if he will publish the reports from the social services inspectorate covering West Yorkshire for the past 10 years in respect of cases where local authorities social services departments have not complied with Government regulations or guidelines; and if he will make a statement. [34339]

Mr. Bowis: The work of the social services inspectorate—SSI—is described fully in the annual reports of the chief inspector, copies of which are available in the Library. In the regions, the SSI is primarily concerned with promoting departmental policy on the provision of social services, and monitoring and reporting on the work of social services departments. It is not part of its normal duties to report to Ministers on individual cases.

Since 1990, the inspectorate has carried out a number of formal inspections across the range of children's and adult services in each of the five metropolitan districts in West Yorkshire. Reports of these inspections are publicly available. Information on inspections carried out before 1990 is not available.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 509, what are the services for people seeking asylum on which his Department is spending an additional £25 million in 1996–97. [34789]

Mr. Bowis: The £25 million has been earmarked for a special grant to compensate social services departments for additional expenditure they may incur in support of children in need, as a result of changes or prospective changes to social security benefits for asylum seekers.

Mental Health

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to ensure that in-patient units whose patients include offenders with disturbed personalities have access to psychodynamic expertise. [34616]

Mr. Bowis: All patients should have access to an appropriate range of multi-disciplinary psychological assessments, interventions and therapies. These need to be more broadly based than the dynamic psychotherapies. Assessing and meeting the need for these different therapies is a matter for local health and social services.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action he has taken since March (a) to review and (b) to enhance the clinical training and experience in psychodynamic and forensic aspects of psychiatry of trainees in general psychiatry; [34624]

(2) what action he has taken since March to ensure that general psychiatrists taking up consultant posts with responsibility for secure beds have had a period of training in forensic psychiatry; [34621]

(3) what action he has taken since March to ensure that all trainees in general psychiatry spend a period of training under the supervision of a forensic psychiatrist. [34623]

Mr. Bowis: The standard and content of specialist medical training in psychiatry is the responsibility of the Royal College of Psychiatrists. The Department of Health holds regular meetings with the college to discuss the content of training and areas of mutual concern.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to ensure that professional clinical assessments by staff, other than those in psychiatry and nursing, are included in case conference reports, reviews and hospital transfers in respect of restricted patients. [34628]

Mr. Bowis: It is good practice to record any multidisciplinary assessments undertaken in respect of restricted patients. It is also usual for information to be transferred to the relevant agencies when patients leave hospital.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to ensure that medical members of mental health review tribunals receive a set of summary documents with reports from professionals responsible for the patient's care and treatment. [34606]

Mr. Bowis: It is good practice for the medical member to have sight of all documents concerning a patient and this is provided for in the Mental Health Review Tribunal Rules 1983.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to ensure that offender patients are given regular interviews with responsible medical officers and clinicians. [34618]

Mr. Bowis: This is good clinical practice.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to meet the training needs of (a) existing and (b) new members of mental health review tribunals. [34622]

Mr. Bowis: The introduction last year of national induction training for all tribunal members was an important new initiative which was carried through by the tribunal training group. The group has been considering the opportunities for training for existing members, which currently takes the form of discussion at regular members' meetings. The members' handbook has also been revised and the group is looking at whether a training video could be commissioned.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to ensure that reviews of practice following major untoward events involving patients detained under the Mental Health Acts are conducted by managers without direct line responsibility for the case in question. [34630]

Mr. Bowis: It is for local managers to decide who should conduct investigations into operational procedures following an untoward event.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken since March in consultation with relevant professional bodies to draw from the best practice in child protection and to develop an inter-agency approach to case management for mentally ill patients who are discharged into the community. [34615]

Mr. Bowis: There is already a considerable body of guidance and good practice on the case management of mentally ill patients who are discharged into the community. This includes guidance on the proper implementation of the care programme approach and inter-agency working.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to ensure that responsible medical officers seek the advice of a psychologist or other suitably qualified person, who is not a member of the clinical team responsible for the patient, in respect of behaviour modification programmes, particularly in the absence of valid patient consent. [34617]

Mr. Bowis: The Mental Health Act code of practice, which has been disseminated widely, emphasises the importance of an appropriately skilled individual supervising behaviour modification programmes. This individual may or may not be attached to the clinical team responsible for the patient.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions have taken place since March with (a) the Royal College of Psychiatrists, (b) the Royal College of Nursing and (c) other relevant bodies to plan for additional guidance to their memberships about the inquiries they should make in respect of criminal offences committed by patients detained under the Mental Health Acts. [34629]

Mr. Bowis: It is a matter for the professional organisations concerned to provide for additional guidance to their members.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what instructions or guidance have been given to social services departments to ensure that case records are transferred with patients restricted under the Mental Health Acts. [34627]

Mr. Bowis: The Department of Health guide to arrangements for inter-agency working for the care and protection of severely mentally ill people, "Building Bridges", which was published in November 1995, includes guidance on the use and disclosure of patient information. It calls for all agencies caring for people with mental health problems, whether restricted under mental health legislation or not, to have procedures to ensure that records are transferred, or copied, according to agency procedures, quickly when a patient moves district and/or local authority. It urges authorities to set sensible targets for the transfer of records, recommending transfer within two days in urgent cases and two weeks for less urgent cases. Copies of "Building Bridges" were sent to NHS agencies and social services departments.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken following the House of Lords decision in Home Secretary v. Oxford regional mental health review tribunal (1988) AC120 to ensure that tribunals may adjourn an application to give time for further examination of a patient's mental health before any discharge decision is made. [34614]

Mr. Bowis: Tribunals already have powers to adjourn before a final decision on whether to discharge is taken.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to ensure that only approved social workers are assigned the task of social supervision of restricted patients. [34609]

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities and probation services, from which social supervisors are drawn, are aware of their responsibility to ensure that only suitably qualified and experienced staff are appointed as social supervisors of restricted patients.

Mental Handicap

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of mentally handicapped children currently in (a) local authority residential care, (b) private residential care and (c) voluntary residential care (i) in the north-west and (ii) nationally; and what are the corresponding figures for 10 years previously. [34105]

Mr. Bowis: The table shows centrally available information on children and, to enable comparison between years, figures for people of all ages in homes for children.

Residents in residential care for children with learning disabilities as at 31 March

[1] North west standard statistical region.

[2] Figures are not available before 1987.

[3] Includes both children and adults receiving care in homes for children with learning disabilities.

[4] Before 1994, information was collected on children under 16, so the figures cannot be compared directly.

Clinical Psychologists

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department has taken since March to ensure the funding of an adequate number of training places for clinical psychologists. [34620]

Mr. Malone: The national health service executive issued education and training planning guidance on 17 June 1996, EL (96)46, asking education and training consortiums to consider their future demand and the level of training investment needed to ensure an adequate supply of qualified clinical psychologists. The NHS executive maintains a national overview. The number of NHS-funded training places is planned to rise by 11.8 per cent. in 1996–97.

Forensic Social Work

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what target date has been set for relevant Government Departments to require all social supervisors of restricted patients to acquire competency in forensic social work. [34597]

Mr. Bowis: It is for individual local authorities and probation services to identify the needs of their staff for training in forensic social work and to make appropriate arrangements. The competencies and training guidance in forensic social work which the Department of Health commissioned from the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work, offers guidance to local authorities and probation services on how this can be achieved.

Food Regulations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes have been made to the eligibility criteria for milk, vitamins and other foods listed in the Welfare Food Regulations 1988. [34860]

Mr. Horam: The only change to the eligibility criteria has been to reflect forthcoming changes in the social security scheme when those entitled to an income-based jobseeker's allowance will also be eligible to receive welfare foods.

Local Authority and Health Services Staff

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department has now published its advice on the role of local authority and health services staff as a single document. [34607]

Mr. Bowis: The Department published guidance on inter-agency working, "Building Bridges", in November 1995, copies of which are available in the Library. The document provides advice to a range of professionals, including health and local authority social services staff, involved with the planning and delivery of services to severely mentally ill people.

Homicide Inquiries

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to advise authorities mandated to set up inquires under NHS executive guidance HSG(94)27 regarding giving families of victims the opportunity to be present at any homicide inquiry. [34619]

Mr. Bowis: The national health service executive already encourages health authorities to keep families of victims informed of an inquiry's progress and to afford them the opportunity to give evidence.

Regional Health Service Managers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the records for staff on senior managers pay point 9 or above, employed by the former regional health authorities, were transferred to the national health service management executive on incorporation in April 1996; and if he will make a statement. [33613]

Mr. Horam: Employment records for regional health authority staff, including those at SMP9 or above, whose employment transferred to the Department of Health were retained in the regional offices when those offices became part of the national health service executive on the abolition of regional health authorities.

Information Management Group

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to strengthen the senior management of the information management group. [35065]

Mr. Horam: The management of the national health service for coding and classification—a branch of the information management group—has been strengthened by the designation of two deputy directors. There are no other plans to change the management of the information management group.

Statutory Measures

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many statutory measures his Department introduced in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) between 1 January 1996 and 1 May 1996 which had the effect of repealing one or more previous statutory instruments without replacing them with a new regulation. [35031]

Mr. Horam: This information was included in the list of regulations placed in the House Library by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 8 May.

Read Codes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) evaluation arrangements, (b) business case, (c) value-for-money submission and (d) competitive tendering procedures were submitted to the Treasury for a computerised medical terms language prior to the selection of the Read codes system. [35071]

Mr. Horam: The decision to negotiate a purchase of the copyright for Read terms rested on a joint recommendation from the British Medical Association and the Royal College of General Practitioners following an evaluation of coding and classification systems undertaken by the joint computing group of these organisations.

As to the matters of a business case and value for money, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health gave him on 18 October 1995, Official Report, columns 280-81.

Since the Read codes were a unique product for which purchase was being negotiated, there could be no question of a tendering process.

Shellfish

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of illness in Devon have been reported as a result of eating shellfish within the last 12 months; how many of these cases emanated from plants licensed by the Government; and if each case has been notified to the local environmental health officer. [35068]

Mr. Horam: The public health laboratory service has received information on two cases of shellfish-related illness in Devon during the past 12 months. For the same period, there were 82 reported cases of illness in England and Wales associated with the consumption of shellfish, of which 70 cases were linked to shellfish originating from harvesting areas or purification plants in and around the south-western region.

Shellfish purification plants are approved by local authority environmental health departments. Environmental health departments would normally be aware of illness linked to plants in their area.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of illness arising from consumption of shellfish have been reported in each of the last five years. [35070]

Mr. Horam: Cases of shellfish-related illness reported to the public health laboratory service were as follows:

1991: 244

1992: 186

1993: 98

1994: 104

1995: 78.

Alcohol (Young People)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to reduce the exposure of young people to high alcohol brands of lemonades and cordials. [35023]

Mr. Bowis: The Government are aware of concerns about the appeal of certain alcoholic drinks to young people. We welcome the code of practice for the packaging, marketing and sale of alcoholic drinks the Portman Group published in April. The Portman Group and other signatories will monitor the code, and we shall be following this carefully to see how effective it is in practice.

St. Bartholomew's and Royal London Hospitals

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about his Department's current plans on (a) St. Bartholomew's and (b) the Royal London hospitals. [35207]

Mr. Malone: A statement which, among other issues, referred to St. Bartholomew's hospital and the Royal London hospital, was made to the House on 5 April 1995.

Computer Aided Medical Systems plc

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to amend the financial arrangements between the NHS and its centre for coding and classification in Loughborough and Computer Aided Medical Systems plc. [35067]

Mr. Horam: A study of the licensing arrangements between Computer Aided Medical Systems plc and the national health service has been commissioned with a view to their simplification and a reduction in their associated costs. the National Audit Office is examining the relationships between the NHS centre for coding and classicisations and Computer Aided Medical Systems plc. The arrangement referred to in the reply I gave the hon. Member on 4 June Official Report, at column 383, by which the same financial consultant oversaw the accounting and book-keeping of both bodies, has been changed. The consultant now deals only with the NHS centre for coding and classification.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent in each of the last five years to discourage the use of (a) nicotine, (b) alcohol, (c) unnecessary medicinal drugs, (d) cannabis, (e) ecstasy and (f) heroin. [34895]

Mr. Bowis: The table shows the amount spent on behalf of the Department of Health on publicity and prevention initiatives for smoking and drug and solvent misuse over the last five years. Initiatives for drug and solvent misuse cover cannabis, ecstasy and heroin. No medicinal product can be licensed if it does not have a medicinal purpose. The figures for alcohol relate to sensible drinking messages and messages to people who may be having alcohol problems.

Financial year	Smoking £	Alcohol £	Unnecessary medicinal drugs	Drug and solvent misuse
1992–93	5,438,000	1,613,000	None	4,965,023
1993–94	8,256,000	1,548,000	None	5,296,284
1994–95	10,538,000	819,000	None	4,443,396
1995–96	6,342,000	825,000	None	5,000,000
1996–97	6,500,000	825,000	None	5,000,000

B-12 Unit, Chelsea and Westminster NHS Trust

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the B-12 unit located at the Chelsea and Westminster NHS trust has independent provider status; and if he will make a statement. [34952]

Mr. Malone: The vitamin B-12 unit is part of the Charing Cross and Westminster medical school, located on the Chelsea and Westminster hospital site.

Ecstasy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of deaths involving ecstasy use in the last five years were attributed to (a) overheating, (b) excess water intake and (c) other causes. [34892]

Mr. Bowis: It is not possible to provide percentages in the way requested. The Office for National Statistics attributes these deaths to an underlying cause of abuse of ecstasy, or poisoning with ecstasy, not to any particular complication of the drug which may have been mentioned as having led to death.

Cannabis

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to ensure that cannabis or further derivatives of cannabis are available to those suffering from multiple sclerosis, cerebral palsy, glaucoma and the effects of chemotherapy. [34894]

Mr. Bowis: Nabilone, a synthetic cannabinoid, is already licensed for use in the treatment of certain conditions. Should any company wish to apply for a licence for medicines derived from cannabis, the Medicines Control Agency would consider this on the basis of the product's quality, safety and efficacy.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many parliamentary questions to his Department have been referred for answer to the chief executive or other senior official of a non-departmental agency for which he has responsibility so far in the 1995–96 parliamentary Session. [34953]

Mr. Horam: A search of the parliamentary database on POLIS—parliamentary on-line information system—database has identified a total of 22 such parliamentary questions which were answered up to and including 24 June in the 1995–96 parliamentary Session. This represents less than 1 per cent. of the total.

Health Care Reforms

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which European countries (a) signed and (b) refused to sign the charter on reforming health care produced by the World Health Organisation conference on European health care reforms in Ljubljana on 17 to 20 June; [35141]

(2) which European countries were represented at the World Health Organisation conference on European health care reforms in Ljubljana on 17 to 20 June by (a) health Ministers and (b) other officials; [35131]

(3) if he will list the recommendations in the charter on reforming health care produced by the World Health Organisation conference on European health care reforms in Ljubljana on 17 to 20 June which the Government do not accept indicating the consideration underlying the Government's policy; and what other factors led the Government not to endorse the charter. [35142]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health does not have full details of the delegations which attended the Ljubijana conference. The charter on reforming health care was adopted by consensus.

The charter was developed by the World Health Organisation principally for countries from central and eastern European and the newly independent states of the former Soviet Union whose health care structures are less well developed than those of western European countries. The reform of the national health service has continued to evolve in line with published targets and standards. The Government will continue to pursue this course for securing the highest possible standard of health care for the people of this country.

Child Abuse Inquiries

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost to public funds of the Leeways report chaired by Elizabeth Lawson QC. [35127]

Mr. Bowis: This was an inquiry set up by the London borough of Lewisham. I have no information on costs.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost to public funds of the inquiry (a) into child care in Staffordshire and (b) the report "The Pindown Experience and the Protection of Children". [35126]

Mr. Bowis: The inquiry and report were funded by Staffordshire county council. I have no information on costs.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) reports and (b) inquiries have been commissioned into child abuse by his Department since 1979. [35130]

Mr. Bowis: Two statutory inquiries into child abuse have been commissioned by the Secretary of State for Health since 1979: the Cleveland inquiry 1988 and the Leicestershire inquiry 1992.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost to public funds of the residential staffs inquiry chaired by Lady Howe indicating separately the cost of the report, "The Quality of Care". [35138]

Mr. Bowis: The inquiry was set up by the National Joint Council for Local Authorities' Administrative, Professional, Technical and Clerical Services and published by the Local Government Board. I have no information on its costs.

Royal London Hospital

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the contract for the private finance initiative—PFI—rebuilding of the Royal London hospital to be signed; if he will publish the terms of the contract; and what PFI funding will be provided. [35208]

Mr. Malone: The Royal Hospitals NHS trust issued an invitation to negotiate for this work in April, and formal responses to this invitation are due by 2 September. The trust will then choose a preferred bidder and work up a full business case for approval by the NHS executive and Her Majesty's Treasury. It is too early to say what the capital value of the scheme is likely to be, or when the contract is likely to be signed.

The terms of the contract will be commercial in confidence.

Edgware General Hospital

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will announce the details of the replacement emergency facilities to be established at Edgware general hospital. [35073]

Mr. Dorrell: A working group was established last December to make recommendations to Barnet health authority about medical input to the casualty service at Edgware hospital. It is meeting on 4 July to finalise its recommendations, which will then be published. Proposals for implementing the working group's recommendations will be made public when they are sent to members of the health authority on 24 July. The health authority will reach its decision on these proposals on 31 July.

Health Service Staff Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 934, if he will update the figures on employment of non-NHS staff. [35206]

Mr. Malone: Figures for 1995–96 expenditure are not yet available.

Private Nursing Homes

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 88, if it is his Department's policy that health authority inspection reports into private nursing homes should be available to the public. [35210]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 June, Official Report, column 88.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of excess deaths that occurred in each period of excessive photo-chemical fog in each of the past five years. [35026]

Mr. Horam: A recent study by Professor Ross Anderson, a member of the Department of Health's committee on the medical effects of air pollutants—COMEAP—has shown that day-to-day variations of ozone concentrations are, during the warmer months of the year, related to daily mortality figures. It is not possible, however, to provide a precise estimate of the excess deaths produced by exposure to these pollutants during recent years.

The Department of Health has recently established a sub-group of COMEAP with the specific objective of improving estimates of the size of the effects of air pollutants on health in the United Kingdom. An initial report is expected in 1997.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

35. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he intends to publish proposals to amend the legal aid scheme. [34017]

42. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what new proposals he has to reduce the total cost of legal aid. [33700]

Mr. Streeter: The Lord Chancellor expects very shortly to announce his proposals for the reform of the legal aid scheme.

37. Mr. Steen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to ensure that legal aid is not available to nationals of countries which do not have reciprocal arrangements for United Kingdom nationals. [33695]

Mr. Streeter: It would not be right to place nationality restrictions on the availability of legal aid for those faced with criminal charges in this country. The Lord Chancellor will announce his proposals for fundamental reform of the legal aid system shortly. An important part of these reforms will be to ensure that the money available for civil legal aid goes to those in the greatest need.

Mr. Flynn: to ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list by decile the amounts paid from, and the number of recipients of, the legal aid fund in each of the last five years. [35027]

Mr. Streeter: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Court Buildings

38. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the process for revising the names of court buildings in England. [33696]

Mr. Streeter: Magistrates courts are locally managed by magistrates courts committees under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1979. Any decision concerning the name of a magistrates courthouse remains that of the relevant committee. There is no fixed administrative or statutory procedure for revising the name of a county or Crown court building. However, the decision to make a name change would depend on a number of factors including, for example, location, historical connections and geographical jurisdiction.

King Edward VIII (Records)

39. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he estimates that all the records relating to the activities of King Edward VIII will be in the public domain. [33697]

Mr. Streeter: Withheld public records relating to the late Duke of Windsor are being re-reviewed by the Departments which hold them, and will be released in the Public Record Office at the appropriate time.

Landowners

41. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has for legislation to abolish the liability for landowners to meet the cost of chancel repairs. [33699]

Mr. Streeter: The Law Commission has recommended in its report "Property Law: Liability for Chancel Repairs", Law Commission No. 152, that the liability of individual landowners for chancel repairs should be abolished, and the Government have decided that the Church authorities should be consulted further before a decision is taken as to whether this recommendation should be implemented.

Mental Incapacity

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has to amend the law in respect of mental incapacity. [33694]

Mr. Streeter: The Government announced in January 1996 that they intend to publish a consultation paper on mental incapacity. Any decisions regarding legislation will be made in the light of the outcome of consultation.

Magistrates Court, Bolton

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what progress he can report with plans to build a new magistrates court in Bolton; and if he will make a statement. [33698]

Mr. Streeter: Procedures for obtaining privately financed solutions to magistrates courts' accommodation needs are being finalised. Bolton metropolitan district council will be invited to submit proposals once a revised programme and the procedures are published.

Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints he has received on the operation of the solicitors disciplinary tribunal in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [33693]

Mr. Streeter: My Department receives very few complaints about the solicitors disciplinary tribunal. The tribunal is entirely independent from the Lord Chancellor, although the Department has responsibility for the payment of allowances to the tribunal's lay members.

Judicial Studies Board

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the status of the Judicial Studies Board. [35471]

Mr. Streeter: I have today placed in the Library a memorandum of understanding which gives the Judicial Studies Board greater autonomy in the organisation of judicial training, and greater responsibility for planning and financial control. It is right that the nature and content of judicial training should be primarily a matter for the judiciary, if it is to remain relevant to the judiciary's needs. I am convinced that the memorandum will, over time, help the board to enhance the quality of the training facilities made available to the judiciary, and to improve the advice and assistance which the JSB gives towards the training of magistrates and chairmen and members of tribunals.

WALES

Wheelchair Provision

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the wheelchair users and the organisations representing wheelchair users with whom he has consulted concerning the options that he is considering for the future of wheelchair provision in Wales; and if he will make a statement on progress on this issue. [34402]

Mr. Hague: Discussions on the future provision of wheelchair services in Wales are continuing. Once detailed options have been identified, the views of voluntary organisations representing wheelchair users will be sought.

Sport (Schools)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many responses he has received on his consultation document, "Young People and Sport in Wales", and what views respondents expressed on the publication of sports results by schools in their annual report. [34425]

Mr. Gwilyn Jones: We have received several responses on the policy document "Young People and Sport in Wales" since its launch in September 1995. The document does not request views on the publication of sports results by schools in their annual report.

Swansea Institute of Higher Education (Overseas Courses)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received about the management of overseas courses by the Swansea Institute of Higher Education; and if he will make a statement. [34734]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None.

Housing Starts

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total of housing starts in each Welsh local authority in each of the past 11 years. [34893]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information is given in the table:

EU Funding

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 20 May, Official Report, columns 65–66, if he will list for each of the last three years those applications to the European Union for financial support for education and training projects on which he has received information. [34488]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 26 June, Official Report, column 155.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of Pembrokeshire NHS trust regarding the piloting of the Read codes computerised medical terms language in a clinical setting at Withybush hospital, Haverfordwest. [35066]

Mr. Hague: None.

Child Abuse Inquiries

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost to public funds of the report into child abuse in north Wales by Nicola Davies QC. [35137]

Mr. Hague: The cost was £99,500.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of public funds of "Accommodating Children—A Review of Children's Homes in Wales" by the social services inspectorate of the Welsh Office. [35139]

Mr. Hague: Part of the survey work in respect of this report was undertaken by an outside consultancy and cost £20,000.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost of public funds of (a) the Tymawr community home inquiry and (b) the report by Gareth Williams QC and John McCreadie. [35125]

Mr. Hague: The inquiry was undertaken by Gwent county council and I have no information in respect of costs.

DEFENCE

Porton Down and Nancekuke

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many former and present staff who have worked at the chemical warfare establishments at Porton Down and Nancekuke have claimed compensation since 1966 for injury or illnesses arising out of their employment at the establishments. [34468]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Since 1989, two service personnel have submitted claims for compensation in respect of injury or illness arising out of their employment at Porton Down or Nancekuke. It is not possible to establish the number of service personnel who may have claimed in the period 1966 to 1989, or the number of civilian personnel who may have claimed since 1966 without disproportionate cost, since records of claims are not held in a way that would readily provide the data requested.

RAF Accidents

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the accident involving Royal Air Force Tornado serial number ZD743 in August 1995; and what is the current status of the aircraft. [34648]

Mr. Soames: RAF Tornado ZD743 is undergoing repair following damage to the underside of the fuselage when landing at RAF Bruggen on 9 March 1995.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the accident involving Royal Air Force Harrier serial number ZG510 at Gioia del Colle, Italy; and what is the current status of the aircraft. [34652]

Mr. Soames: Some damage to sensors in the nose area and canopy of RAF Harrier ZG510 was discovered after landing at Gioia del Colle on 7 August 1995. The equipment was repaired and the aircraft returned to service.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the accident involving a Royal Air Force Wessex helicopter at Sennybridge training area in autumn 1995; and what is the current status of the aircraft. [34654]

Mr. Soames: A RAF Wessex was involved in a landing incident at Sennybridge on 19 October 1995 as a result of an uncommanded yaw. The aircraft landed safely but heavily, causing the tailcone skin to tear. Following an engineering investigation, the damage was repaired and the aircraft returned to service.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of repairing Royal Navy Sea Harrier serial number XZ440 following its accident in October 1989; and what is the current status of the aircraft. [34646]

Mr. Soames: The cost of repairing Royal Navy Sea Harrier XZ440 was some £1.5 million. The aircraft is currently undergoing conversion from FRS Mk1 to FA Mk2 standard. Once the avionic and equipment installation programme is complete, the aircraft will be returned to service.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the accident involving Royal Air Force Jaguar serial number XX974; and what is the current status of the aircraft. [34650]

Mr. Soames: A search of RAF flight safety records from the beginning of 1995 has revealed two occurrences of a technical nature involving RAF Jaguar XX974, none of which has resulted in any aircraft damage. The aircraft is still in service.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the accident involving Royal Air Force Tornado serial number ZA365 during 1995; and what is the current status of the aircraft. [34645]

Mr. Soames: A search of RAF flight safety records has revealed no accident or incident involving RAF Tornado ZA365 during 1995. A bird struck the fuselage of the aircraft during a training sortie over the Moray Firth on 23 June 1994. The damage to the panel and fuselage requires complex repair work. The aircraft has not yet returned to service.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the accident involving Royal Air Force Chinook serial number ZA681; and what is the current status of the aircraft. [34649]

Mr. Soames: A bird struck the nose and windscreen area of RAF Chinook ZA681 during a training sortie from RAF Wittering to RAF Odiham on 5 December 1994. There was no damage to the aircraft, which is still in service.

Mr.Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the accident involving a Royal Air Force Tornado at Bruggen on 23 February; and what is the current status of the aircraft. [34653]

Mr. Soames: A RAF Tornado suffered suspected gearbox failure and subsequent fire shortly after taking off from RAF Bruggen on 23 February 1996. The aircraft landed safely and the fire was extinguished. The aircraft is being examined and the extent of damage has yet to be formally assessed.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of repairing Tornado serial number ZD844; and what are the estimated dates of completion of repairs and return of the aircraft to service. [34651]

Mr. Soames: The estimated cost of repairing Tornado ZD844 is some £430,000. The forecast date for completion of the structural repairs is July 1997. It is expected that ZD844 will re-enter service following a major servicing later that year.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current damage and repair status of Royal Air Force Jaguar serial number XZ396. [34647]

Mr. Soames: Jaguar XZ396 is a serviceable aircraft currently flying with a squadron based at RAF Coltishall. The aircraft has a small dent in the rear fuselage. The damage does not impair the structural integrity of the aircraft and repair has been deferred until the next scheduled major maintenance.

Visiting Forces Act

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British citizens have been (a) detained, (b) arrested, (c) charged, (d) acquitted and (e) prosecuted by those acting under the Visiting Forces Act 1951 in each year since 1966 to date. [34310]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The service courts and service authorities of a country to which section 2 of the Visiting Forces Act 1952 applies may exercise over persons subject to their jurisdiction all the powers conferred on them by the law of that country. Citizens of the United Kingdom can be prosecuted or tried under this provision only if they are members of a force of the country concerned. My Department is not aware of any such cases.

Surplus Equipment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what have been the total receipts for the sale of surplus equipment in each of the three services in each of the past five years. [35024]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Disposal Sales Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Keith Ellenden to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 1 July 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about receipts from the sale of surplus equipment as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Disposal Sales Agency.

Total receipts from the sale of surplus equipment in each of the three services in each of the past five years are shown below.

Naval Manning Agency

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about Defence Agency status for the organisation of the naval secretary and director general of naval manpower. [35349]

Mr. Soames: I am delighted to announce that today the organisation of the naval secretary and director general of naval manpower is to be established as a Defence agency of the Ministry of Defence. It will be entitled the Naval Manning Agency, NMA.

The NMA's owner will be the Second Sea Lord and Commander-in-Chief Naval Home Command, with whom the chief executive's headquarters will be collocated within HM naval base, Portsmouth.

The NMA is to ensure that sufficient manpower is available on the trained strength and effectively deployed in peace, crisis, major crisis and war.

As the first chief executive, the naval secretary, Rear Admiral F.M. Malbon, will be offered new opportunities to build on the current organisation's professional expertise and high performance standards. In maintaining the NMA's vital contribution to front line capability, the naval secretary, through the greater delegations and authority afforded by agency status, will actively seek to improve the efficiency and value for money of his organisation.

The naval secretary has been set the following key targets for the first year of operation:

(1) Greater than 93 per cent. of officer billets to be filled.

(2) Greater than 93.5 per cent. of naval rating/royal marines other ranks billets to be filled.

(3) Total strength of naval personnel to be within 1 per cent. of the set requirement.

(4) Greater than 60 per cent. of officers to receive more than four months' notice for change of appointment.

(5) Greater than 98 per cent. of ratings/other ranks to receive more than the specified notice for change of employment.

(6) The number of occurrences where minimum time ashore criteria are not met to be fewer than 150 per year.

(7) To achieve a progressive annual 10 per cent. reduction in the number of manpower gaps.

(8) To conduct two benchmarking exercises with comparable personnel management organisations per year.

TRANSPORT

Quiet Aircraft (Investment)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to ensure that investments in quiet aircraft by United Kingdom airlines are protected against the incursion of fifth freedom airlines. [33852]

Mr. Norris: All civil flights, including fifth freedom flights, operated from the UK must comply with the provisions of the EU directive and UK regulations governing the phasing out of noisier, "Chapter 2" jet aircraft. Scheduled fifth freedom services are agreed by negotiation with our bilateral partners, following consultation with UK airlines. On 19 June my noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping announced new measures aimed at tightening controls on fifth freedom charter services operated from the UK by foreign airlines. Except where flights are permitted under EC legislation, the Government's policy is to allow passenger charters to be operated by fifth freedom carriers only where no UK airline can offer a suitable aircraft.

Cycle Helmets

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to make the wearing of cycle helmets compulsory; and if he will make a statement. [34825]

Mr. Norris: The Government actively promote the benefits of cycle helmet wearing, but we have no plans to make them compulsory.

Aviation Standards

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) pursuant to his answer of 17 June, Official Report, column 340, if he will list the aircraft type, registration number, flight destination and flight number of the Air Operation flight where the certificate of airworthiness was withdrawn; [34803]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of air operation certificates issued to Air Operations Europe. [34808]

Mr. Norris [further to his answer, 17 June 1996, Official Report, c. 340]: The certificate of airworthiness for this aircraft was withdrawn after problems were found during routine maintenance and the aircraft was therefore not allocated to any particular flight at the time. Details concerning aircraft and the air operator certificates of airlines are held by the relevant regulatory organisations—in this case the Swedish civil aviation authority.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what inspections the Civil Aviation Authority has undertaken on the DC10 operated by Excalibur Airways. [34807]

Mr. Norris: The Civil Aviation Authority carried out 12 inspections on the operation of the DC10 by Excalibur Airways in order to be satisfied that the operator was competent to operate the type for public transport in accordance with the company's air operator certificate. Since approval was given for such operations, a further two inspections have been carried out. The CAA advises me that this is a representative inspection profile.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many complaints were received by the Air Transport Users Council in each of the last five years; and how many of them in each year related to airline or aircraft safety; [34805]

(2) if he will list the number and nature of complaints received by the Air Transport Users Council relating to services operated by Air Operations Europe for each of the last three years. [34806]

Mr. Norris: The hon. Member should seek this information from the Air Transport Users Council at 103 Kingsway, London WC2B 6QX.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the permits issued to Ghana Airways to fly into and out of the United Kingdom. [34804]

Mr. Norris: Ghana Airways operates scheduled passenger services between Ghana and the United Kingdom and applies for winter and summer seasonal permits to operate services. The current permit for summer 1996 allows the airline to operate four services per week between London and Accra and vice versa, in accordance with the air services arrangements agreed between our two countries.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 21 June, Official Report, column 645, how many complaints had been received regarding the safety of aircraft registered in Bulgaria; and if he will list the airlines involved. [34810]

Mr. Norris: Since 1991, the Department has received 36 passenger complaints alleging various problems or deficiencies with flights using aircraft registered in Bulgaria. The Department asked the UK Civil Aviation Authority to conduct an independent assessment in Bulgaria to ensure that International Civil Aviation Organisation standards were being applied. This assessment was carried out in February 1996.

Two Bulgarian airlines operate passenger flights to the UK. They are Balkan Airlines and Air Via.

Parking Appeals

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many appeals have so far been submitted to the parking appeals service adjudicators for London; how many of these have been determined; and how many have been successful. [34940]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is set out in the Parking Committee for London's annual report and accounts, a copy of which is in the Library.

Heavy Goods Vehicle Licences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of drivers entitled to drive class 1 and class 2 heavy goods vehicles whose licences have been issued since 1991. [34811]

Mr. Norris: As explained in my reply of 17 June, Official Report, column 339, the terms class 1 and class 2 heavy goods vehicle are no longer used. The total number of large goods vehicle licences issued since 1991 is 1,019,355. Information on the number of drivers to whom these licences have been issued is not readily available.

Traffic Area Offices (Cardiff and Manchester)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a copy of the business case for the closure of the traffic area offices in Cardiff and Manchester. [34809]

Mr. Norris: The strategic case for restructuring the traffic area network was set out in the "Efficiency Scrutiny of the Traffic Area Network" report published in June 1995. I have placed in the Library a further copy of the report and the costings for the current proposals.

Vehicle Inspectorate

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list for each of the last three years the number of "s" endorsed prohibition notices issued by the vehicle inspectorate; [34801]

(2) whether delayed prohibition notices count towards the enforcement targets set for the vehicle inspectorate by his Department; [34799]

(3) in what circumstances (a) his Department and (b) the Vehicle Inspectorate are able to prohibit United Kingdom drivers from driving over their permitted hours when stopped at the roadside during roadside checks; [34802]

(4) if he will list for each of the last five years the number of prosecutions undertaken by the vehicle inspectorate (a) in the Crown courts (b) in magistrates courts. [34800]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions on prohibitions and prosecutions.

In 1994–95, 3,219 of all prohibitions issued were endorsed "S". Information for previous years can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Delayed prohibition notices do count towards the enforcement targets set for the Vehicle Inspectorate (VI).

VI does not have the power to prohibit United Kingdom drivers from driving over the permitted hours when stopped at the roadside during roadside checks.

Information for the last five years on the number of prosecutions taken by VI at a) Crown Court and b) Magistrates' Court can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Severn Crossings

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 32, what repair work has had to be undertaken on the approach roads to the original Severn bridge as a result of defective steelwork; and what has been the effect on traffic flows. [34946]

Mr. Watts: No repair work has been undertaken on the approach roads to the original Severn bridge as a result of defective steelwork.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of traffic used each of the Severn river crossings in each week since its opening. [34886]

Mr. Watts: In each of the first three weeks of the new Severn crossing being opened, approximately 75 per cent. of traffic has used the new bridge and 25 per cent. the old.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the difference between the total costs of the second Severn crossing (a) under the present arrangements and (b) financed entirely by public funds; and if he will make a statement. [35028]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what estimate he has made of the difference between the total costs of the Second Severn Crossing (a) under the present arrangements and (b) financed entirely by public funds.

A comparison of the 4 private sector bids submitted in 1989 with the estimated cost of procuring the Crossing using public funds showed that the bid submitted by the winning tenderer, Severn River Crossing Plc, was cheaper and represented the best value of money. Utilising the private sector also meant that the Crossing could be provided much earlier than would have been possible if it had to compete for scarce road programme funds.

Permanent Way

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries have occurred in each year since 1979 arising from unauthorised access to the permanent way by (i) children under 16 years and (b) adults. [34735]

Mr. Watts: The number of fatal accidents and serious injuries to children under 16 years and adults arising from unauthorised access to the permanent way is shown in the following table:

Year	Fatal accidents			Serious injuries
	Adults	Children	Total	Adults	Children	Total
1979	121	13	363	41	24	65
1980	127	13	140	45	10	55
1981	129	18	147	34	12	46
1982	120	10	130	30	20	50
1983	131	15	146	37	27	64
1984	127	19	146	42	30	72
1985	137	13	150	49	22	71
1986	152	10	162	50	22	72

1994–95	128	6	134	52	9	61
Total	2,171	192	2,363	725	287	1,012

1. Figures exclude suicides and attempted suicides.

2. Figures for 1979 to 1990 cover calendar year 1 January to 31 December.

3. Figures for 1991 cover the period 1 January 1991 to 31 March 1991.

4. Figures to 1992–93 to 1994–95 cover the financial year 1 April to 31 March.

Statistics for 1995–96 are not yet available and will be published in the Health and Safety Executive's annual report on railway safety in Great Britain, copies for which are placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Cones Hotline

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will produce a report on the total (a) costs of and (b) number of calls received by, separately identifying non-effective calls, to the cones hotline in each year of its existence. [35025]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave him on 26 March 1996 at column 547 and on 10 July 1995 at column 403.

Royal Train

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost of operating the royal train in 1995–96; on how many occasions it was used; and by whom. [33656]

Mr. Watts: The total cost to the Exchequer of royal travel by train in 1995–96 was £1.9 million, including train preparation, maintenance and British Transport police security. The train was used on 31 occasions by Her Majesty the Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal and the Duchess of Kent.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 613, which members of the royal family used the royal train in 1994–95; and for what specific purpose in each case. [33735]

Mr. Watts: During 1994–95 the train was used by Her Majesty the Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal and the Duchess of Kent. On each occasion, the train was used in connection with their public duties.

Central Railway

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library the complete set of documents submitted to him by Central Railway plc under the Transport and Works Act 1992. [35072]

Mr. Watts: Central Railway plc, at our request, provided the Library with a complete set of the application documents shortly after their TWA application was made on 20 May. I understand that the Library reference number for the documents is TW27.

Wheel Loss

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will conduct a survey of wheel loss incidents to determine the number of wheels lost off trucks and buses in the United Kingdom every year. [34870]

Mr. Norris: I have asked my Department to investigate, together with the vehicle inspectorate, ways of improving the collection and collation of data to give a more accurate assessment of the incidence of wheel loss.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those wheel fixings that his Department has assessed as conforming to the British standard. [34871]

Mr. Norris: My Department does not monitor or assess the quality of wheel fixing components.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has commissioned in respect of the products on the market which claim to prevent wheel loss. [34879]

Mr. Norris: My Department has not commissioned any research into products which claim to prevent wheel loss. It is a matter of departmental policy that we do not test, approve or otherwise endorse any proprietary products.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will fund research into wheel loss. [34878]

Mr. Norris: The mechanism of wheel loss has been extensively researched through the British Standards Institution and my Department is closely involved with the relevant committee of the institution. Recommendations regarding the manufacturing quality of fixings and care and maintenance have been made based on the outcome of this research, to which the Department of Trade and Industry contributed some £35,000.

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into road traffic accidents involving heavy commercial vehicles and attributable to lost wheel syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [35152]

Mr. Norris: My Department has not directly commissioned any research. However, we have been represented for many years on the British standards committee for wheels and tyres. This committee commissioned research by the Motor Industry Research Association into the problems of wheel loss from commercial vehicles. This research complemented work by Exeter university on behalf of the Institute of Road Transport Engineers and the Department of Trade and Industry, which contributed some £35,000 to the funding.

An analysis of the vehicle inspectorate's accident and defect database shows that since 1982 there have been 323 accident cases involving the loss of wheels from commercial vehicles. Of the cases where the inspectorate prepared a defect report, almost three-quarters were shown to be related to maintenance or abuse.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium

13. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on regional celebrations for the millennium. [33671]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Eight out of the nine flagship landmark projects for which funding has been approved are outside London. The Government are putting in place machinery to co-ordinate the many projects and events that are being planned around the UK to celebrate the millennium. My Department will lead this co-ordination. The millennium exhibition, which the Millennium Commission intends to support with up to £200 million, includes plans for a regional programme. The commission also welcomes funding applications for large-scale capital projects around the country.

20. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what advice she has given to those selecting millennium projects for lottery funding concerning the regional distribution of their awards. [33678]

Mrs. Bottomley: The Millennium Commission wants to ensure a good geographical spread of awards. It expects to fund 12 landmark projects in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland and in each of the English regions. The commission will award funds to a number of smaller projects throughout the country.

24. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations she has received regarding the national site for the millennium celebration. [33682]

25. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the millennium project at Greenwich. [33683]

Mrs. Bottomley: As chairman of Millennium Commission and as Secretary of State for National Heritage, I have received letters from Members of Parliament and the public about the siting of the millennium exhibition. The decision to award the exhibition to Greenwich was made by the millennium commissioners.

Credit Unions

14. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the community-based credit unions in Scotland which have received national lottery awards indicating the average sum awarded; and if she will make a statement. [33672]

Mr. Sproat: No community-based credit union in Scotland has received a national lottery award, but the National Lottery Charities Board announced on 11 June an award of £63,590 to the credit union development initiative in Middlesbrough.

Good Causes

15. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of her Department's role in promoting greater public involvement in the good causes supported by lottery funding; and if she will make a statement. [33673]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Distributing bodies have undertaken wide public consultation to know the views of the public when setting the rules for distribution of funds.

Minority Languages

16. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she next expects to discuss the programmes to promote minority languages with her European Union counterparts. [33674]

Mr. Sproat: The European Ariane programme—which has as one of its aims the support of translation of literary works between Community languages, with priority being given to lesser-used ones—was discussed at the Culture Council on 11 June, and a common position was formally adopted by Ministers on 27 June. There are no plans for further ministerial discussions.

Arts Council

19. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her policy for the Arts Council; and if she will make a statement. [33677]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government set the legal, financial and institutional framework within which the Arts Council of England operates. Ministers make appointments to the council and determine the overall structure of arts funding and management.

Within this framework, the council's role, in accordance with its royal charter, is to develop and improve the knowledge, understanding and practice of the arts, and to increase the accessibility of the arts to the public. It achieves these objectives through grants to individual arts organisations from public expenditure and from its share of the proceeds of the national lottery.

National Lottery

22. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the average amount spent weekly by each household on the national lottery. [33680]

Mr. Sproat: Family expenditure survey figures published in May showed that the average household spends just over £2 on the lottery draw each week.

23. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the operation of the national lottery. [33681]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The lottery continues to be successful. It has raised more than £2 billion for the good causes. The distributing bodies have made 9,162 grants for a total of over £1.8 billion.

Camelot has now paid out 100 million prizes.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent representations she has received about the distribution of lottery moneys; and if she will make a statement. [33679]

Mrs. Bottomley: People are interested in all aspects of the national lottery, including the distribution of funds to the good causes. The lottery is an important part of national life.

English Heritage

26. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the total budget allocated to English Heritage in the current financial year. [33684]

Mr. Sproat: English Heritage has budgeted for expenditure of £126.3 million in 1996–97, of which £107.3 million is to be provided by Government grant in aid. This sum includes specific provision of £2 million each for the Albert memorial and Eltham palace. The allocation for 1996–97 is 11 per cent. higher in real terms than in 1990–91.

National Volunteers Week

27. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what support her Department gave to national Volunteers Week. [33685]

Mr. Sproat: My Department gave support to Volunteers Week in a number of ways. Financial support was given to the volunteer centre to co-ordinate the week. My right hon. Friend also participated in a number of events organised for the week, including the initial launch and a conference, "A Route to Opportunity", and the launch of business in the community's challenge 96, and the Women's Royal Voluntary Service's initiative for MPs to give an hour of their time to a WRVS project in their constituency.

Arts Support

28. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent discussions she has held on increasing private sector support for the arts. [33686]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Business support is now a major component of the arts economy. I meet representatives from the business sector regularly to discuss a range of issues, including support for the arts. I also aim, through functions such as the pairing scheme receptions which I host regularly, to encourage even greater private sector involvement in the arts and in the community more generally.

Euro 96

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what contribution her Department made in cash and percentage terms to the organisation of Euro 96. [33675]

Mr. Sproat: Euro 96 has been organised on a self-financing basis. The Department and its agencies have provided more than £400,000 to support the local authorities, cultural programme organised alongside the football. The DNH-sponsored national music festival has also focused this year on Euro 96, with Department support increased by £40,000 to £100,000.

Sports Clubs

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps are taken to monitor the use of national lottery funding by sports clubs. [33676]

Mr. Sproat: All national lottery distributors are required to monitor their awards to ensure that lottery funds are being used for the purpose the grant was given and that the projects supported represent value for money.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Nigerian Ministerial Delegation

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the purpose of the current visit of the Nigerian ministerial delegation to the United Kingdom. [34827]

Mr. Hanley: The Nigerian ministerial delegation was invited to the United Kingdom by the Commonwealth ministerial action group for talks about the Commonwealth's concerns on human rights and the transition to civilian government in Nigeria.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Hormone-implanted Beef Imports

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what reports he has received of imports of hormone-implanted beef entering the United Kingdom in the last year; [26275]

(2) when he expects to answer the question of the hon. Member for Delyn for answer on 22 April, ref 26275. [35095]

Mrs. Browning: I very much regret that the hon. Member has had to wait so long for a reply.

The import from third countries of meat and meat products derived from animals treated with hormonal growth promoters has been banned since 1988, as has the use of these substances within the European Community. Third countries wishing to import to the Community must submit guarantees to the European Commission regarding their plans for monitoring for these substances. Member states are responsible for implementing and policing the Community ban in respect of their own national production.

We have not received any reports in the last year of the importation of meat derived from animals to which illegal hormones have been administered. The Veterinary Medicines Directorate and the state veterinary service would immediately investigate any such allegations.

Plant Genetic Resources

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will (a) endorse and (b) financially support the global plan of action on plant genetic resources to be discussed at the Food and Agriculture Organisation's fourth international technical conference at Leipzig; and if he will make a statement. [33351]

Mr. Boswell: The global plan of action was unanimously adopted last week by the FAO fourth international technical conference, at which the UK was represented by officials from my Department and the Overseas Development Administration. The UK supports the global plan of action as a useful framework on which to base future action, and will play a full and active part in its implementation and follow up processes.

Through the ODA, the UK already provides significant resources for many of the areas identified in the global plan.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he plans to (a) increase and (b) stabilise and maintain the variety of plant genetic material used within agricultural systems in (i) the United Kingdom, (ii) the European Community and (iii) other countries; and if he will make a statement. [33353]

Mr. Boswell: The Government are well aware of the need to maintain diversity of plant genetic resources for future food security, and are already taking active steps to ensure the conservation and future sustainable use of such resources, both nationally and internationally through the implementation of the principles enshrined in the convention on biological diversity, through the reform of the common agricultural policy, and through the development of the FAO global system for plant genetic resources for food and agriculture. The Government will continue to support the principles of sustainable development in line with their strategy for sustainable development, which was published in 1994.

Sustainable Agriculture Policies

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to support sustainable agriculture policies in international meetings this year with particular reference to the Food and Agriculture Organisation international undertaking, the World Trade Organisation and the convention on biological diversity; and if he will make a statement. [33352]

Mr. Boswell: The Department is already fully committed to the principles of sustainable development, in line with the Government's strategy for sustainable development which was published in 1994. This commitment extends to international forums where such issues are discussed.

Departmental Agencies (Scientists)

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the separate agencies operating under his Department, with the names of the scientists appointed to each and the percentage of the membership those scientists represent. [33881]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry has six executive agencies:

Agricultural Development and Advisory Service (ADAS)
Central Science Laboratory (CSL)
Meat Hygiene Service (MHS)
Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD)
Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA)
Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD)

I have asked agency chief executives to reply direct to the hon. Member on the remaining part of his question.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Sir Ralph Howell, dated 1 July 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply direct to your Parliamentary Question in which you ask for the names of the scientists appointed to each Agency and the percentage of membership those scientists represent. [33881]

The information for ADAS is as follows:

Assistant Scientific Officer: 199

Scientific Officer: 87

Higher Scientific Officer: 28

Total: 314

Percentage of membership of total staff: 18

Letter from Professor P. I. Stanley to Sir Ralph Howell, dated 1 July 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about names of scientists and the percentage of membership those scientists represent in his executive agencies in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. [33881]

I am placing copies of CSL's Annual Science Review 1994, which includes a staff listing, in the House Libraries. The percentage of scientific staff in CSL is 72%.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Sir Ralph Howell, dated 1 July 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food relating to scientists employed by Agencies under MAFF's control has been passed to me for reply with respect to this Executive Agency.

The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) was launched on 1 April 1995 as an Executive Agency of MAFF. It took over from some 300 local authorities responsibility for enforcement of the hygiene, inspection and welfare at slaughter legislation in licensed meat premises in England, Scotland and Wales.

The MHS headquarters are based in York where the Chief Executive and the supporting functions of Operations, Finance, Human Resources and Information Technology are based. MHS services are managed by six regional offices. The Head of Operations as well as two of the Regional Managers are qualified Veterinary Surgeons. The MHS also employs Official Veterinary Surgeons (OVSs) to supervise meat inspection staff working in plants. The MHS directly employs 37 OVSs and in addition contracts out work to 110 full time equivalent vets to supplement them. 7 vets are also used on a casual basis. This represents 12% of the total MHS workforce.

I am sure you will appreciate that, for security reasons, the MHS is unable to disclose the names of its employees.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Sir Ralph Howell, dated 1 July 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question concerning the names of scientists appointed to PSD, and the percentage of the membership that these scientists represent. [3388]

I regret that, for reasons of security, I am unable to provide the names of the scientific staff employed by PSD. However, I can advise that PSD employs 134 scientists, which is 63% of the total staffing of the agency.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Sir Ralph Howell, dated 1 July 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on scientists in the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA).

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service.

There are currently 1,049 staff employed by the VLA. The VLA's aim is to provide MAFF with an effective and efficient service of specialist veterinary, scientific and technical support, consultancy and surveillance in the fields of animal health and welfare, food safety and the environment. To support this work, the majority of VLA employees are scientists and veterinarians.

Letter from J. M. Rutter to Sir Ralph Howell, dated 1 July 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about scientists employed in the Veterinary Medicines Directorate as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. [33881]

There are currently 33 scientists employed in the VMD, representing 30% of the staff. The names of VMD's scientific and other senior staff are set out in the April 1996 edition of MAVIS to assist companies in their dealings with the Agency. Copies of MAVIS are in the House Library.

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to increase the age of calves slaughtered under the calf compensation scheme, as part of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy culling programme, to 21 days. [34101]

Mr. Baldry: The Agriculture Council agreed at its meeting on 24 to 27 June that the age limit for calves under the scheme should be increased to 20 days in appropriate cases to be agreed by the Commission. We will be seeking to implement this change in the United Kingdom as soon as the necessary legislative provisions are in place.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review compensation schemes for animals under 30 months of age in the current BSE culling programme; and if he will make a statement. [34102]

Mr. Baldry: Adult animals under 30 months of age are not covered by any measures of the sort described. The slaughter premium for calves is prescribed in Council Regulation 805/68, as amended.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to reply to the letters of 7 and 30 May from the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich inquiring about the scientific basis of the cattle cull. [34434]

Mr. Boswell: My hon. Friend the Minister of State replied to the letters of 7 and 30 May on 28 June 1996.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to monitor the activities of dealers taking advantage of the cow slaughter schemes; and what action he takes in the event of abuse. [34266]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 26 June 1996]: The activities of dealers are not monitored on a regular basis under the over-30 months slaughter scheme. We have, however, announced arrangements which will ensure that livestock markets get a fair share of the throughput of cattle to be slaughtered. We have also made clear that abuses of the scheme will not be tolerated.

Any allegations of abuse of the scheme rules made to the intervention board or to the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will be investigated.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will set up an inquiry to investigate the possible linkage between the Canterbury Mills animal rendering plant at Godmersham, Kent, the farm where the first BSE-infected herd was discovered in Ashford in 1985, and the cluster of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease cases in the Ashford area. [34510]

Mrs. Browning: Extensive epidemiological studies into BSE show no correlation between the incidence of BSE and any geographical features, including the location of rendering plants. The epidemiological surveillance of CJD is the responsibility of the national CJD surveillance unit funded by the Department of Health and the Scottish Office. The unit publishes annual reports and has considered geographical clustering of CJD cases, but has failed to find any of statistical significance. The unit continues to investigate cases of suspected CJD, including any of the new variant, and would report any significant findings.

Wages

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many permits issued to individuals who are incapacitated for the purposes of the Agricultural Wages Act 1948 for the payment of lower minimum rates are currently in force; and what is their distribution by (a) region and (b) rates of pay. [34585]

Mr. Boswell: Permits of exemption are issued by agricultural wages committees. The tables show the total number of permits issued by each committee, in England and Wales, grouped according to their value as a percentage of the current minimum rate for an adult full-time ordinary worker.

Calf Exports

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many calves were exported to Europe in the first three months of 1996. [34600]

Mr. Boswell: Provisional overseas trade statistics show that 57,000 calves were exported from the United Kingdom to EC countries in the first three months of 1996.

Fishing Fleet (Luxembourg)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what proposals the Fisheries Minster for Luxembourg has made to cut that country's fishing fleet; [34590]

(2) what is the current size of the Luxembourg fishing fleet. [34591]

Mr. Baldry: Luxembourg does not have a fishing fleet.

State Veterinary Service

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the reviews of the state veterinary service he has undertaken over the last 10 years; in which year each review was carried out; and if he will make a statement. [35058]

Mrs. Browning: Reviews of the state veterinary service—SVS—initiated by the Minister over the past 10 years are:

1989–Next steps initiative

This resulted in the Central Veterinary Laboratory—CVL—separating from the state veterinary service and being established as a next steps agency in 1990.

1990—Review of the investigation service

The outcome was a reduction in a number of centres from 19 to 13 + one veterinary inspection unit.

1993—Review of the animal health and veterinary group (which included the SVS)

As a result of this review, the veterinary investigation service merged with the CVL in October 1995, as an enlarged agency—Veterinary Laboratory Agency—and the veterinary field service has undergone a structural reorganisation.

Throughout, the Government have ensured that their commitment to preserving the front-line resources and capabilities of the state veterinary service has been maintained.

Poultry Slaughter

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many head of poultry have been slaughtered under the control and eradication of salmonella regulations. [34994]

Mrs. Browning: Since the start of the compulsory slaughter policy for salmonella infected flocks on 1 March 1989 until 28 June 1996, 3,706,938 birds in 414 flocks have been compulsorily slaughtered.

Rendering Plants

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what temperature requirements he imposes on rendering plants for the heating of animal material; and if he will make a statement. [35059]

Mrs. Browning: The various temperature requirements which have to be met by rendering plants are laid down in Council directive 90/667/EEC, implemented in Great Britain by the Animal By-Product Order 1992, as amended, and the Specified Bovine Material (No. 2) Order 1996.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many questions for ordinary written answer tabled for answer between 20 March and 20 June did not receive an answer within once week.

Mr. Boswell: Of the 356 written questions tabled to the Department in the period concerned, 179 did not receive an answer within one week.

Veterinary Laboratories Agency

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what targets have been set for the Veterinary Laboratories Agency in 1996–97. [35437]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have set the Veterinary Laboratories Agency the following strategic performance targets for 1996–97:

Financial performance

full cost recovery for all Veterinary Laboratories Agency services to comply with budgetary controls resulting from the public expenditure survey and the supply estimates an overall efficiency gain of 3 per cent.

Efficiency

Service delivery

85 per cent. of ROAME research and development milestones achieved achievement of a satisfactory report from a visiting group achievement of laboratory accreditation for bacteriology department (salmonella and E.Coli serotyping) and analytical chemistry unit (extension of the scope of accreditation to include additional tests).

Service quality

Details of performance in 1995–96 will be set out in the agency's annual report and accounts, to be published during July 1996.

Fish Diseases Laboratory, Weymouth

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost of running the fish diseases laboratory in Weymouth; how many staff it employs; and what are its functions. [35069]

Mr. Baldry: The fish diseases laboratory at Weymouth is part of the Ministry's directorate of fisheries research, and its annual running costs are currently £1.9 million. It employs 53 staff and is responsible for statutory duties in relation to fish and shellfish diseases and shellfish hygiene, and undertakes related research.

British Beef Ban

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) which countries outside the European Union have banned British beef; what action has been taken against each country; whether the UK has retaliated in kind; and if will make a statement; [27187]

(2) when he will answer the question tabled by the hon. Member for South Derbyshire for answer on 30 April on bans on British beef by non-EU countries. [34507]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 30 April 1996]: I very much regret that my hon. Friend has had to wait so long for a reply.

Commission decision 96/239/EC of 27 March 1996 provided that the UK shall not export from its territory meat and meat products obtained from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK. The list of countries outside the European Union shows those countries with a ban on imports of British beef on the day before the introduction of the Commission decision.

Algeria
Argentina
Bahrain
Bulgaria
Canada
China
Iran
Iraq
Jamaica
Japan
Jordan
Kazakhstan (CIS)
Libya
Lithuania
Malaysia
Philippines
Russian Federation
Saudia Arabia
Switzerland
Syria
Taiwan
United Arab Emirates
Uzbekistan

The United States has not accepted imports of bone in beef from Britain since 1989. After 1989, negotiations concentrated on securing access to US markets for boneless beef, which were successfully concluded in July 1994. Negotiations continue on securing wider access to the US market, although in regular discussions with representatives of industry, the US has not been identified as a priority market for the export of beef.

The following countries had introduced, but subsequently lifted, a ban before 27 March.

Chile
Cyprus
Egypt
Kuwait
Lebanon
State of Sarawak (Malaysia)
Mauritius
Morocco
Oman
Poland
Qatar
Trinidad and Tobago
Tunisia
Turkey

Details of the representations made by the UK Government in respect of individual countries could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, we have pressed our case strongly with the authorities concerned in an effort to persuade them to lift these restrictions on trade, based on the scientific evidence available from the World Health Organisation and others that there is no human health hazard arising from the consumption of UK beef.

Responsibility for pursuing action through the World Trade Organisation—WTO—to secure the removal of unjustified BSE-related restrictions on UK exports and on those of other EU member states rests exclusively with the European Commission, as with all matters relating to trade outside the EU. Action has already been started by the Commission against certain countries who have imposed bans on dairy products from various EU member states.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 2 July 1996

HEALTH

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 17 June, Official Report, column 349, if his Department will release figures on highly suspect cases of the new strain of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease on a monthly basis; and what are those figures for 1995 and 1996 to date. [34511]

Mr. Horam: The information has, until now, formed part of the annual report of the national Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit. They will now be published quarterly in the chief medical officer's update.

In 1995 there were three deaths from the new variant of CJD while in 1996, to the end of May, there had been six deaths.

NHS Cardiac Units

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of NHS cardiac units in hospitals within the Greater London area on 30 March. [34595]

Mr. Malone: All major acute hospitals in Greater London have a coronary care unit. In addition, there were eight national health service specialist cardiac units in Greater London as of 30 March 1996.

Patient Care (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the impact on patient care of the cuts proposed by Doncaster health authority in the budget of the Doncaster Healthcare NHS trust; [35017]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on patient care of the cuts proposed by Doncaster health authority in the budget of the Doncaster Royal Infirmary and Mexborough Montagu NHS trust. [35016]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for Doncaster health authority and the trusts concerned. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Keith Jones, chairman of the authority, for details.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trusts have indicated that they may intend to seek approval for capital investment under the private finance initiative. [34885]

Mr. Horam: All national health service capital schemes are tested to see if private finance offers the best value for money. At present, 118 national health service trusts are testing schemes worth over £1 million each for which approval of the outline business case has been given.

Information is not available on schemes worth under £1 million each that are currently being tested, or on schemes for which the outline business case has not yet been prepared.

National Vocational Qualifications (Carers)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the adequacy of the NVQ qualifications for carers; what priority his Department accords to the training of carers; and if he will make a statement. [34945]

Mr. Bowis: A number of representations have been received on this subject.

The Government place a high priority on the training of carers. The personal social services training strategy for England seeks to improve the training of the existing PSS work force at professional and vocational levels. This Department is supporting the updated set of lifetime learning targets to achieve specified national vocational qualification—NVQ—targets by 2000 by targeting part of the training support programme on the achievement of NVQs in care. In addition, the document "Building Partnerships for Success", published in September last year, identifies staff training and development as part of the essential foundation for the development of community care. For the future we propose to increase the proportion of staff with appropriate qualifications by extending opportunities to acquire NVQs.

Beta-interferon

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the relationship between the rate of incidence of multiple sclerosis in health authority areas and the likelihood of sufferers being prescribed beta-interferon. [34996]

Mr. Malone: None. Data on the incidence of multiple sclerosis by health authority region are not available centrally. Decisions about prescribing beta-interferon in individual cases are for the clinical judgment of the doctor concerned.

NHS Trusts (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions officials from his Department have had with the management of Doncaster Royal Infirmary and Mexborough Montagu NHS trust and Doncaster health authority in relation to the budget for the trust; [35020]

(2) what discussions officials from his Department have had with the management of Doncaster Healthcare NHS trust and Doncaster health authority in relation to the budget for the trust. [35019]

Mr. Horam: National health service executive officials have regular contact and discussion with Doncaster health authority and with trusts in Doncaster about a variety of matters including funding.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he intends to take to ensure that no job losses or reductions in service occur in 1996–97 at (a) the Doncaster Royal Infirmary and Mexborough Montagu NHS trust and (b) the Doncaster Healthcare NHS trust. [34995]

Mr. Horam: These are matters for the trusts themselves. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of the trusts, Mr. Redmond Tonkinson and Mr. David Bertram, for details.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which districts in England and Wales are not currently represented by a community health council; and if he will make a statement. [34985]

Mr. Horam: All districts in England and Wales have a community health council.

Dispute Procedures

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures exist within the national health service for resolving disputes between a national health service trust and a health authority on a national health service trust's budget. [35005]

Mr. Horam: A copy of the latest guidance is available in the Library. This guidance, EL(91)11, will be updated shortly.

North Western Regional Health Authority (Compensation)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful claims for compensation have been made against the North Western regional health authority during each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [35062]

Mr. Horam: There were no traceable claims for compensation in this period.

Blood Disorders

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce a screening programme covering all races in respect of (a) sickle cell anaemia and (b) thalassaemia; and if he will make a statement. [35104]

Mr. Horam: Individual health authorities are responsible for assessing the needs of their resident populations and for purchasing services, including haemoglobinopathy screening, to provide for those needs. In doing so, we would expect them to have regard to the recommendations in the report of the Standing Medical Advisory Committee working party on sickle cell, thalassaemia and other haemoglobinopathies, published in February 1994.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, by health authority region for the last 12 months, the number of white caucasians who have been diagnosed as carrying (a) the sickle cell anaemia gene and (b) the thalassaemia gene; and if he will make a statement. [35103]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available.

Health Care Purchases

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 429, on purchasing health care from non-NHS bodies, if he will provide a breakdown of the services bought and the sources of provision. [35367]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Rabies

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of human rabies have been recorded in the United Kingdom between 1971 and 1995. [35082]

Mr. Horam: There have been seven reported cases of rabies in the United Kingdom since 1976: two in 1977 and one in each of the years 1978, 1981, 1986, 1987 and 1988. All these were in people who were infected abroad.

Rabies became a notifiable disease only in 1976 and, therefore, figures for the years 1971 to 1975 are not available.

Health Funding

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much public money, expressed both in cash and in real terms, has been spent on the NHS in each financial year since 1978–79; and if he will make a statement. [35290]

Mr. Horam: The information is in the table.

National Health Service total net expenditure, England

£ million

Year	Cash	Real terms (1994–95 prices)
1978–79	6,273	18,284
1979–80	7,447	18,598

[1] Forecast outturn

Pharmacists

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received from the pharmaceutical services negotiating committee regarding the timetable of payments to pharmacists; [35151]

(2) if he will arrange for his Department to make 100 per cent. payments to pharmacists a month and a day after prescriptions are dispensed; and if he will make a statement. [35148]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Dudley, West (Mr. Pearson) on 8 March at column 397. The payment timetable was also raised by representatives of the pharmaceutical services negotiating committee on 6 June.

Learning Disabilities

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has received the results of the evaluation of different types of residential provision for people with learning disabilities which he announced on 19 December 1995; and if he will make a statement. [35576]

Mr. Bowis: I have received the report of the first phase of the evaluation and I am considering the recommendations, including those for further work in this area. The report includes information which will be helpful to commissioners of services for people with learning disabilities and copies are therefore being sent to health and local authorities and other interested organisations. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

NHS Computers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the NHS executive has taken to safeguard its computer systems in respect of the century date change. [35369]

Mr. Horam: Preliminary analysis of the Department of Health's own mainframe computer systems, which includes those within the national health service executive, has already been undertaken to assess the likely impact of the change of millennium. A further more detailed analysis is under way to assess fully the impact and likely costs of the change.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many computers are used in the NHS. [35337]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trusts and health authorities have taken action to safeguard their computer systems from the year 2000 problem. [35341]

Mr. Horam: At present it is not known how many trusts and health authorities have taken action to safeguard their computer systems from the year 2000 problem. However, the national health service executive has taken steps to increase awareness of the problem and is marshalling best advice and guidance to assist it in taking appropriate action in good time.

Child Abuse Inquries

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will be assisting Sir William Utting in his review of children's homes and child care arrangements; what steps he is taking to ensure the input of charitable organisations, psychologists and those with experience of police involvement in tackling organised paedophile activity; and if he will make a statement. [35368]

Mr. Bowis: Sir William will be provided with a small secretariat and will have access to Departmental facilities. Sir William has agreed that the review should be accessible to a wide range of organisations and individuals who may wish to contribute their views. It will be for Sir William to determine how this is best achieved once the review is under way.

Mental Health

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the hospital budget has been spent on mental health services in each year since 1979. [35331]

Mr. Bowis: The information is shown in the table. The figures since 1988 reflect the shift from hospital to community mental health services. For example, the latter rose by 32 per cent. between 1988–89 and 1990–91 and by 40 per cent. between 1991–92 and 1994–95 for mental health nursing expenditure.

Year	Percentage of hospital budget spent on mental health services
1979–80	13.4
1980–81	13.6
1981–82	13.6
1982–83	13.6
1983–84	13.5
1984–85	13.6
1985–86	13.6
1986–87	13.6
1987–88	14.4
1988–89	14.4
1989–90	14.1
1990–91	13.7
1991–92	13.2
1992–93	13.0
1993–94	12.4
1994–95	12.0

1. The mental health expenditure figures used to calculate the percentages are made up of the following:

(a) In-patient and out-patient expenditure—the consultant specialties of mental health, child and adolescent psychiatry, forensic psychiatry, psychotherapy and old age psychiatry;

(b) day patient expenditure—in the categories mental health (alcoholism, drug abuse, psychogeriatrics and general), child and adolescent psychiatry and forensic psychiatry.

2. The hospital budget figures cover all in-patient, out-patient and day patient services and other services provided by hospitals. Community-based services are not included.

Non-NHS Staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1995, Official Report, columns 934–35, on non-NHS staff, what information his Department collates on the grades of staff concerned and the source of their employment. [35370]

Mr. Malone: None.

Paediatric Care

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of children admitted to hospital have been cared for in a children's ward under the supervision of a consultant paediatrician in each quarter since April 1994 in each region. [35332]

Mr. Horam: These data are not available centrally. All children treated in a children's ward are under the supervision of a consultant paediatrician, but some children are treated in a suitable specialist or adult wards and are then under the supervision of an appropriate consultant.

Coronary Artery Bypass Grafts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients diagnosed since April 1995 requiring coronary artery bypass grafts have not received them within one year. [35333]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Out-patient Appointments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people have not received an out-patient appointment within 13 weeks in each district in each quarter since April 1995; and what proportion this constitutes of the total; [35334]

(2) how many people have not received an out-patient appointment within 26 weeks in each district in each quarter since April 1995. [35335]

Mr. Horam: A pilot collection has been established on a trust basis of the numbers of patients not yet seen within 13 and 26 weeks for a first out-patient appointment with a consultant following written general practitioner referral. Figures will be published once continuity and validity of the data have been established.

Local Authority Audits

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of Tuesday 25 June, Official Report, column 89, if he will list the authorities which have yet to submit their audited returns for 1994–95; and when he expects the outstanding audited returns to be submitted. [35366]

Mr. Bowis: We have now received the audited returns for 1994–95 for all local authorities in England.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people admitted to hospital through an accident and emergency department were not given a bed within three to four hours in each quarter from April 1995; and how many were not given a bed within two hours from April 1996 in each district. [35336]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

District Nurses

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have not been seen by a district nurse team member (a) within four hours as an urgent case, (b) within two working days as a non-urgent case and (c) by appointment on the day asked for after giving 48 hours' notice in each quarter since April 1994 in each district. [35338]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Elderly People (Abuse)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the levels of abuse of elderly people in different care environments. [35339]

Mr. Bowis: We are undertaking a number of activities to enable an assessment to be made of the nature and extent of elder abuse and to promote practical help for people who are subject to, or at risk of, abuse.

We helped to establish the organisation Action on Elder Abuse in 1993 and are funding its telephone helpline. We are also financing an independent evaluation of the helpline which will provide evidence of prevalence and types of abuse. Action on Elder Abuse produced a free guidance leaflet in 1995 on abuse in care homes.

The social services inspectorate has published practice guidelines on safeguarding older people who may be at risk of abuse in domestic settings and has funded the production of a research review, which is currently being distributed.

We also provide grant aid to Counsel and Care which has independently produced a fact sheet on older people at risk of abuse in care homes. Counsel and Care held a seminar in May 1995 with the intention of pooling ideas on policies, procedures and practice.

Management Consultancy Advertisements

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide details of each management consultancy contract that has been advertised by NHS organisations in the supplement to the Official Journal of the European Community in each of the last five years. [35340]

Mr. Horam: There was no requirement on national health service or other United Kingdom public contracting authorities to advertise service contracts in the Official Journal prior to July 1993.

The following management consultancy contracts above the threshold value of £149,728 that were awarded by an NHS organisation in the calendar years 1994 and 1995 have been identified from Official Journal records:

Description	Awarding body	Amount	Date	Supplier
Marketing Agency for health services	Plymouth Hospitals NHS Trust	Up to £160,000	15 September 1995	Colin Geall
Business Advice	NHS Supplies	Not quoted	27 September 1995	Provex Consultancy Stourbridge
Project management	Royal Berkshire and Battle Hospitals	Not quoted	16 June 1995	Mouchel Management Ltd.

Description	Awarding body	Amount	Date	Supplier
Financial and fiscal services	NHS Supplies	Not quoted	21 August 1995	Beachcroft Stanleys Solicitors, and KPMG
Business services	Dental Practice Board for England and Wales	Not quoted	21 December 1994	Coopers and Lybrand

Special Transitional Grant

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which authorities have been unable to spend 85 per cent. of their special transitional grant for 1993–94 in the independent sector. [35343]

Mr. Bowis: Barnsley, Bolton, Derbyshire, Durham, Ealing, Rochdale, Rotherham, Staffordshire and St. Helens.

UNESCO

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what representations she has received from educational institutions about the United Kingdom rejoining UNESCO; [34822]

(2) what disadvantages to educational institutions have been represented to her as resulting from Britain staying out of UNESCO. [34832]

Mr. Forth: None.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will make a statement on the transition to comprehensive status of the nine grammar schools in Norfolk between 1979 and 1982; [34769]

(2) what action was taken by Norfolk county council's education committee in response to the letter from the Department of Education after the general election in 1979 removing the compulsion on local education to reorganise their secondary schools along comprehensive lines; [34773]

(3) if she will make a statement on the merger of Paston school and North Walsham girls school to become a sixth form college; [34774]

(4) whether she will make a statement on the transition from grammar to comprehensive of (a) Diss grammar school in Norfolk, (b) Fakenham grammar school, (c) Wymondham college, (d) Oriel grammar school, (e) Great Yarmouth grammar school and (f) Gorleston grammar school, Gorleston. [34775]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 1 July 1996]: The changes referred to are a matter for the public record. The details of how they were implemented were the responsibility of Norfolk education authority. The decisions taken by that authority about the character of its secondary schools reflected the circumstances and policies of the time.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment whether she has consulted the education authority of Norfolk county council over the 1996 proposals for the creation of selective schools in Norfolk. [34770]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 1 July 1996]: The White Paper "Self-Government for Schools" has been sent to all local education authorities with any comments invited by 4 October. The Department discussed the broad issues to be covered in the White Paper in advance with the local authority associations and a range of other organisations, but not with any individual local authority.

Barred Teachers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 13 June, Official Report, column 287, which schools cannot arrange checks against list 99 through their local education authority; and in what circumstances local education authorities have access to the Department of Health's consultancy index. [35249]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 1 July 1996]: Schools that are maintained by a local education authority can make checks through their maintaining authority. Other schools are not entitled to this service, but can make checks through the Department.

The Department of Health's consultancy index is intended to provide checks on the suitability of people seeking appointments in the field of child care. It has not been used by local education authorities which rely on checks of list 99 and criminal background checks to help assess the suitability of candidates.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 99, if she will list the number of (a) adverse reports from employers made to the Department of Health's consultancy index for each year since 1979 and (b) notifications from the police for convictions for each year since 1979; and how many notifications to list 99 there have been for each year since 1979. [35250]

Mr. Squire [holding answer 1 July 1996]: The following table shows the number of reports about misconduct, or alleged misconduct, by teachers, and people whose work involves regular contact with children and young persons in education, that the Department has received in each year since 1 April 1979. Information about notifications to the Department of Health consultancy index is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

School Funding

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is in each local education authority the average amount spent per (a) pupil, (b) primary pupil and (c) secondary pupil. [35448]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table sets out, for each local education authority, net institutional expenditure per (a) pre-primary/primary and secondary pupil combined (b) pre-primary/primary pupil and (c) secondary pupil in LEA maintained schools in England for 1994–95, the latest for which figures are available.

School Meals

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is for each local education authority the percentage of (i) the total number of pupils and (ii) the number of pupils taking school meals who receive a free meal. [35365]

Mrs. Gillan: The latest available information is in the following table:

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the damage to fuel pins at Hunterston B nuclear power station with particular reference to the causes, cost, anticipated period of repair and implications for each nuclear power stations. [35231]

Mr. Eggar: Currently available details are contained in the British Energy prospectus that was issued on 26 June and appear under the heading "fuel brace fretting" on page 66.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the animal welfare issues for which his Department has responsibility; [34290]

(2) if he will list by group, division or other work unit the number of grades of staff working within his Department on animal welfare issues. [34292]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 25 June 1996]: My Department has no direct responsibility for animal welfare issues. However, this is one of the many factors that are taken into account when Ministers and officials consider aspects of the Department's policies in the normal course of their duties.

Torture Equipment

Mr. Madden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many licences for the export of equipment assessed by his Department as capable of being used for torture are currently under review by his Department. [35209]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 1 July 1996]: The Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 does not cover a category of goods "capable of being used for torture". There is a vast range of otherwise innocuous goods that could be so misused. The most likely categories of controlled goods to include those that might be used for torture are PL5001a and PL5001d of group 1 of part III of schedule 1 to the order. No export licence applications in respect of any such goods are currently under review.

Action Single Market

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 30 April, Official Report, column 471, if he will list (a) the United Kingdom businesses action single market has helped, (b) the single market trade barriers he has helped them to overcome and (c) the number and location of the wider network of staff who work in British embassies overseas assessing and pursuing complaints. [35033]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 1 July 1996]: Action single market has helped UK businesses overcome a wide range of problems. These include: homologation (type approval) procedures in Spain; Dutch insistence on retesting of electric fencing; Irish regulations on the labelling of canned fruit; delays in securing German type approval for road cones; Spanish regulations on sizes of cider bottles; a Belgian refusal to accept a British fire certificate for carpets; Greek rules on the fruit juice content of soft drinks; Belgian customs officials asking for inappropriate documentation; Italian failure to implement an EU directive concerned with paints; a Danish levy on imported goods; and Greek restrictions on electronic cash registers.

Company details are passed to action single market on a commercially confidential basis, and cannot be divulged unless specific permission has been given. Some companies that action single market has helped have given permission for their details to appear in recent Government publications. These include H P Bulmer Ltd. Swintex Ltd. Del Monte Foods International Ltd. and Rutland Electric Fencing Co. Ltd.

Action single market has contacts who assist in assessing and pursuing complaints, in British embassies covering all the other member states of the EU and the rest of the European Economic Area and in some of the consulates-general in those countries.

TREASURY

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals saved inheritance tax as a result of the conditionally exempt works of art list in (a) 1995, (b) 1980 and (c) the list's first year of existence. [34219]

Mr. Jack: The number of estates granted conditional exemption from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax in respect of works of art and chattels that can be viewed by appointment was 31 in 1995 and eight in 1982, the earliest year for which figures were available.

Private Finance Initiative (Higher Education)

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking in response to the conclusions of the joint Treasury and Department for Education and Employment study group examining the scope for the private finance initiative in higher education. [34354]

Mr. Jack: The higher education sector has a long and impressive history of entrepreneurial activity, with universities already having raised some £1.5 billion from commercial sources. There remains, however, considerable untapped potential for private finance initiative schemes.

The group to which my hon. Friend refers is one of two joint working groups with the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the Standing Committee of Principals. It was set up in February at their request by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. Treasury officials attended the groups as observers. Like every year, and like other representations on public expenditure, the groups' reports will be taken into account in the review of the Government's expenditure plans in the 1996 public expenditure survey along with other relevant considerations.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the role of his Department in relation to the powers of the Welsh Development Agency in securing inward investment. [34942]

Mr. Waldegrave: The powers of the Welsh Development Agency are set out in the Welsh Development Agency Act 1975.

Guidelines to the agency in relation to its inward investment activities are issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. The Treasury approves the guidelines and a copy of the current version, issued in March 1995, can be found in the Libraries of the House.

Dothiepin

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many deaths in each of the past five years dothiepin was mentioned as (a) the only drug involved and (b) one of the drugs involved. [34673]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The numbers of deaths registered in 1991 and 1992 in England and Wales in which dothiepin was mentioned as (a) the only drug involved and (b) one of the drugs involved are published in table 10 of "Mortality Statistics: injury and poisoning, England and Wales", series DH4, Nos. 17 and 18, respectively. Copies of these may be accessed by the House of Commons Library. The table shows how many of the deaths mentioned alcohol.

The figures for 1993 to 1995, which relate to deaths occurring in 1993 and 1994, and deaths registered in 1995, are shown in the table:

Deaths by poisoning with a mention of dothiepin, England and Wales, 1993–95

	1993	1994	1995
Deaths by poisoning—accident	44 (15)	38 (9)	23 (6)
—dothiepin only	31 (8)	31 (8)	17 (5)
—dothiepin with other drugs	13 (7)	7 (1)	6 (1)
Deaths by poisoning—suicide	94 (9)	132 (12)	126 (8)
—dothiepin only	68 (7)	103 (7)	99 (5)
—dothiepin with other drugs	26 (2)	29 (5)	27 (3)
Deaths by poisoning—undetermined	64 (7)	84 (15)	88 (20)
—dothiepin only	54 (4)	64 (9)	70 (14)
—dothiepin with other drugs	10 (3)	20 (6)	18 (6)

The figures in brackets show the number of deaths involving dothiepin with a mention of alcohol. These figures are already included in the unbracketed totals and should not be added to them.

Income Tax

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the value in constant 1996 prices of an increase of 1p in income tax from (a) each of the 22 unitary authorities in Wales, (b) Wales and (c) the UK in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1996–97 and (iii) 1997–98. [34073]

Mr. Jack: Available information was given in my reply to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 27 March 1996, Official Report, column 609.

Millennium (Date Change)

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total cost of the millennium date change to (a) the public sector and (b) the private sector; what provision he has made in the projections for the public finances for this change; and if he will make a statement. [33883]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 21 June 1996]: The Minister for Science and Technology set out the latest position on 6 June 1996 at columns 816–20. Departments are assessing the extent to which their systems are affected and are preparing plans to effect any necessary action. The Government have not estimated the total cost to the public sector, which will be met within existing plans. Ministers with industry sponsorship responsibilities are taking steps to ensure that the sectors in which they have an interest are fully aware of the problem and are taking appropriate measures.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crisis Support

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice has been issued since March to agencies engaged in crisis support work following homicides and other serious offences with regard to the approach to be adopted. [34602]

Mr. Maclean: On 18 June, we published a new victims charter. This tells victims of crime what happens after the offence has been reported and the standards of service they can expect to receive. The charter recognises the special position of families bereaved by homicide and victims of other serious offences by setting out, where appropriate, the additional support they can expect from the relevant criminal justice services.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of violent offences against the person consist of incidents of domestic violence. [35050]

Mr. Maclean: Overall, 31 per cent. of incidents of violence in 1993 were classified as domestic violence by the 1994 British crime survey. The proportion for female victims of violence was 52 per cent. and for male victims, 15 per cent. Domestic incidents included those committed by a current or ex-partner, relative or other household member. The BCS definition of violence is broader than the definition of violence against the person which is used in the recorded crime series, in that it includes common assault.

Violent and Sexual Attacks

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further steps he plans to take to curb crimes of violence and sexual attacks. [35055]

Mr. Maclean: On 17 June my right hon. and learned Friend announced proposals, in a consultation paper on the supervision and sentencing of sex offenders, which are designed to improve protection from such offenders and to enhance opportunities for their treatment. In addition, the recently published White Paper, "Protecting the Public", makes new proposals on sentencing which seek to ensure that the public receive proper protection from persistent violent or sex offenders.

My right hon. and learned Friend has, further, established as one of the key national objectives for the police in 1996–97 a target to maintain, and where possible increase, the number of detections for violent crime.

Interdepartmental groups of Ministers and of officials are also due to meet shortly to review and develop initiatives aimed at promoting more co-ordinated national and local responses to the problems associated with domestic violence.

Immigration

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the legal basis for the distinctions made between people who were granted exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom before and after 26 July 1994 when they apply for travel documents. [34941]

Mr. Kirkhope: The policy on access to travel documents for asylum seekers granted exceptional leave to remain in the United Kingdom was introduced on 1 January 1994 and announced on 16 December 1993, Official Report, column 787.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who had applied at some time for asylum were (a) detained in and (b) deported from Doncaster prison in each month since January 1996; what were their nationalities; and to what country they were deported. [34983]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information available is in the table. The nationalities involved were Jamaican, Indian and Turkish.

Number of asylum detainees[1] recorded at HMP Doncaster as at 31 January, 29 February, 29 March, 30 April, 31 May

Date detained	Number of asylum-seekers detained	Number of asylum-seekers deported in preceding month
31 January	2	0
29 February	2	0
29 March	1	0
30 April	2	0
31 May	3	0

[1] Persons detained solely under the powers contained in schedules 2 or 3 to the Immigration Act 1971. In some cases the asylum application will have been lodged subsequent to the applicant being detained. The figures include both detained asylum applicants who applied at ports and those detained in after-entry enforcement work and include those awaiting removal following refusal of asylum, as well as those whose applications were under consideration or subject to appeal.

Litter

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in what proportion of the cases brought under the Litter Act 1983, during the most recent year for which statistics are available, the prosecution was successful; [35049]

(2) what was the average fine imposed under the Litter Act 1983 during the most recent year for which statistics are available. [35048]

Mr. Maclean: Under section 87 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 which repealed section 1(3) of the Litter Act 1983 there were in 1994—latest available figures—1,164 prosecutions in England and Wales for the offence of depositing litter. Of these, 82 per cent.—952—were found guilty. The average fine for the offence was £90.

Beat Officers (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers are employed on the beat at any one time, per head of the population (a) nationally and (b) in the Greater Manchester area. [35053]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not centrally collected. The latest available information shows that, at the end of March 1995, 68,240 officers were deployed to patrol duties in England and Wales including 3,552 officers in the Greater Manchester police area.

Asylum Applications

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications are currently waiting to be heard. [35052]

Mr. Kirkhope: The number of asylum applications awaiting an initial decision as at 31 May was 66,400.

EU Civil Protection Council

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Civil Protection Council held on 23 May. [35495]

Mr. Howard: Mr. David Bostock, the deputy permanent representative to the European Union, represented the United Kingdom at the Council in Brussels. In accordance with the policy outlined in the Prime Minister's statement on 21 May, he was unable to agree to any decisions requiring unanimity in the Council other than those which were purely formal or procedural.

Three agenda items were blocked and a statement made on the Government's policy of non-co-operation in the European Union. The three matters dealt with at the Council were as follows:

The Council discussed a compromise proposal for a decision establishing a community action programme in the field of civil protection, designed to support and supplement member states' own work in the area of civil protection. The presidency expressed the hope that this question would be further dealt with in the months ahead with a view to reaching agreement.

The Council considered a draft resolution on strengthening Community co-operation in the field of civil protection research. The presidency took note of the Commission's intention to consider the need for research in this area.

The Council also discussed a draft resolution on co-operation with the associated central and eastern European countries and Cyprus and Malta on civil protection, in preparation for their accession.

The Government do not accept that civil protection is an appropriate field for Community action. The Government take the view that in this particular field member states have, and must continue to have, primary responsibility for taking action. The Government will therefore be arguing at the intergovernmental conference that article 3(t) should be removed from the treaty, at least where civil protection is concerned, and any future European Union level co-operation should be pursued on an intergovernmental basis.

At the Civil Protection Council on 23 May, the Government reiterated that position while explaining why we could not agree to the proposed Council resolutions and Council decision on civil protection.

It follows that the Government do not consider that it would be useful for the Commission to being forward proposals for research in this field. The Government do accept that, in preparation for the eventual accession of the associated central and eastern European countries, efforts should be made to forge appropriate links in the field of civil protection. However, it sees no reason why the Community should be invited to take the lead.

Rape

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases of rape persons charged by the police have not had their cases proceeded with by the Crown Prosecution Service. [34939]

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

The Crown Prosecution Service holds no central records in respect of specific offences. The information is held on individual case files, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Home Office records include details of court proceedings in respect of specific offences. This information shows that the total number of persons proceeded against for rape in 1994 was 1,625. Of this total, 297 proceedings were recorded as "terminated early". However, the definition of this outcome is much wider than proceedings discontinued by the CPS, and includes proceedings where a bench warrant for the arrest of the defendant remained unexecuted; where the defendant could not be traced by the police; and where proceedings were adjourned indefinitely.

The present discontinuance rate for all CPS cases is 12 per cent.

DEFENCE

Trident

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sums have been (a) spent on and (b) committed to the Trident programme to date. [35002]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As at the end of January this year—the latest date for which aggregated figures are available—a total of £8.3 billion net at outturn prices had been spent on the Trident acquisition programme, from a commitment of £9 billion.

Market Testing

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for market testing of (a) the Army Base Storage and Distribution Agency, (b) the Naval Repair Organisation and (c) the Queen Victoria School; and if he will make a statement. [34981]

Mr. Soames: Chief executives of all defence agencies are required as part of their business planning to seek efficiencies and to explore the scope for greater private sector involvement through competition. They are able to draw upon a range of efficiency-related measures, including market testing their activities by enabling commercial bidders to compete with the existing in-house suppliers. There are currently no plans for market testing in the three defence agencies in question, although other efficiency measures involving the private sector have been taken or are under consideration.

Mr. Gordon Foxley

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 63, when the time required by the statutory demand on Mr. Gordon Foxley will expire. [35064]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The statutory demand was served effectively on Mr. Gordon Foxley on 19 June. He has 18 calendar days in which to seek to have it set aside or to make an arrangement with regard to payment, or 21 calendar days in which to pay in full. These time limits expire at midnight 8 and 10 July respectively.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Foulness

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors led to the removal of the atomic weapons establishment, Foulness from the list of bodies given trading status by the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency Trading Fund Order 1995. [34862]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The atomic weapons establishment, Foulness is not part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. It forms part of the Atomic Weapons Establishment, whose headquarters are at Aldermaston, Berkshire, and which is managed by Hunting BRAE plc on behalf of my Department. Rationalisation plans, announced in January 1995, are for AWE to withdraw from Foulness and for the site to be transferred to the DERA during 1997.

The inclusion of Foulness in the list of bodies to which the operation of the Defence Research Agency trading fund was extended by the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency Trading Fund Order 1995 was premature. Subsequent legal advice was that for as long as the site remains managed by Hunting BRAE plc it is not legally possible for it to be included in the order. It was therefore necessary to lay before the House an amendment order, SI 1447 1996.

RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency

Mr. Legg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the key performance indicators for the RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency for the financial year 1996–97. [35575]

Mr. Soames: The RAF Maintenance Group Defence Agency's key performance indicators for 1996–97 are: to achieve at least 98 per cent. of the specified aerosystems maintenance task to standard and on time; to achieve the "Joint Service Publication 336 Defence Supply Manual" speed of issue and pipeline targets for at least 95 per cent. of the depot supply task; to keep within the group's allocated budget; to reduce the cost per unit of output by 3 per cent.; to pursue the competing for quality initiative by achieving contract award for the designated functions at RAF Sealand by December 1996 and by issuing the invitation to tender at RAF St. Athan by 31 August 1996; to continue the comprehensive rationalisation of functions within the agency by achieving the closure of RAF Carlisle by 31 March 1997 and by achieving the closure of RAF Quedgeley by 31 March 1997; to apply for investors in people status for the agency by September 1996; and to continue the third party certification of units within the agency to the ISO 9000 standard by achieving certification of RAF Cardington by June 1996 and by achieving certification of the ground radio servicing centre, RAF North Luffenham, by December 1996.

Married Quarters Estate

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the number of service married quarters, (b) the number vacant, (c) the number sold and (d) the receipts from sales for each year since 1990. [35230]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Figures for (a) the number of families quarters, (b) the number vacant, (c) the number sold and (d) the receipts from sales are as follows. It should be noted that the figures for (a) and (b) are as at 31 March in each financial year.

Financial year	(a)	(b)	(c)	(d) £ million
1989–90	77,470	14,220	1,380	46
1990–91	75,263	11,912	2,121	44
1991–92	74,176	11,247	1,306	51
1992–93	73,614	11,027	857	33
1993–94	72,631	11,401	1,254	24
1994–95	73,719	13,178	1,102	[1]n/a
1995–96	73,539	14,351	1,344	[1]n/a

[1] Due to a change in accountancy procedures, figures for receipts from sales of surplus quarters are no longer held centrally and cannot be provided for 1994–95 and 1995–96 without disproportionate cost.

Receipts do not always relate directly to the number of houses sold in a particular year because of stage payments and accountancy procedures.

Bosnia-Herzegovina

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will set out the Government's policy for British troops in Bosnia-Herzegovina after the elections are held under the Dayton accord. [35234]

Mr. Soames: The United Kingdom will continue to make a substantial contribution to the implementation force until the expiry of its mandate at the end of the year.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Ombudsman (Child Support)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to (a) establish a second ombudsman and (b) give additional resources to the present department to facilitate dealing with Child Support Agency cases. [35329]

Mr. Freeman: There are no plans to establish a second ombudsman department to deal with Child Support Agency cases. The present office of the parliamentary ombudsman has already received increased funding for additional staff to cope with the widening of his jurisdiction and the growth in the number of cases, many of which are against the CSA.

Legislative Print Runs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who is responsible for determining the print run of new legislation and the reprint runs of extant legislation. [34863]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility rests with HMSO under its chief executive, Mike Lynn.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if all extant legislation is currently available in print from Her Majesty's Stationery Office. [34864]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to HMSO under its chief executive, Mike Lynn. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Lynn to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 1 July 1996:

I have been asked by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to reply to your Parliamentary Question (no. 109) about availability of legislation.

Our general aim is to keep printed copies of Acts of Parliament available for at least five years, or longer where there is continuing demand. Several Acts from the early years of this century are still regularly reprinted. When printed copies are no longer available, arrangements can be made with the British Library to supply photocopies at a reasonable charge. We are also developing facilities to print "on demand" facsimile copies of Acts, and hope to have this service operating later this year.

We can also supply the Statutes in Force edition of extant Acts, which is of course confined to those sections of the Act which are still in force. However, Local and Personal Acts are not included.

The position on secondary legislation is similar. Statutory Instruments are reprinted whilst in regular demand, and when printed copies cease to be available we offer customers the British Library photocopying service. There is no Statutes in Force equivalent for secondary legislation.

If your question has been prompted by difficulties experienced by yourself or a constituent in obtaining a particular piece of legislation, please let me have the details and I shall be happy to arrange supply.

Legal Aid

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Lord Chancellor intends to publish his conclusions on the reform of the legal aid system in England and Wales. [35650]

Mr. Streeter: The Lord Chancellor has today published a White Paper, "Striking the Balance", which sets out the Government's policy for the reform of legal aid in England and Wales. Copies of the White Paper are available in the Vote Office.

ENVIRONMENT

Contracts

5. Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to ensure fair competition between direct service organisations and the private sector in the tendering of contracts for local authority services. [33936]

Sir Paul Beresford: We propose to amend the framework for white collar compulsory competitive tendering and to take vigorous enforcement action when our new guidance is breached.

15. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his plans to ensure fair competition between direct service organisations and the private sector in the tendering of contracts for local authority services. [33948]

Sir Paul Beresford: We propose to amend the framework for the white collar CCT and to take vigorous enforcement action when our new guidance is breached.

Forestry

14. Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding environmental measures in respect of forestry. [33947]

Mr. Clappison: This Department receives many representations on the environmental aspects of forestry.

Area Cost Adjustment

16. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of his review of the area cost adjustment. [33949]

Mr. Curry: The work of the independent review team on the area cost adjustment has invited comments from local government on a draft report. It expects to present the final report next week.

Housing Transfers

17. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many large-scale voluntary transfers of housing stock have been completed; and if he will make a statement. [33950]

Mr. Clappison: Fifty-one local authorities have transferred over 223,000 dwellings, generating over £3.6 billion in private finance. The 1996–97 disposals programme includes a further six authorities and 25,000 dwellings.

Additionally, we are encouraging transfers in urban areas through the estates renewal challenge fund. We recently announced that 11 authorities will receive a total of £174 million to improve 19,000 homes on 29 of the most run-down and needy estates through transfers over the next three years. This will bring in a further £250 million in private investment.

Water Pre-payment Devices

18. Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitoring his Department is conducting into the effects of the installation of water key pre-payment devices. [33951]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: This is a matter for the Director General of Water Services.

Local Authorities (Misconduct Reports)

19. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress made in discussions with local authority association and insurance companies regarding the publication of reports commissioned by local authorities into allegations of serious misconduct by them. [33952]

Sir Paul Beresford: My officials have had preliminary discussions with local authority associations and their discussions continue. We understand that the associations are writing to their member authorities to draw attention to the associations' code of practice on ad hoc inquiries in local government, published in August 1980, and that, in the context of their discussions with my officials and with the Association of British Insurers, they intend to review the principles contained in the code.

Pollution (Mines)

20. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made in dealing with water pollution from old mine workings. [33953]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Considerable progress has been made, and work to prevent pollution is under way at several sites. In addition, the Environment Agency and Coal Authority have identified a shortlist of abandoned coal mines which are causing deterioration in river water quality. Work is currently in progress to investigate feasible solutions.

Design Standards

21. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to encourage higher standards of design in town and country development. [33955]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I take this opportunity to encourage higher standards of design and we are considering what further national guidance might be useful. We have already launched the "quality in town and country" initiative and we recently set up a national urban design campaign, which will be the subject of a major exhibition in October.

Public Interest Notices

22. Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with the Audit Commission about the issuing of public interest notices. [33956]

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State meets the chairman of the Audit Commission from time to time to discuss a range of issues affecting local authority audit. However, the conduct of auditors' work is a matter for auditors and the Audit Commission, which appoints them. Auditors are obliged to follow procedures laid down in statute and amplified in the Audit Commission's code of audit practice.

District Auditors

23. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has had with the controller of the Audit Commission concerning the work of district auditors. [33957]

Mr. Curry: None. The conduct of auditors' work is a matter for auditors and the Audit Commission, which appoints them. Auditors are obliged to follow procedures laid down in statute and amplified in the Audit Commission's code of audit practice.

24. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with local authority associations about the response of authorities to district auditors' reports. [33958]

Mr. Curry: None. An authority's response to an appointed auditor's public interest report is a matter for the authority, their auditor and the Audit Commission, which appoints auditors.

South Pennines Moorlands

25. Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures his Department is taking to protect and encourage biodiversity on the south Pennines moorlands. [33959]

Mr. Clappison: On 29 March 1996 I announced the classification of the Peak district moors—phase 1 of south Pennine moors—as a special protection area under EC directive 79/409/EEC on the conservation of wild birds. Officials are currently considering the results of consultations with other Government Departments, and owners and occupiers on the classification of phase 2 of the south Pennines moors as a special protection area.

Regional Government

26. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received urging that the Government introduce a tier of regional government above the existing framework of local government. [33960]

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend receives representations from time to time. The Government see no case for setting up new bodies to provide regional government, which would simply add an unwanted and unnecessary additional tier of bureaucracy and cost to existing arrangements.

English Partnerships

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the value for money criteria set by English Partnerships in considering applications for assistance; and what variation there is by region. [34420]

Sir Paul Beresford: English Partnerships investment guide, published in November 1994, specifies that all projects that the agency supports must offer good value for money in terms of the forecast outputs attributable to its investment. The guide details the five key outputs and sets out the appraisal criteria that the agency adopts and the priority areas in which it operates. The community investment guide provides similar information for the community investment fund. These publications ensure a consistent basis for approval throughout English Partnerships regions, within which each can express its own strategic priorities. Copies of the investment guide were placed in the Library on 24 November 1994.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown of expenditure by region by English Partnerships in the financial year 1995–96. [34391]

Sir Paul Beresford: English Partnerships expenditure by region on its development programme in 1995–96, the agency's second full financial year of operation, is set out in the table.

Region	Expenditure £ million
North East	34.3
North West	52.0
Yorkshire and Humberside	55.0
Midlands	58.0
South East	25.6
South West	11.8
Total	236.7

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many jobs have been (a) created and (b) retained by region as a result of English Partnerships investment in projects during 1995–96. [34418]

Sir Paul Beresford: The agency's employment outputs do not currently distinguish on a comprehensive basis between jobs created and retained. This will be possible when the agency's new information technology project is fully implemented. The number of jobs which will be created or retained by region as a result of projects approved by English Partnerships in 1995–96 is set out in the table.

Region	Total jobs expected to be created/retained
North East	4,300
North West	6,500
Yorkshire and Humberside	8,000
Midlands	3,300
South East	1,600
South West	300
Total	24,000

These figures relate only to the direct employment outputs of English Partnerships investment arising on the sites themselves. The agency's development projects also have significant indirect employment benefits on wider local economies.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will provide a list of the projects over £1 million development cost by region for schemes that received funding from English Partnerships in 1995–96; [34393]

(2) if he will list the new projects by region over £1 million begun by English Partnerships since its formation, excluding projects inherited from (a) English Estates, (b) city grant, (c) urban development grant and (d) other programmes subsumed by English Partnerships. [34419]

Sir Paul Beresford: English Partnerships has approved 218 projects, each costing over £1 million, since its formation in November 1993. Of these, 123 were approved in 1995–96. I have asked English Partnerships to write to the hon. Member with a list of these projects, by region. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide a breakdown of funding by English Partnerships, to (a) private sector, (b) local authority, (c) community, (d) voluntary sector, (e) non-departmental public bodies and (f) others in the financial year 1995–96. [34392]

Sir Paul Beresford: English Partnerships records project information by programme. The partnership investment programme invests in strategic projects which draw together a wide range of partners, primarily the private sector and local authorities, and the land reclamation programme supports local authority reclamation projects. The community investment fund supports smaller projects, undertaken by the voluntary sector and community groups, which achieve community benefits. Most of the agency's partnership investment projects also have community benefits. In addition, the agency undertakes development on its own account through a direct development programme where the needs is great, no suitable partner exists, and where such action—land assembly—will facilitate further private sector development. The table gives a breakdown of expenditure by these categories in 1995–96:

	Spend 1995–96 £ (million)
Partnership Investment Programme	117.4
Land Reclamation Programme	84.4
Community Investment Fund	0.1
Voluntary Sector	1.0
Direct Development	33.8
Total	236.7

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many successful challenge fund bids English Partnerships is a partner in; if he will name them; and what are the amounts of money committed. [34351]

Sir Paul Beresford: English Partnerships is a potential partner in delivering 106 of the successful challenge fund bids. Many of these projects have not yet reached the stage where financial resources can be committed and are currently under appraisal by the agency. I have asked English Partnerships to write to the hon. Member with a list of all these projects, by region. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Community Investment Fund

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which projects the community investment fund (a) has invested in and (b) made grants to in the financial year 1995–96 and how much by region; if he will name the projects; and what amount of money has been committed. [34352]

Sir Paul Beresford: English Partnerships has approved a total investment of £919,000 for community investment fund projects since the launch of the fund in June 1995. Payments to the value of £80,000 were made during 1995–96. The agency has set aside £3 million a year for the future operation of the fund. The community investment fund covers only those projects undertaken by voluntary and community groups which require an English Partnerships investment of less than £100,000. Most of the agency's partnership investment projects also have community benefits. In addition, the agency supports the groundwork foundation and groundwork trusts in developing community-based initiatives for the clearance and remediation of small sites. I have asked English Partnerships to write to the hon. Member with a list of all these projects, by region. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

European Regional Development Grants

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications have been made for the period 1994 to 1999 for European objective 5b funding; and how many applications in each of the 5b areas have received funding. [34742]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government offices for the regions and MAFF regional service centres have received a total of 3,051 project applications for grant under the objective 5b structural funds programmes in England since the European Commission approved them between December 1994 and March 1995.

The number of successful applications which have received offers of grant in each of the English objective 5b areas is as follows:

Northern Uplands: 377
South West: 321
English Marches: 83
Lincolnshire: 66
East Anglia: 49
Midlands Uplands: 47

Pesticide Containers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what methods of disposal of empty pesticide containers are approved by him. [34739]

Mr. Clappison: Waste must be managed and disposed of in accordance with part II of the Environment Protection Act 1990. The Department does not recommend a particular form of disposal for empty pesticide containers but it has issued general guidance in the form of waste management paper No. 21 "Pesticide wastes." This deals with disposal of pesticide wastes derived from production and use. The final chapter consists of a code of practice which includes recommendations on disposal of empty pesticide containers.

Job Creation

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new jobs have been created through regeneration policies covering the Greater London area, in each of the last three years. [34596]

Sir Paul Beresford: The numbers of new jobs created in London by this Department's regeneration programmes over the past three years are:

1993–94: 8,263

1995–96: 15,214

These totals include jobs safeguarded and construction jobs in respect of some programmes for which it is not possible to disaggregate the figures.

Public Path Orders

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors led him to amend the Local Authorities (Recovery of Costs for Public Path Orders) Regulations 1993 to remove the ceiling on charges for the making of a public path order. [34856]

Mr. Clappison: The amendment of the Local Authorities (Recovery of Costs for Public Path Orders) Regulations 1993 is consistent with our policy of removing unnecessary bureaucracy from local authorities. Independent research, which we commissioned to examine the operation of the regulations, found that the ceiling on charges for the making of public path orders prevented local authorities from recovering their costs in most cases. It also found no evidence that the ceiling has encouraged greater efficiency.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the amount of money available from European funds for SRB payments in (a) 1992, (b) 1993, (c) 1994 and (d) 1995. [34868]

Sir Paul Beresford: Funding from European structural funds adds to, rather than contributes towards, domestic expenditure on regeneration activities under the single regeneration budget. The SRB challenge fund, which began supporting schemes from April 1995, can provide matching funding for schemes also assisted from European structural funds. Information on the amount of such expenditure in the financial year 1995–96 is not yet available.

New Housing

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total number of housing starts in England in the first quarter of 1996; and what was the equivalent figure for the same quarter last year. [34095]

Mr. Clappison: It is estimated that there were 31,800 new dwellings started in England during the first quarter of 1996, compared with 36,100 started in the first quarter of 1995.

Mixed Oxide Fuels

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reports he has received from British Nuclear Fuels plc regarding the environmental implications of extending the manufacture and processing of MOX nuclear fuels. [34462]

Mr. Clappison: British Nuclear Fuels supplied Copeland borough council with environmental documentation to support the planning application for the Sellafield MOX fuel fabrication plant, a copy of which was sent to the Department. As part of the normal regulatory procedures for the plant, British Nuclear Fuels supplied technical documentation, which includes environmental data, to the regulators, including the then Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution. Information has also been supplied to the Department for preparation of a submission to the European Commission under article 37 of the Euratom treaty.

Council House Sales

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council house tenants have bought their homes since 1979; how many council tenancies remain; and if he will make a statement. [34386]

Mr. Clappison: In the period between April 1979 and December 1995 about 1.462 million dwellings were sold by local authorities and new towns in England to sitting tenants. A further 73,000 empty dwellings were sold for owner occupation during this period, some of which will have been sold to council or new town tenants.

At 1 April 1995, the latest date for which figures are available, the stock of local authority and new town dwellings in England stood at 3.565 million.

Waste Management Planning Scheme

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received with regard to the waste management planning scheme; [34679]

(2) what assessment he has made of the compliance of the waste management planning scheme with article 3 of the European waste framework directive to encourage the recovery of waste by means of recycling. [34680]

Mr. Clappison: In December 1995, my Department published guidance on waste management planning. It set out the information that the Environment Agency should collect about how much waste was produced of each type, where, and by whom; and about facilities disposing of or recovering waste—including facilities recovering non-ferrous metals discarded as waste.

By following this guidance, the Environment Agency will be able to provide information to development planners to provide a framework for the increased recycling of all waste components, including non-ferrous metals.

The guidance covers advice on waste minimisation and the co-ordination of recycling activities in local authorities to make this more efficient and sustainable. Therefore, insofar as it is required, I am satisfied that the guidance delivers the requirements of article 3 of the waste framework directive.

We received a number of representations about the guidance from representatives of the non-ferrous metal recycling industry.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many statutory instruments his department introduced in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) between 1 January 1996 and 1 May 1996, which had the effect of repealing one or more previous statutory instruments without replacing them with a new regulation. [35036]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not available in the form requested. However, a list of regulations that have been repealed or amended was placed in the House Libraries by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 8 May.

Vacant Properties

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's latest estimate of vacant properties owned by (a) local authorities. (b) housing associations and (c) private owners. [33932]

Mr. Curry: On 1 April 1995, the latest date for which figures are available, the vacancy figures for these categories were 71,800, 20,900 and an estimated 690,000 respectively.

Market Testing

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the estimated total savings from market testing for local authorities in 1995–96; and how much this amounts to for the average D band council tax payer. [33939]

Sir Paul Beresford: Estimated savings from work subject to compulsory competitive tendering amount to £160 million in 1995–96, equivalent to about £10 off the average D band council tax. Individual authorities that have embraced the spirit of competition have made significantly higher savings and have improved standards.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he has made in regard to the allocation of capital resources for local authorities to tackle contaminated land in 1996–97. [35629]

Mr. Clappison: We have today written to 44 local authorities and waste disposal authorities informing them of the Secretary of State for the Environment's intention to issue supplementary credit approvals of nearly £7.4 million for 1996–97 in respect of capital expenditure on 83 new projects to deal with contaminated land problems.

This makes a total of £14.1 million being made available under the contaminated land SCA programme this year, as the Department of Environment has already written to 35 authorities about making SCAs of £6.7 million in respect of 94 on-going projects from previous years and two new projects.

Since its inception in 1990–91 this programme has provided some £67 million of SCAs for work to be undertaken on contaminated sites.

The SCA programme for contaminated land is aimed at tackling problems on sites in local authority ownership or where they have responsibility to take action and cannot recover their costs. The Department operates an assessment and prioritisation procedure to ensure that the available funding goes to projects representing the greatest threat to health or the environment.

North Sea Conference

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the guidance note on implementation of the declaration of the fourth North sea conference in Ebjerg, Denmark, on 8 and 9 June 1995. [35630]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I am pleased to be publishing the UK guidance note on the ministerial declaration made at the fourth North sea conference today. The guidance note sets out the commitments made at the fourth North sea conference and the actions necessary to implement them. It clearly demonstrates the progress that has already been made in realising those commitments and highlights our determination to continue to work for the protection of the marine environment, both in the North sea and in all the seas and coastal waters surrounding the United Kingdom. Copies of the guidance note will be placed in the Library of the House.

TRANSPORT

Search and Rescue Services

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the declared maximum transmission range of the S61N; and if he will make a statement; [33611]

(2) what is the declared maximum operation range, without refuelling, of search and rescue helicopters; and if he will make a statement. [33610]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 2 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about search and rescue helicopters.

Pending the formal adoption of the criteria proposed by the SAR Helicopter Review Group there is no "declared maximum operating range" of search and rescue helicopters. The range at which helicopters can operate depends on the weather and the nature of the task, as well as on aircraft characteristics. As an example the range at which existing UK SAR helicopters could complete a stretcher recovery of a person from a vessel and return with them to base, in still air would be (in nautical miles):

RAF Sea King: 265

RN Sea King: 240

Coastguard S61: 200

"Maximum transmission range" is an unfamiliar term in the flying world, both civilian and military. It has therefore been assumed that the term means the maximum distance an aircraft can cover between two points, assuming no fuel used on SAR tasks. For the Coastguard SAR S61 the distance is 420 nautical miles.

Motorway Lane Markings

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what study he has made of the system of motorway lane marking as used in France, designed to secure adequate distance between vehicles at given speeds. [34672]

Mr. Norris: The Transport Research Laboratory has conducted research and has published the results in project report 118 "M1 Chevron Trial—Accident Study" in August 1995, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Trains (Luggage Racks)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by region for the last 12 months the cost of the replacing stolen luggage racks from passenger trains; and if he will make a statement. [34986]

Mr. Watts: This information is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Seat Belts

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what transport standards apply to the fitting of retrofitted seat belts on school transport; and if he will make a statement. [35443]

Mr. Norris: Retrofitted seat belts can be approved to either European or British standards. Each belt approved to these standards will display an approval mark.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to license seat belt fitters. [35444]

Mr. Norris: There are currently no plans to license seat belt fitters.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the safety of retrofitted seat belts. [35445]

Mr. Norris: There is a large body of research on seat belts generally but the Department has not commissioned research specifically into the safety of retrofitted seat belts.

Selkent Buses

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress being made by the operator of the Selkent route franchise of London Transport Buses. [35459]

Mr. Norris: This is a matter for London Transport Buses.

Passenger Rail Subsidies

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what approaches for increased subsidy have been made to the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising by each of the private operators providing passenger rail services since the commencement of their franchise agreements; and if he will make a statement. [35449]

Mr. Watts: None.

EU Bus and Coach Directive

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place a copy of the fiche d'impact for the EU bus and coach directive in the Library. [34988]

Mr. Norris: The Commission has not yet tabled a proposal for a European bus and coach directive, and consequently no fiche d'impact has yet been issued.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Compensation Recovery Unit

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to announce his policy response to the fourth report of the Social Security Committee, HC196 of Session 1994–95, on the work of the compensation recovery unit. [33356]

Mr. Roger Evans: The reply by the Government to the fourth report of the Select Committee on compensation recovery was published on 2 October 1995, Cm 2997. A compliance cost assessment of the Select Committee's proposals was also published on 14 February. Consultation exercises on the future of the compensation recovery scheme and on the implications of the compliance cost assessment ended on 13 November 1995 and 29 April 1996 respectively.

The Government will announce their decision in due course.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will make a statement on the organisation of the work of the Benefits Agency's internal fraud investigators; [33788]

(2) how many Benefits Agency staff have been (a) disciplined, (b) suspended or (c) dismissed for matters relating to benefit fraud in the period 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996; [33782]

(3) how many Benefits Agency staff have been prosecuted for matters relating to benefit fraud in the period 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996; what were the charges laid and their outcome; how much benefit was defrauded in each case; what was the grade and office location of the Benefits Agency of each employee involved; and how many such employees were employed in offices at (a) local, (b) headquarters and (c) other levels. [33783]

Mr. Heald: Internal fraud investigations in the Benefits Agency are the responsibility of area directors and their equivalents, and the personnel services manager for Beenefits Agency central services.

Each director has specially trained investigators who conduct investigations into staff working in the directorate. In addition to full-time permanent investigators, directors have panels of trained investigators, normally employed on other duties, who can be called on to assist in investigations when necessary. Often the panel members will have expertise in a particular area.

The Benefits Agency security branch provides a central support and co-ordinating function for investigators throughout the agency.

Disciplinary and prosecution action is also the responsibility of area directors and their equivalents within the agency. Disciplinary action taken specifically as a result of benefit fraud is not distinguished from that taken for other reasons in central records.

Details of staff suspended are not recorded as suspension is an interim measure taken by managers pending the conclusion of investigative action.

Information is, however, collated centrally relating to the prosecution and disciplinary action taken as a result of area directors' investigations.

Involvement of staff in benefit fraud is viewed very seriously by the Benefits Agency, and will result in dismissal and prosecution when proven.

The figures in the table relate to disciplinary action taken between 1 April 1995 and 31 March 1996 as a result of area directors' investigations, where the investigation identified benefit-related fraud. This includes cases where members of staff were found to be "living together as husband and wife" with benefit customers, where such action resulted in a fraudulent benefit claim. The figures do not include cases where officers resigned.

	Number
Benefits Agency staff dismissed for involvement in benefit related fraud	10
Staff receiving other penalties for involvement in benefit related fraud	0

Figures are not kept centrally relating specifically to prosecutions arising from benefit fraud.

The cases listed in the list are those prosecutions resulting from area directors' investigations in the Benefits Agency, and which were completed between 1 April 1995 and 31 March 1996, which involved any benefit. This includes misappropriation of instruments of payment, and frauds which involved misuse of the benefits administration system rather than false benefit claims.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what amounts were spent by the Government on the detection of benefit fraud in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95. [34031]

Mr. Heald: In 1993–94, over £70 million was allocated for the detection of benefit fraud. In 1994–95, the allocation increased to over £77 million.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the steps taken to publicise the availability of disability working allowance among (a) people with disabilities, (b) employers and (c) professionals working with disabled people. [33830]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Disability working allowance has been promoted regularly since it was launched in 1992. A comprehensive programme of publicity has aimed to reach the widest possible audience and has included campaigns at national and local levels. Initiatives aimed at specific groups are as follows:

Disabled people:

Television campaigns in 1992 and 1995;

On-going newspaper campaigns from 1992, including articles in the jobs pages of local newspapers;

Benefit News for Jobhunters which is published on a bi-monthly basis;

Working with Benefits campaign on television, radio and in newspapers which started in 1995;

On-going exhibitions and seminars such as the 1995 Motability Exhibition (around 50,000 people attended) and Business In the Community seminar (Birmingham).

Employers:

Three videos about DWA have been produced aimed mainly at professional advisers and employers (1993–1996);

National press campaign in March 1996 aimed at employers;

Seminars have been held at places such as Remploy and The Shaw Trust;

Ongoing distribution of DWA leaflets and literature to selected employers.

Professionals working with disabled people:

Campaigns in specialist press in 1992 and 1996 aimed at professionals working with people with disabilities;

BBC Select's night-time television service promoted DWA in 1992;

Benefit News for Jobhunters published on a bi-monthly basis has been widely distributed to professional advisers;

Various seminars and the distribution of leaflets are carried out regularly to professionals: for example, SCOPE; MENCAP; NACAB and Job Centres.

War Pensions

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost to his Department of disregarding war disablement and war widows' pensions in their entirety for the purpose of calculating housing benefit and council tax rebates. [33880]

Mr. Roger Evans: A broad estimate of the cost of fully disregarding all war disablement pensions and war widows' pensions for housing benefit and council tax benefit purposes is £80 million per annum.

Notes:

1. Estimates are based upon the May 1994 Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry; the 1991, 1992 and 1993 Family Expenditure Survey; and data given in local authority subsidy returns for 1994–95.

2. Estimates have been uprated to 1996–97 levels and use factors derived from the 1996 Departmental Report on the growth of average Housing Benefit and the growth of the war pensions caseload.

3. In compiling these estimates, expenditure has been rounded, wherever appropriate, to the nearest £5 million.

4. Estimates are broad order estimates only, due to lack of comprehensive data.

Benefit Statistics

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of introducing a taper of (a) 50 per cent. and (b) 70 per cent. on earnings above each of the earnings disregards for (i) income support, (ii) housing benefit and (iii) council tax benefit; and how many people would gain from these changes. [34231]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is set out in the table.

	50 per cent. tapered earnings disregard	70 per cent. tapered earnings disregard
Income support taper
Cost	£130 million	£230 million
Income support gainers	180,000	200,000
Housing benefit taper
Cost	£1.4 billion	£2.4 billion
Housing benefit gainers	800,000	1 million
Council tax benefit taper
Cost	£500 million	£1.4 billion
Council tax benefit gainers	1.2 million	2.6 million

1. The cost of the income support taper includes the cost of increased numbers on income support, including any additional entitlement to housing benefit and council tax benefit.

2. Gainers include numbers additionally entitled to benefit.

3. Figures are based on the 1994 QSE and the 1991/1992/1993 Family Expenditure Survey, uprated to 1996/7 levels. Costs for income support are rounded to the nearest £5 million, gainers to the nearest 10,000. For housing benefit and council tax benefit costs are rounded to the nearest £0.1 billion, gainers are rounded to the nearest £0.1 million.

4. Figures for IS include the effect of jobseekers allowance from October 1996. The effect on the back to work bonus has not been estimated, as future behavioural effects are very uncertain.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) couples and (b) lone parents claimed the child care allowance in respect of claims for (i) family credit, (ii) disability working allowance, (iii) housing benefit and (iv) council tax benefit, (1) since its introduction, (2) during 1995–96 and (3) currently. [34235]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

	Cumulative to February 1996	Current as at February 1996
Family credit
Couples	2,000	1,000
Lone parents	34,000	22,000
Disability working allowance
Couples	17	9
Lone parents	90	72

Sources:

1. Family Credit 5 per cent. sample of all awards.
2. Disability Working Allowance 100 per cent. of all awards.

Notes:

1. Numbers for Family Credit have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. Figures for Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit are not yet available.
3. Data are provisional.

Appeals

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 17 June, Official Report, column 333, if he will list those organisations and individuals with whom he is consulting with regard to his review of the arrangements for decisions and appeals. [34496]

Mr. Roger Evans: The review is still being conducted and no decisions have yet been taken on the nature or timing of wider consultation.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of invalid care allowance are also in receipt of part-time earnings; and what is the average amount of earnings paid. [34225]

Mr. Burt: As at 20 June 1996, 24,725 invalid care allowance recipients had earnings from employment.

Information regarding the number of hours worked and the average amount of earnings is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Invalid Care Allowance database—100 per cent. count.

Disability Benefits

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of extending the eight–week linking rule for incapacity benefits as qualifying benefits for disability working allowance to two years; and how many people would gain from this change; [34247]

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of introducing a taper of (a) 50 per cent. and (b) 70 per cent. on earnings above the limit for exempt work for (i) incapacity benefit and (ii) severe disablement allowances; and how many people would gain from these changes; [34232]

(3) what is his estimate of the cost of extending the eight-week linking rule for incapacity benefit to two years. [34246]

Mr. Burt: Information on which to base reliable estimates is not available.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average number of children per family claiming (a) family credit and (b) disability working allowance (i) in total and (ii) where the oldest child is aged under (1) five years and (2) 11 years. [34236]

Mr. Rogers Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Average number of children in families receiving family credit and disability working allowance

	Family credit	Disability working allowance
All cases	2.0	1.9
Oldest child aged under 5 years	1.4	1.4
Oldest child aged under 11 years	1.8	1.8

Notes:
1. Average number of children per family are expressed to one decimal place.
2. For Disability Working Allowance, the average number of children has been expressed as the average number in families with children.
3. Data for Family Credit and Disability Working Allowance are for October 1995 and January 1996 respectively.

Source:
1. Family Credit 5 per cent. sample of awards.
2. Disability Working Allowance 100 per cent. count of claims.

Mortgage Repayments (Benefits)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the maximum monthly amount of benefit paid by his Department towards the payment of mortgage repayments on properties belonging to unemployed people. [34593]

Mr. Roger Evans: There is no set maximum amount. However, for new income support claimants there is a limit of £100,000 on the size of mortgage for which help is available. At our current standard interest rate of 7.48 per cent. this gives a weekly amount of £137.38 with MIRAS, £143.85 without. This limit does not apply when part of the loan was used to adapt the home to meet the special needs of a disabled person.

Income Support

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) male and (b) female claimants of income support where the claimant (i) is signing on as unemployed and (ii) is sick or disabled, are also claiming for an adult dependant; and what is the average amount of benefit payable in each case. [34217]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

Unemployed and sick or disabled income support claimants with adult dependants—August 1995

	Male claimants		Female claimants
	Number of cases	Average weekly income support	Number of cases	Average weekly income support
Unemployed	349,000	£96.29	19,000	£84.15
Sick or disabled	282,000	£76.81	92,000	£81.46

Short-term sick cases paid by Automated Credit Transfer are not included.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of raising the income support earnings disregard for lone parents to £25 per week; and how many people would gain from these changes. [34233]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table:

1996–97 cost and gainers	Cost (£ million)	Income support gainers
Increasing the income support earnings disregard for lone parents to £25	20	45,000

1. The cost includes the cost of increased numbers on Income Support, including any additional entitlement to Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.
2. Gainers, include people additionally entitled to Income Support as a result of the change.
3. Figures are based on the 1994 Quarterly Statistical Enquiry and the 1991/1992/1993 Family Expenditure Survey, uprated to 1996/7 levels. Costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million, gainers to the nearest 5,000.
4. The total cost includes the cost of Jobseeker's Allowance from October 1996. The effect on the back to work bonus has not been estimated, as it not possible to quantify reliably future behavioural effects.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were disqualified from income support where the claimant's partner was working for more than 16 hours a week; and what is his estimate of the cost of abolishing the hours limit for partners. [34216]

Mr. Evans: Information is not available in respect of the number of people disqualified from income support where a partner works more than 16 hours a week.

The estimated cost of abolishing the hours rule for partners of income support claimants is about £150 million to £200 million per annum. This is at 1996–97 levels of incomes and prices, and includes the cost of jobseeker's allowance, income-related, from October 1996. The figures take no account of possible behavioural changes, or the increase to 24 hours a week for partner's hours from October 1996.

In-work Benefits

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by labour sector the number of people receiving in-work benefits in each year since 1979. [34743]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available. Information is held on the occupations of in-work benefit recipients, rather than on the industrial sector in which they are employed.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by occupations previously covered by the wages council order the number of people receiving in-work benefits in each year since 1979. [34744]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available.

National Insurance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the amount of national insurance contributions which have been unpaid during each of the last three years from (a) employers and (b) the self-employed. [34244]

Mr. Heald: Estimates of the value of national insurance contributions unpaid by employers are available only for the 1992–93 and 1993–94 tax years. A random survey of employers known to the Contributions Agency estimated that underpayments of class 1 NIC for 1992–93 and 1993–94 were £111 million and £76 million respectively.

Self-employed contributors pay class 2 and class 4 contributions. Class 2 contributions are collected by direct debit payments or in response to the issue of quarterly bills. Estimates as to unpaid class 2 contributions could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Class 4 contributions are collected by the Inland Revenue, which draws up its accounts on the last Friday in October. For the years ended 1993 to 1995 the amounts of class 4 contributions[1] uncollected and written off were:

1993: £66.7 million

1994: £52.8 million

1995: £34.5 million

Figures for class 4 contributions are for England and Wales and Scotland only.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in each year since 1989 have been in receipt of a national insurance credit for (a) incapacity, where no benefit is in payment, (b) unemployment, where no benefit is in payment, (c) people entitled to invalid care allowance, (d) people receiving statutory sick pay, (e) women receiving statutory maternity pay and (f) men aged between 60 and 64 years. [34275]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Funeral Costs

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the average cost of a funeral in each of the last five years and for the current year in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) the United Kingdom as a whole; and if he will make a statement; [34412]

(2) what figures his Department has on the average cost of a funeral in each of the last five years and for the current year in each region of England; and if he will make a statement. [34413]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Department does not collect information on funeral costs. Where someone has good cause for taking responsibility for a funeral but they have insufficient funds, help is available from the social fund. The reasonable cost of a dignified funeral is allowed. This includes up to £500 for a specified funeral director's charges, plus all the necessary disbursements for either a burial or cremation.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent investigations his Department has commissioned into the cost of simple funerals. [34405]

Mr. Evans: Social fund funeral payments cover the reasonable cost of a dignified funeral. This includes up to £500 for specified funeral directors' charges, plus all the necessary disbursements for either burial or cremation. In the case of burials, the cost to the taxpayer could well exceed £1,000. In deciding the reasonable costs, the adjudication officer takes into account the level of prices charged locally for each of the items allowable.

Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what medical and scientific personnel and resources are utilised by the War Pensions Agency when it decides whether to award a pension to former service personnel who are claiming disablement because they participated in experiments in the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down. [34473]

Mr. Heald: This is a matter for Mr. Kevin Caldwell, chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the medical and scientific personnel and resources utilised by the War Pensions Agency when it decides whether to award a pension to former service personnel who are claiming disablement because they participated in experiments in the service volunteers programme at the Chemical Defence Establishment at Porton Down.

Claims to War Pensions are considered individually and according to their specific circumstance. War Pension may be awarded when it is accepted that disablement is attributable to or aggravated by service (including participation in the tests).

War Pensions legislation provides that medical matters are determined by medical officers appointed or recognised for the purpose. Administrative officers acting on behalf of the Secretary of State confirm service details made in relation to the claim.

War Pension doctors are fully qualified medical practitioners with wide clinical experience. On entry they undergo prolonged training on all aspects of the War Pensions Scheme, including the law, policy and medicine in relation to War Pensions. This includes discussion and information relating to particular service zones and experiences. In addition they have access to a well stocked library which contains medical, scientific, and service (including historical) information.

War Pensions doctors base their adjudication on relevant medical evidence, which may include service medical details, and post service medical records. War Pensions claimants may be required to undergo a War Pensions medical examination or be seen and examined by an independent specialist accredited to an appropriate speciality. Where the medical issues are complex, or some conflicting evidence exists, the case may be referred to a Regional Consultant for examination and report or in some cases for a documentary opinion. This referral is accompanied by a full typewritten Statement of Case, containing all available relevant evidence. Regional Consultants are people of special eminence in their field of work.

In cases where service at the Clinical and Biological Defence Establishment is an issue, relevant information, whether service medical or scientific, is obtained from the Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of (a) the disability living allowance care component and (b) attendance allowance have had their benefits suspended during a period in hospital and residential care during each of the last two years. [34782]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many claimants of (a) the Disability Living Allowance (DLA) care component and (b) Attendance Allowance (AA) have had their benefits suspended during a period in hospital and residential care during each of the last two years.

The information requested is not available in the format requested.

It is only possible to provide the number of suspensions for DLA care component at any one point in time. As at 31 May 1996 there have been 31,100 suspensions due to period spent in hospital or residential care.

Data is not held centrally for AA as the majority of cases are paid combined with another benefit by the District Offices. The information, therefore, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of the disability living allowance care component and attendance allowance have been overpaid benefit as a result of a stay in hospital or residential care during each of the past two years; in how many cases this overpayment was recoverable; and where an overpayment was recoverable, what was the total value of benefits overpaid. [34783]

Mr. Mitchell: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking has any claimants of the Disability Living Allowance (DLA) care component and Attendance Allowance (AA) have been overpaid benefit as a result of a stay in hospital or residential care during each of the past two years; in how many cases this overpayment was recoverable; and where an overpayment was recoverable, what was the total value of benefits overpaid.

The information is not available in the format requested.

Figures for DLA overpayments due to a period of hospitalisation or residential care prior to July 1995 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. As a result of an enhancement to the computer system, figures are available from July 1995.

The figures below are from 1 July 1995 to 29 February 1996.

	Number of overpayments	Number recoverable	Value of recoverable overpayments (£)
Hospitalisation	2,715	1,704	455,049.01
Residential care	1,445	577	424,383.04
Total	4,160	2,281	879,432.05

Figures are provisional and subject to amendment.

Figures for AA overpayments due to a period of hospitalisation or residential care prior to April 1996 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. As a result of an enhancement to the computer system, figures are available from April 1996.

The figures in the table are from 1 April 1996 to 26 June 1996.

	Number of overpayments	Number recoverable	Value of recoverable overpayments (£)
Hospitalisation	763	437	95,463.73
Residential care	604	315	146,045.97
Total	1,367	752	241,509.70

Figures are provisional and subject to amendment.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what basis he has issued letters and a leaflet to claimants of the disability living allowance mobility component concerning details of recent periods in hospital in advance of Parliament's decision on the Social Security (Disability Living Allowance and Claims and Payments) Amendment Regulations 1996; and if he will make a statement. [34781]

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many statutory instruments laid before Parliament by his Department in each of the last three years have been exempted from the requirement in section 172(1) of the Social Security Administration Act 1992 to be referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee because they were made within six months of the coming into force of an Act of Parliament; and if he will list each of the Acts of Parliament concerned with the number of statutory instruments affected in each case. [34074]

Mr. Burt: In the 12-month periods ending on 26 June 1994, 1995 and 1996, none, 11 and seven respectively, of which 11 were made under the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Act 1994, six under the Jobseekers Act 1995 and one under the Child Support Act 1995.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list each of the statutory instruments made under the Jobseekers Act 1995 which have been laid before Parliament with the date of laying and the date of coming into force in each case; how many further instruments the Government have in draft, out to consultation or otherwise in preparation to implement the Jobseekers Act 1995; and if he will consider introducing regulations to consolidate the statutory instruments relating to the jobseeker's allowance. [34075]

Mr. Roger Evans: Information on those statutory instruments which have been made under the Jobseekers Act and laid before Parliament, together with the coming into force date of each, is set out in the table. In addition, a number of statutory instruments which will be made under powers contained in the Jobseekers Act are currently in preparation. The regulations governing the back to work bonus and transitional provisions will be consolidated, but there are no current plans to consolidate any other jobseeker's allowance regulations.

[1] Date made.

Earnings

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the numbers of (a) men and (b) women whose earnings are below the level of the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions, indicating for each the estimated average weekly hours of work. [34791]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

Figures from the labour force survey, winter 1995, show that in Great Britain there were an estimated 550,000 men with earnings below the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions; these men worked on average 16.2 hours per week. Of the estimated 2 million women below the limit, average weekly hours were 11.7.

WALES

Forestry Commission Woodland

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of Forestry Commission woodlands in Wales has been sold off since 1981. [34675]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question relates to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Gordon Cowie, to reply.

Letter from Gordon M. Cowie to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 2 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Wales has asked me to reply to your Question about the percentage of woodlands sold in Wales.

Forest Enterprise sold 16,842 hectares of woodland in Wales between 1981 and March 1996 and this represents some 12% of the area owned in 1981.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Forestry Commission woodlands there were in 1981; and how many now exist in what was the former county of Clwyd. [34676]

Mr. Evans: There are no records of the number of individual woodlands in Clwyd, but the area of woodland is estimated to have increased since 1981 from some 22,000 hectares to nearly 23,000 hectares.

EU Business (Veto)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the items of EU business which have been vetoed by the Government since the announcement of the non-co-operation policy which would have applied in Wales; and what assessment he has made of the impact of each item in Wales. [34489]

Mr. Hague: Under the policy of non-co-operation the United Kingdom withheld agreement to 74 measures requiring unanimous approval. The Prime Minister announced on 24 June that the policy had been lifted. All the measures affected by the policy are now expected to be taken forward.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many statutory instruments his Department introduced in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) between 1 January 1996 and 1 May 1996, which had the effect of repealing one or more previous statutory instruments without replacing them with a new regulation. [35035]

Mr. Hague: The number of statutory instruments introduced by the Welsh Office during the past three years which had the effect of repealing one or more previous statutory instruments without replacing them with a new regulation is as follows:

1994: 1

1995: 0

1996 (from 1 January to 1 May): 2.

NHS Nurses

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time nurses were employed in (i) hospitals, (ii) community service and (iii) general practice in the Welsh NHS in (1) 1980, (2) 1985, (3) 1990 and (4) 1995. [35222]

Mr. Hague: A reliable split between nursing and midwifery staff employed in the hospital and community service is not separately available, and so the information given in the first part of the table relates to all directly employed NHS staff in the nursing and midwifery group.

Numbers of staff in post	1980	1985	1990	1995
Hospital and community service (excluding pre-registration learners) at 30 September:
Full-time	13,264	15,964	17,002	[1]16,152
Part-time	11,798	11,965	13,619	[1]16,515
Nurses in general practice (at 1 October):
Full-time	11	15	—	—
Part-time	95	196	—	—
Total	106	211	753	[2]1,062

— Information not collected centrally.

[1] Excludes staff on local payscales for whom no details of contractual commitment are available centrally.

[2] Provisional.

Health Care Integration

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set up an evaluation exercise of the comparative costs and benefits of (a) integrated hospital, community and ambulance services and (b) separating ambulance services from other health provider services. [35226]

Mr. Hague: I have no plans to set up an evaluation exercise of this nature.

General Practitioners

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time doctors were employed in general practice in Wales in (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1990 and (d) 1995. [35223]

Mr. Hague: Information on the contractual commitment of general medical practitioners was collected for the first time in 1990. The information is given in the table:

Unrestricted general medical practitioners at 1 October

	1990	1995
Full-time	1,553	1,499
Part-time	82	220

NHS Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those trusts which have not to date signed contracts with their local health authorities. [35224]

Mr. Hague: The information provided by NHS trusts is as follows:

Contracts agreed but not signed	Agreement awaited
Wrexham Maelor	Carmarthen
Glan Hafren	Ceredigion
Gwent Community	Derwen
Nevill Hall	Llanelli
Gwynedd Community	Pembrokeshire
North Glamorgan	Morriston
Glan-y-Mor	University Dental Hospital
Mid Wales Ambulance	Gwynedd Hospitals
North Wales Ambulance	University Hospital of Wales
South East Wales Ambulance	Powys
Llandough Rhondda

Ambulance Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he estimates he will receive proposals for revising the boundaries of ambulance trusts from (a) the Welsh ambulance policy and advisory group and (b) Pembrokeshire NHS trust. [35225]

Mr. Hague: I have not received any formal proposals from either the Welsh ambulance policy and advisory group or the Pembrokeshire NHS trust.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will instigate a study into the costs and benefits of (a) single-handed and (b) double-handed ambulance crews providing first attendance at the sites of accidents and other emergencies; what representations he has received on the proposals to institute single-handed response systems; how it relates to (i) Orcon and (ii) other standards; and if he will make a statement. [35227]

Mr. Hague: The Department of Health has set up a group to review ambulance performance standards. The group's recommendations are expected to address methods of response, and I will be taking advice on the implications of these recommendations for Wales in due course.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has issued to health service units in Wales in relation to the benefits aligning ambulance trust boundaries with (a) the new health authority boundaries and (b) the other emergency services' boundaries; and if he will make a statement. [35228]

Mr. Hague: None.

NHS Efficiency Savings

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from (a) health authorities and (b) trusts concerning the departmental efficiency savings required from them during the 1996–97 financial year. [35229]

Mr. Hague: A number of health authority and NHS trust chairmen and chief executives have expressed some concern at the ability of their organisations to continue to deliver efficiency improvements of 3 per cent. a year.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to ensure that beef for human consumption imported into the United Kingdom from EC countries conforms to the same standards as beef processed by abattoirs in the United Kingdom in respect of precautions against BSE. [31008]

Mrs. Browning: All fresh meat imported into the UK from other member states or third countries must have been produced in accordance with harmonised Community rules laid down in Council directive 64/433/EC.

The Beef (Emergency Control) Order 1996, as amended, prohibits the sale for human consumption of all bovine meat derived from bovines which, at the time of slaughter, were more than 30 months old. This measure applies to all bovines slaughtered after the commencement of the order, whether in the UK or overseas, other than those born, reared and slaughtered in those third countries specifically excluded by the order listed in the schedule to the No. 2 amendment order. The list of countries is confined to those where the Government are satisfied there is no history of BSE and public health rules do not prohibit imports.

The third countries exempted are from the order are:

Argentina
Australia
Botswana
Brazil
Mauritius
Namibia
New Zealand
Paraguay
Poland
South Africa
Swaziland
Uruguay
United States of America
Zimbabwe

As regards bovines less than 30 months of age, a number of countries with BSE have introduced controls requiring the removal of specified bovine offals. We continue to keep the position under review.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the total net cost to the Exchequer of the current BSE eradication scheme in the United Kingdom, with particular reference to the effect on the United Kingdom rebate, for (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98, (c) 1998–99 and (d) thereafter. [35330]

Mrs. Browning: The latest available estimate of the total cost of BSE measures taken in the UK in 1996–97 is £1,037 million. In 1997–98 the cost is estimated to be £748 million and in 1998–99 £685 million.

Estimates for costs in 1999–2000 and subsequent years are not yet available.

After taking account of the net contribution from the EC and the reduction in our abatement, the costs of these measures to the UK taxpayer will be around £2 billion over the three-year period 1996 to 1999.

These costs take account of the measures covering compensation for cattle over 30 months, the new calf slaughter premium, the package of aid for renderers and the abattoir and cutting industries and additional running costs for the agricultural departments.

They do not include any estimate for the normal operation of market support measures or for any additional costs arising from the "accelerated slaughter" of cattle particularly at risk of developing BSE, for which precise estimates are not yet available.

Meat and Bone Meal Fertilisers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the quantity of mammalian meat and bone meal fertilisers spread on land since August 1988. [31196]

Mrs. Browning: The information is not collected centrally. An industry estimate of the quantity of mammalian meat and bone meal fertilisers used is 4,000 tonnes per year, of which 10 per cent. was spread on agricultural land.

Dairy Cows

Mr. Cann: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received that dairy cows older than 30 months are being auctioned at markets for sums less than the Government slaughter compensation price, with particular reference to Holsworthy in north Devon. [33118]

Mr. Baldry: Compensation is paid by the Intervention Board to approved collection centres, which may be abattoirs or liveweight markets, when eligible animals are presented for slaughter at designated abattoirs. The scheme rules do not prevent producers from selling their animals at agreed prices below the compensation rate and I am aware that some have done so.

Listeria

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will conduct an inquiry into listeria contamination of milk. [35060]

Mrs. Browning: I know of no grounds for such an inquiry. Proper heat treatment effectively destroys any listeria contamination in raw milk and the vast majority of milk undergoes a heat treatment. In addition, there are strict hygiene controls on production and processing of milk under the Dairy Products (Hygiene) Regulations 1995.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the British Agrochemicals Association concerning the implementation of the packaging and packaging waste directive (94/92/EC). [34740]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

None. I intend to publish shortly a consultation paper on our proposals in this area and to send copies to business organisations, including the British Agrochemicals Association.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iraq and Iran

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions Her Majesty's Government have taken in respect of missing (a) Kuwaiti and Iranian prisoners of war in Iraq and (b) Iraqi prisoners of war in Iran; and if he will make a statement. [34030]

Mr. Hanley: We urge Iraq and Iran to fulfil their obligations under the relevant UN resolutions covering prisoners of war and support the work of the International Committee of the Red Cross. At meetings of the ICRC's tripartite commission and its technical sub-committee, we have repeatedly pressed the Iraqis about their failure to account for the Kuwaiti and other nationals detained in Iraq after the Gulf war and still unaccounted for.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what decision was taken on applications made to the British post in Islamabad by Tahira Jabeen, Fazal ur Rahman Hussain and Noor ur Rahman Hussain, Ref: Con/5267, for British passports; on what date the applications were made; on what date the Home Office in London was asked to make inquiries in the United Kingdom; on what date he received information about those inquiries; and if he will make a statement. [35232]

Mr. Hanley: No decision has been taken on the passport applications made by Tahira Jabeen, Fazal ur Rahman Hussain and Noor ur Rahman Hussain, to the British high commission in Islamabad. The three applications remain under consideration:

The applications were made on 13 December 1994 and the applicants interviewed on 2 October 1995.

Inquiries were made of the Home Office on 3 October 1995 and a response was received on 19 November 1995.

Visa Applications

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for the issue of visas to Russian citizens to visit the United Kingdom were received by the British embassy in Moscow and the consulate in St. Petersburg, in each year from 1991 to 1994 and in the current year to date. [35235]

Mr. Hanley: Applications for United Kingdom visas received by the British embassy in Moscow and the British consulate general in St. Petersburg from 1991 to the present date were:

	Moscow	St. Petersburg
1991	57,834	Nil
1992	50,303	Nil
1993	61,367	1,429
1994	86,661	16,658
1995	95,850	18,059
1996	40,974	3,903

The 1996 figures for Moscow are correct as at 31 May 1996, and for St. Petersburg as at 31 March 1996. St. Petersburg started its entry clearance operation on 17 November 1993.

Kashmir

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the extent to which the elections held in Kashmir during May were properly conducted and were free and fair and (b) the accuracy of the official estimates of turnouts; and if he will make a statement. [35032]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 1 July 1996]: Given the complex conditions in the Kashmir valley, we are not in a position to make a clear-cut evaluation of the conduct of the elections, or to say we agree or disagree with the official estimates of turnouts.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Appeal Court

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Attorney-General (1) how many cases referred to the Court of Appeal for sentence review in the last five years had the sentences (a) increased and (b) reduced; and if he will make a statement; [35311]

(2) how many sentences were referred to the Appeal Court for review in the last five years. [35351]

The Attorney-General: During the last five years 232 cases were referred to the Court of Appeal in England and Wales and 10 in Northern Ireland. Twelve were subsequently withdrawn in England and Wales and one in Northern Ireland. To date, 200 of those cases have been heard by the Court of Appeal. Sentence has increased in 172 cases out of 200 or 86 per cent. No case resulted in a reduced sentence.

PRIME MINISTER

Group of Seven Summit

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the outcome of the G7 summit at Lyon. [35352]

The Prime Minister: I attended the Lyon summit on 27 to 29 June with my right hon. and learned Friends, the Foreign Secretary and the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

I have placed in the Library of the House the communiqué, the chairman's statement and other statements and documents issued by the summit.

The summit started with a discussion of economic matters among the G7. In President Yeltsin's absence, we were joined by the Russian Prime Minister, Mr. Chernomyrdin, for a discussion of wider international issues. After the formal conclusion of the summit, we held a meeting with the United Nations Secretary-General and the heads of the International Monetary Fund, World bank and World Trade Organisation to discuss the role of the international institutions, in particular on development.

On the first evening we agreed and issued a declaration on terrorism, condemning the appalling attack in Dhahran and other recent terrorist outrages. We pledged ourselves to fight terrorism by all legal means and agreed that the relevant Ministers should meet in Paris in July to discuss further action. My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary plans to lead the United Kingdom delegation.

Discussion of the world economy demonstrated the extent to which the United Kingdom's economic policy agenda is now shared by all our partners in the G7. Although growth has slowed in some countries since last year, it is picking up again. Unemployment remains higher than many of us would wish, particularly in continental Europe, but we agreed that the way to bring it down was by liberalising labour markets and through other supply side measures. This is reflected in the communique's endorsement of the conclusions of the G7 meeting in Lille earlier this year to discuss employment issues.

There was also consensus on the policies necessary to maintain international monetary stability. We endorsed the work done by Finance Ministers. Their report makes it clear that the key to stability is not management or fixing of exchange rates but sound domestic economic policies.

In Halifax last year we agreed steps to make the international financial institutions more effective. Many have now been taken and we welcomed the enhancement of the IMF's surveillance capacities and the agreement to increase the resources currently available to it under the general arrangement to borrow.

We recognised, however, the need to improve the co-operation between regulators of financial markets in the light of growth in the volume and speed of transactions. We agreed to study in more detail UK ideas for "lead regulators" of internationally active financial institutions. Officials will meet soon to discuss detailed proposals and Finance Ministers will report back to the Denver summit. We also agreed to co-operate more closely in combating financial crime.

We also reviewed progress in reforming the UN. Significant steps had been taken: 1,000 jobs have been cut, with high level posts reduced by 23 per cent.; these were 25 per cent. fewer staff than 10 years ago; and the 1996–97 budget incorporated a 10 per cent. cut in real terms. But much remains to be done and we agreed to review the situation at next year's summit. In particular, a rationalisation of the UN's role in development is necessary to avoid duplication and overlap between its various agencies.

Under President Chirac's theme of globalisation, and with valuable contributions from the heads of the IMF, World bank and UN, we looked at the problems of poorer countries and how they could best be helped. In particular, we focused on the countries of sub-Saharan Africa.

We agreed that in the long run no amount of aid would help unless these countries were willing to help themselves. Aid nevertheless has a crucial role to play, as long as it is effective. It must therefore continue to be conditional on sensible adjustment policies and good government. In particular, we agreed that bilateral donors should reinforce the international financial institutions' efforts to discourage unproductive expenditure by modifying their own aid and export credit policies. Aid should also be targeted at the poorest and focused on basic human needs such as health and education.

Following up initiatives originally launched by the UK, including ideas floated in 1994 in Valetta, the summit endorsed further steps to offer a number of highly indebted poor countries an exit from their unsustainable debt burdens. The IMF will offer more concessional lending from the enhanced structural adjustment facility, to be funded primarily by optimising the management of the IMF's own reserves. The World bank has offered to contribute in the order of $2 billion from its own resources to this initiative. We called on bilateral creditors to improve on the existing Naples terms which allow remission of up to 67 per cent. on a country's debts.

In discussion of trade, we reaffirmed our desire for further liberalisation on the agenda for the forthcoming meeting of World Trade Organisation Trade Ministers in Singapore, including new tariff initiatives. Many of us made clear to President Clinton our deep concern at recent US legislation of a extraterritorial nature relating to Cuba. Unilateral measures of this kind are a serious threat to an open world training system.

We discussed a wide range of global and political issues with Prime Minister Chernomyrdin. He briefed us on the prospects for the second round of the presidential elections in Russia. We welcomed the progress made on nuclear safety and security at the Moscow summit last April, and urged all countries to examine closely the 40 recommendations on combating transnational organised crime drawn up by our experts following the remit we gave them in Halifax.

There was considerable discussion of environmental issues, We agreed it was essential to maintain the impetus following from Rio and to play a positive role in the UN General Assembly's special session on the environment next June.

In pursuing non-proliferation, we affirmed our undertaking to conclude a comprehensive test ban treaty by the start of the next session of the UN General Assembly. We also called on all states to make every effort to secure a global ban on the proliferation and indiscriminate use of anti-personnel land mines, and welcomed the bans already adopted by some countries, including the UK, on the production, use and export of these weapons.

A separate declaration was issued on Bosnia and Herzegovina which emphasised that the prime responsibility for implementations of the Dayton agreement lies with the different communities and their leaders, and underlined the importance of the elections due to take place on 14 September. These should take place on time, in free and fair conditions. We also made clear our insistence that Karadzic step down immediately and permanently from all public functions and take no part in governmental decisions. We reaffirmed the importance of all those indicted by the international war crimes tribunal appearing in The Hague for trial. We warned of the costs of non-compliance with Dayton in terms of sanctions and the availability of economic assistance. We also pledged our full support for Carl Bildt, the high representative, and for efforts to accelerate economic reconstruction in order to encourage co-operation and reconciliation between the different communities.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 2 July. [34385]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Ranjeet Matharu

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Prime Minister if he will order a review of the Crown prosecution papers on the case of the arrest of Ranjeet Matharu for the rape of a 19-year-old Swedish woman with a view to establishing how (a) the Crown Prosecution Service and (b) police procedures can be improved. [35101]

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

No review is possible of the case to which my hon. Friend refers because it arose in 1988–89 and in accordance with Crown Prosecution Service procedures the file would have been destroyed three years thereafter. It is the recollection of the police officer concerned with the case that lack of corroboration, which at that date required a specific warning to the jury, was an important factor on the decision not to proceed with charges of rape and buggery. The Government have since implemented in section 32 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 the recommendation of the royal commission on criminal justice that the rule that juries should be warned of the danger of convicting without corroboration in sexual offences should be abolished.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many statutory measures his Department introduced in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) between 1 January 1996 and 1 May 1996 which had the effect of repealing one or more previous statutory instruments without replacing them with a new regulation. [35030]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 1 July 1996]: This information is not available in the form requested. However, a list of regulations that have been repealed or amended was placed in the House Library by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 8 May.

SCOTLAND

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden, 17 May, Official Report, column 620, if he will give for each public interest immunity certificate the legal event which led to its being issued; and which of the certificates is currently in force. [34824]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The four public interest immunity certificates signed by the then Secretary of State for Transport and the one public interest immunity certificate signed by the then Home Secretary in relation to the fatal accident inquiry were prepared in relation to matters or documents which it was considered should not, in the public interest, be the subject of evidence during that inquiry. Those certificates were signed for the purpose of the fatal accident inquiry. In the event, none of these certificates was relied upon and the inquiry concluded in February 1991 without any of those certificates having been produced in response to any line of questioning.

The two certificates signed in April 1992 by the then Secretary of State for Transport and the one certificate signed by the then Lord Advocate related to the taking of evidence from Dr. Thomas Hayes under a letter of request issued in civil actions then being pursued in the United States. One of these certificates was withdrawn in May 1992 by the then Secretary of State for Transport because the matters to which it related had entered into the public domain by virtue of disclosures made in the United States from official sources. The two remaining certificates did not require to be deployed because the High Court in England ruled that it was not competent to take evidence from a former Crown servant in that capacity under the Evidence (Proceedings in Other Jurisdictions) Act 1975.

The final certificate signed in May 1992 by the then Lord Advocate related to the taking of evidence from a journalist under a letter of request issued in the aforementioned United States civil actions. This certificate also did not require to be deployed because the matter was referred to the High Court tin England but did not proceed to a hearing and the matter was not pursued by the parties to the United States actions.

Accordingly, all proceedings, in respect of which these certificates were signed, have been concluded.

Learning Disabilities (Residential Care)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's policy regarding residential and village communities for people with learning disabilities; what research he has commissioned to evaluate such facilities; and if he will make a statement. [34826]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Residential and village communities are one of a range of residential options available for people with learning disabilities. Decisions on which of these is most appropriate should be taken on an individual basis. However, we await with interest the results of an evaluation of the various types of residential accommodation for people with learning disabilities which has been commissioned by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

European Funding

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on progress in respect of the Barmac N166 site objective 1 application. [34834]

Mr. Kynoch: The approval of the European Commission is required under the terms of the seventh shipbuilding directive for public investment in Barmac's project, as it is presently constituted.

Since February, there have been a number of discussions and meetings between the company, officials of the Scottish Office and of the Department of Trade and Industry's shipbuilding unit and oil and gas projects supplies office. An informal meeting was held on 13 June between United Kingdom officials and the European Commission's Directorate General IV responsible for interpreting and enforcing the seventh shipbuilding directive, at which the Commission asked for clarification of certain issues before approval of the grant could be considered.

Overhead Electricity Lines

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to make a decision on the application under the Electricity Act 1989 for necessary wayleave to keep installed an overhead line across land at Dalespot, St. Ola, Orkney; and if he will make a statement. [35268]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend expects to announce his decision on Hydro-Electric's application for a wayleave to keep installed an overhead electricity line at Dalespot, St. Ola, Orkney shortly.

Cattle Slaughter

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Scotland if he will list the locations his Department is (a) using and (b) considering using for the storage of the remains of cattle aged 30 months or over following processing of carcases at rendering plants prior to final disposal; what is the estimated (i) maximum and (ii) minimum periods these remains will be at these storage sites; and if he will make a statement. [31550]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 17 June 1996]: The rendered remains of cattle slaughtered in Scotland under the 30-month scheme are either stored on site by the rendering company concerned or at a storage facility in Liverpool provided by the Intervention Board for this purpose.

Other locations will be considered if, and when, additional storage facilities are required. As announced by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 16 April, a number of options for the disposal of meat and bone meal produced at plants are under active consideration and in all cases full weight will be given to protecting the environment. The options include incineration and energy recovery. The period of storage will vary between stores and will be dependent upon the final disposal route chosen.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by group, division or other work unit the number of grades of staff working within his Department on animal welfare issues. [34298]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The main responsibility for animal welfare matters rests within the animal health and welfare branch of the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department. The Department also provides administrative support to the state veterinary service in Scotland. Current posts with a direct involvement are as follows:

	Number
Senior Civil Service	1.0
Grade 7	1.0
HEO	1.0
EO	6.5
AO	10.0
AA	20.0
Personal Secretary/Typists	6.0

This does not include other officers, for example, more senior officers, lawyers, press officers and others, who may occasionally spend some of their time on animal welfare matters.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the animal welfare issues for which his Department has responsibility. [34296]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The Department is responsible for all animal welfare issues as they apply to Scotland. This includes all aspects of farm livestock; domestic, captive and wild animals; zoo animals; and the ban on certain methods of killing or taking of birds and wild animals.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) United Kingdom legislation, (b) EU legislation and (c) international treaties, conventions or other obligations concerning animal welfare for which his Department has responsibility. [34297]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

National Lottery

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his plans for the development of policy on the distribution of lottery proceeds. [35631]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am writing today to the chairmen of the Scottish lottery distributing bodies to consult them on a change to the policy directions issued to the Scottish Arts Council under section 26(1) of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993. This would allow an amount of revenue funding to help arts organisations gain long-term financial viability, in a way which would not substitute for existing grant in aid.

The programme would aim to help arts organisations consider and in some cases change their objectives and the markets within which they operate; inject new creative, technical and managerial skills into the organisations to help them achieve their objectives; provide balance sheet stability; and deliver better value for money.

The consultation which I have launched will last until 23 August. I will then consider the responses to the consultation process, with a view to announcing any change to the directions as soon as possible.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Lincolnshire Councils

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Lord President of the Council when borough status will be awarded to the North Lincolnshire and North East Lincolnshire councils. [33954]

Mr. Newton: Subject to the resolution of certain outstanding issues, it is hoped that the petitions for the grant of charters conferring borough status on the North East Lincolnshire and North Lincolnshire district councils can be submitted to Her Majesty the Queen later this month.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the constituencies he has visited in the past three months on official business and the constituencies he intends to visit in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [34359]

Mr. Newton: On 5 April I visited the Merton drug action team, which covers my hon. Friends' constituencies of Mitcham and Morden and of Wimbledon. I have no plans to visit other hon. Members' constituencies on official business in the next three months.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Civil Servants (Duties Abroad)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department spent during the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 on sending civil servants accompanying Ministers from his Department on official duties abroad. [32411]

Mr. Howard: The readily available records do not list the officials who accompanied Ministers on overseas visits during the period in question and this information cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate costs. The available information on costs of accompanying officials is as follows:

1994–95: £23,249 (grade 2s and private secretaries)

1995–96: £28,753 (private secretaries)

Prisoners' Records

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken since March to ensure that the Prison Service has in place by the end of 1996 a database whereby the medical records of sentenced and remand prisoners follow the prisoner and are accessible to all those staff involved in the penal system. [34604]

Miss Widdecombe: The Prison Service is committed to introducing a computerised system for tracking medical records of the kind recommended in the report of the independent inquiry into the case of Jason Mitchell. Since March, 44 prisons have begun to introduce systems of this kind. Completion of this work will extend beyond October 1996 and will be dependent upon the availability of resources.

Prison Incidents

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the dates, number and types of incidents involved reported to the Prison Service since 1 January in relation to (a) the Wolds prison and (b) Doncaster prison. [35011]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 3 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking to list the dates, number and types of incidents involved reported to the Prison Service since 1 January in relation to (a) the Wolds prison and (b) Doncaster prison.

The information requested to 22 June 1996 is shown in the attached tables.

Police Boxes

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will re-introduce police boxes in England. [34997]

Mr. Maclean: This is an operational decision for chief officers of police. I have no plans to do so.

Prisoners (Releases)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were discharged from prison without permanent accommodation in which to live during the last year for which figures are available. [35054]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 3 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners discharged from prison without permanent accommodation in which to live.

The information is not collected and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prisoners (Literacy)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the level of literacy of young offenders in Prison Service establishments; [35022]

(2) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the level of literacy of (i) those receiving custodial sentences for the first time and (ii) the prison population as a whole. [35021]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jack Straw, dated 3 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about research (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the level of literacy of offenders in Prison Service establishments.

There is currently no research underway that we have commissioned on the levels of literacy of those receiving custodial sentence for the first time, on the level of literacy of young offenders, or on the prison population as a whole.

The most recent published survey of offenders admitted to young offender establishments was conducted in 1985.

The Prison Service has plans for a basic literacy screening test for all prisoners to be introduced as part of the planned national curriculum for prison education.

Wolds Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prison officers have been seconded during the last 12 months to the Wolds prison; from what prison establishment they came; and if Her Majesty's inspectorate of prisons was informed of the seconded prison officers working at the Wolds prison when it visited the prison; [34971]

(2) how many times during the last 12 months prison officers were required to work a double shift at the Wolds prison; and what was the reason for the requirement; [35007]

(3) how many prison officers have been seconded during the last 12 months from the Wolds prison; to which prison establishments they went; and if Her Majesty's inspectorate of prisons was informed of the Wolds seconded prison officers when it visited the prison. [35013]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 3 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about staffing at Wolds prison.

There is no record of any member of staff at Wolds prison working double shifts during the last 12 months, and no prison officers have been seconded to work at the Wolds prison since it became operational in April 1992.

Four members of staff from the Wolds prison were on detached duty at Buckley Hall prison in April. They were deployed to support their colleagues at Buckley Hall following a disturbance and to offer advice about systems and procedures. There was no visit by Her Majesty's Inspector of Prisons to Buckley Hall prison at this time, and there has been no visit by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Prisons to Wolds prison over the last 12 months.

Council of Ministers (Financial Convention)

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to ratify the convention on the protection of financial interests of the Council of Ministers; and how this convention will be enforced. [34888]

Mr. Howard: The European Union convention on the protection of the European Communities' financial interests cannot be ratified by the United Kingdom until part I of the Criminal Justice Act 1993, which extends the courts' jurisdiction over certain fraud and dishonesty offences where a significant element of the offence is committed within the United Kingdom, is in force. We are currently considering the practicalities of bringing part I into force and it is not at present possible to specify a date for ratification. For Scotland, some changes to primary legislation may also be required. The convention comes into force only after all 15 European Union member states have ratified it; none has so far done so. Enforcement will be a matter for the Council of Ministers.

Dogs

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to give instructions for those dogs currently held by the Metropolitan police under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991, and in respect of which charges have either been dropped or not brought, to be returned to their lawful owners. [35084]

Mr. Sackville: This is an operational matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

Prison Costs Review

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost to public funds of the review of comparative costs and performance of privately and publicly operated prisons produced by Coopers and Lybrand; and from which budget these costs were met. [35133]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 3 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what was the cost to public funds of the Review of Comparative Costs and Performance of Privately and Publicly Operated Prisons produced by Coopers and Lybrand; and from which budget these costs were met.

The cost was £50,048 including VAT, which was met from the budget of the Director of Finance, which includes provision for research and consultancy.

Next Steps Agencies

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the rates of pay awarded by grade to employees in each of the next steps agencies under his Department's control. [35132]

Mr. Howard: Pay rates in the Prison Service, Forensic Science Service, United Kingdom Passport Agency and the Fire Service College are negotiated by them, and full details are not held centrally. Each chief executive will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Prisons (Hepatitis)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to minimise the spread of hepatitis B and C in prisons in England and Wales. [35441]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated 3 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about steps being taken to minimise the spread of hepatitis B and C in prisons in England and Wales.

Hepatitis is a notifiable disease and acute cases of hepatitis are notified to the Consultant in Communicable Disease Control who provides advice on the management of cases and of outbreaks.

Multidisciplinary HIV teams set up in prison establishments are in the process of receiving further training to orientate them to the other communicable diseases which are important in the prison context. These teams are to be proactive in implementing communicable disease education and prevention programmes at a local level. HIV counsellors in prison are also receiving further training to orientate their skills to prevention of these other communicable diseases, including hepatitis.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in England and Wales currently have hepatitis B or C. [35440]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated 3 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question on how many prisoners in England and Wales currently have cases of hepatitis B or C.

Provisional figures from 126 establishments indicate that on the 31 April 1996 the following numbers of inmates were known to have hepatitis:

	Number
Acute Heptatis B	6
Chronic Hepatitis B	53
Hepatitis B with surface antigen positive	29
Acute Hepatitis C	24
Chronic Hepatitis C	153

Video Evidence

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now implement the outstanding recommendations of the report of the advisory group on video evidence chaired by Judge Thomas Pigot. [35364]

Mr. Maclean: We have implemented the majority of the recommendations made by the advisory group on video evidence, but we are not persuaded that the proposals for pre-trial cross-examination are in the best interests of children. We will keep those recommendations and the proposal to extend the child evidence measures to vulnerable adult witnesses under review in the light of our further work to secure practical improvements in the present arrangements for children to give evidence.

Race Relations

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in relation to funding arrangements under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966; and how many of these expressed concern at delay in announcing what future arrangements will be made. [35430]

Mr. Kirkhope: The detailed information requested is not readily available. We have, however, received a substantial number of representations in writing and by telephone.

We hope to be able to make an announcement about future funding very shortly.

Prisoners

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) male and (b) female prisoners were held by the Prison Service on (i) 27 May 1993 and (ii) 27 May 1996. [35040]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Paddy Tipping, dated 3 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of male and female prisoners being held by the Prison Service on (i) 27 May 1993 and (ii) 27 May 1996.

On 31 May 1993, the nearest date to 27 May for which information is available, 42,091 male and 1,494 female prisoners were being held by the Prison Service; on 27 May 1996, 52,003 males and 2,203 females were being held.

HEALTH

Mental Health

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken to review the Mental Health Act 1983, with particular reference to the mental health review tribunal system. [34598]

Mr. Bowis: None where the Act is concerned.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March to inform mental health review tribunal members of the clinical outcomes for patients following discharge decisions. [34625]

Mr. Bowis: Mental health review tribunal regional chairmen monitor decisions made by tribunals in their regions and always review those where a serious offence has taken place shortly after discharge by a tribunal. In-depth research is shortly to commence into decision making and outcomes of tribunals.

Alternative Therapies

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into alternative therapies as a means of reducing the cost of the NHS. [35061]

Mr. Horam: We are aware of one such study, on manipulation for back pain.

Hospital Building (Buckinghamshire)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update the list of hospital building schemes in Buckinghamshire contained in his answer of 6 June 1995, Official Report, column 33-34; and if he will make a statement. [34944]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the tables.

Employment of Children

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the results of his consultation on laws governing the employment of children will be published; and if he will ensure that all submissions by those organisations consulted will be placed in the Library. [35252]

Mr. Bowis: We will announce our decisions in due course.

Consultant Posts (Advertising)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 86, if he will collect statistics on the number of NHS trusts which (a) have advertised and (b) plan to advertise outside the United Kingdom to recruit consultants in each specialty. [35317]

Mr. Malone: I have no such plans.

Child Abuse Inquiries

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost to public funds of (a) the inquiry into child abuse in Cleveland in 1987 and (b) the report by Lord Justice Butler-Sloss. [35129]

Mr. Bowis [holding answer 1 July 1996]: The total expenditure incurred by the Department of Health in respect of the Cleveland inquiry, including the report by Lord Justice Butler-Sloss, was about £1.25 million.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government (Building Control)

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the levels of competition in building control practices in local government; and if he will make a statement. [35074]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend's views are reflected in the Department of the Environment circular 1/96, which was issued on 25 March 1996. As is made clear in the circular, it is recognised that it is just a small minority of local authorities whose practices warranted the issue of what is essentially a guide to good practice.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has received to his circular on local authority building control and related services, approved inspectors and uncompetitive practices; and if he intends to publish a report on the response. [35075]

Mr. Clappison: Since the circular was issued, a small number of letters has been received from local authorities. It is not intended to publish a report on the response.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the effects of ceasing to charge VAT on building regulations on the work of local authority planning departments. [35076]

Mr. Clappison: It is not the case that local authorities no longer charge VAT on building regulation applications. They continue to charge VAT on the basis of whether or not the type of building work which is to be controlled under the Building Regulations 1991 is subject to competition by private approved inspectors. NHBC Building Control Services Ltd. is currently the only approved inspector. Following recent changes, it may now control developments containing dwellings of any height as well as those containing mixed uses, as prescribed in its approval. Local authorities therefore need to identify building control work which is subject to competition and to charge VAT on it if the applicant chooses to use the local authority's service. Work which is not the subject of competition by approved inspectors will continue not to be subject to VAT.

Waste Management Planning Scheme

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement regarding the waste management planning scheme and how it affects the recycling of non-ferrous metals. [34681]

Mr. Clappison: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him yesterday, 2 July, Official Report, columns 398–99.

Hospital Development, South Norfolk

Mr. Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his oral statement of 20 June, Official Report, columns 1011–13, on city centre development, if he will call in the proposed hospital development at Colney in the South Norfolk district. [34964]

Sir Paul Beresford: No. The adopted local plan makes specific provision for a new hospital at Colney. We consider that the local planning authority is best placed to decide the planning application and to impose any conditions it thinks necessary in the light of local concerns about accessibility.

Marine Environment

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what monitoring is undertaken by his Department of the effects of cumulative discharges to the marine environment from offshore oil and gas installations on marine wildlife and habitats; [35463]

(2) what action is undertaken by his Department to ensure that cumulative discharges to the marine environment from offshore oil and gas installations do not damage marine wildlife and habitats. [35464]

Mr. Clappison: Most offshore oil installations are in Scottish waters. The Scottish Office marine laboratory carries out monitoring to assess the impact on the marine environment of discharges of oily water, oil contaminated drill cuttings and process chemicals. More generally, marine laboratories of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food maintain an extensive monitoring programme to identify any harmful effects of human activities on the marine environment. Information from both programmes is utilised by the Department of the Environment to assess the need for, and formulation of, national and international guidelines. Overall regulation of the offshore industry is by the Department of Trade and Industry.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish guidance on the implementation of the global programme of action on the protection of the marine environment from land-based activities. [35465]

Mr. Clappison: The global programme of action for the protection of the marine environment from land-based activities reflects the approach already being adopted on this important issue throughout the United Kingdom, and by other estates in north-west Europe, in line with both North sea conference commitments and the requirements of the 1992 Paris convention—OSPAR. This provides a comprehensive framework for protection of the marine environment of the north-east Atlantic from both sea-based and land-based activities. The UK guidance note on the fourth North sea conference was published yesterday; I believe that the publication of further guidance is unnecessary at this stage.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in the last 12 months in respect of the commitments given in the fourth North sea declaration agreed in Esbjerg, Denmark; and if he will make a statement. [35467]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given yesterday by my hon. Friend the Minister for Construction, Planning and Energy Efficiency to my hon. Friend the Member for Westbury (Mr. Faber) Official Report, column 400.

Drinking Water

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the sixth annual report of the drinking water inspectorate will be published. [35610]

Mr. Gummer: The drinking water inspectorate published its sixth annual report today. Once again, it shows that drinking water in England and Wales is of a very high quality. In 1995, 99.5 per cent. of the 3.2 million tests carried out by water companies on drinking water met the relevant standard, compared with 99.3 per cent. in 1994.

The report provides a detailed picture of water quality in England and Wales which has been tested against the stringent criteria of the water quality regulations, which incorporate the limits in the EC drinking water directive.

The inspectorate also published today two leaflets for consumers. "How Good is Your Drinking Water?" summarises the main points of the report. "About Your Water Company" gives brief details of the quality of drinking water supplied by individual water companies.

Copies of the report and leaflets have been placed in the Library of the House.

Planning Guidance (New Settlements)

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his Department's planning guidance on the size of new settlements. [35834]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The objective of planning policy is sustainable development. The planning guidance on new settlements contained in both PPG3 and PPG13 points out that a reasonable degree of self-containment, thereby avoiding reliance on the use of private cars, can often be a feature of larger settlements. The community's daily needs, such as employment, schooling and shopping, should mostly be available locally and within easy reach. Therefore, the location of such settlements should seek to maximise existing or potential public transport links.

However, the context of new settlements is also important, and smaller settlements may form part of a wider network that offers benefits comparable to larger settlements. New settlements should therefore be designed to reflect local circumstances, including the patterns of towns and villages in an area. Smaller new settlements may be appropriate where they address both issues of context and sustainability.

When we come to revise PPG13, we shall be making this clear. Meanwhile, the planning system will be operated to ensure that, should new settlements be proposed, the judgment will be made on the context and the need for sustainable development. In the right circumstances, this may well mean that the establishment of a small new community of even a few hundred may be the best answer.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government intend to respond to the United Kingdom round table on sustainable development's first annual report. [35906]

Mr. Gummer: The Government have today formally published their response to the first annual report of the United Kingdom round table on sustainable development. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The Government are encouraged by the progress the round table has made in its first year in exploring its method of working and in reviewing some major sectors of development.

The Government hope that their response to the round table's report will contribute to the continuing informed debate about reconciling economic development and environmental protection and enhancement.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Lockerbie

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the proceedings before the International Court of Justice in respect of the opinions of the United Kingdom and Libya regarding the applicability of the Montreal convention, article 14, to the bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie. [35301]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The UK has entered preliminary objections which question the admissibility of the claims brought against it by Libya and the international court's jurisdiction to hear these claims. The court will decide on these preliminary objections in due course. Under the court's rules, the pleadings remain confidential, so it is not possible to reveal any further details.

Nuclear Policy

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the implications for the United Kingdom's defence policy of United States co-operation in nuclear matters with (a) Russia, (b) China and (c) France. [35431]

Mr. David Davis: Bilateral co-operation between the United States and other countries is a matter for the Government concerned. The United Kingdom will continue to maintain very close co-operation with the United States across the range of defence matters.

Indonesian Pilots

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visas have been granted to Indonesian pilots to visit the United Kingdom to receive training from the Royal Air Force in each year from 1990 to 1995 inclusive, and since 1 January 1996. [35421]

Mr. Hanley: Details of military assistance are confidential between Governments.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery Distribution Fund

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much money is currently held in the national lottery distribution fund; and if the interest on that amount is taxed. [35327]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As at 30 June 1996, the balance in the national lottery distribution fund was £1,882,300. Interest on the balance is added to the sums available for the good causes. It is not taxed.

Buckingham Palace

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what the arrangements will be for opening Buckingham palace once the restoration of Windsor castle is completed. [35822]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The then Secretary of State announced to the House on 29 April 1993, Official Report, columns 514–15, that the Queen had decided to open parts of Buckingham palace housing important items of the royal collection to the public and that income from admission charges would be given by the Royal Collection Trust towards the cost of restoring Windsor castle. The Government welcome the financial contribution which has been made towards the cost of the restoration of the fire damaged areas of Windsor castle. This has provided a considerable saving to the taxpayer. This arrangement will continue until the restoration is completed.

The Royal Collection Trust announced today that the Queen has decided to extend the opening of Buckingham palace beyond 1998 and that the additional revenue will accrue to the Royal Collection Trust once the Windsor castle restoration is completed. The royal collection is held by the Queen in trust on behalf of the nation. It is one of the largest art collections in the world, yet receives no public funding.

The Royal Collection Trust will use the income to improve the conservation, restoration, and presentation of this unique collection, while making a contribution towards the maintenance of the areas of Buckingham palace open to the public, thereby helping to offset the cost to the taxpayer.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Mental Health Review Tribunals

Mr. Cann: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action he has taken to ensure since March that the Lord Chancellor's list of potential medical members of mental health review tribunals includes psychologists. [34610]

Mr. Streeter: The Mental Health Act 1983 requires medical members to be registered medical practitioners. The Lord Chancellor will consider applications for lay membership from psychologists who have the appropriate experience in mental health issues.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Cann: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action he has taken since March to emphasise the need for clarity and explicitness by authorities submitting documents to public inquiries. [34612]

Mr. Streeter: A press notice was issued on 26 February 1996 inviting comments on Sir Richard Scott's recommendations concerning the conduct of inquiries set up by Ministers to investigate matters of public concern. Following the consultation period, the Council on Tribunals has been asked to provide advice on all of the issues raised.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action he has taken since March to ensure that non-statutory public inquiries set up by local or central government qualify for subpoena powers under Supreme Court Rules Order 38 Rule 19(1). [34613]

Mr. Streeter: The question of subpoena powers for such inquiries arose during our consultation on Sir Richard Scott's recommendations concerning inquiry procedures. The Council on Tribunals has been asked to provide advice on the issues raised, which the Lord Chancellor will consider once received.

TRANSPORT

Motor Caravans

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding the categorisation of motor caravans as private heavy goods vehicles by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency. [33908]

Mr. Norris: In addition to the two questions which the hon. Member tabled recently, Official Report, 25 June columns 81–82, three hon. Members have written on behalf of caravan clubs and individuals and a further four letters have been received from these sources.

Fissile Nuclear Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements are to be put in place to seek multilateral approval for the transport of fissile nuclear materials as specified in paragraph 18 of the Radioactive Material (Road Transport) (Great Britain) Regulations 1996 (S.I., 1996, No. 1350). [34400]

Mr. Norris: The arrangements for obtaining Secretary of State approval for the UK part of international movements of fissile material have been in place for many years and were previously stated in the "Code of practice for the carriage of Radioactive materials by road" published by HMSO. These arrangements are now included in the Radioactive Material (Road Transport) (Great Britain) Regulations 1996.

Maryport Harbour

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funds have been allocated for dredging and general silt removal works in Maryport harbour (a) by his Department or (b) with the support of his Department by other agencies in each of the last three years. [35303]

Mr. Norris: None.

Aircraft Cabin Baggage

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if recommendation 5(c) from his Department, reference AC/14/01 of 19 December 1988, remains in force; and if he will make a statement. [35302]

Mr. Norris: No. All passengers and their cabin baggage entering an airport restricted zone are searched. Where an article is not a danger to a flight, it may be stored in the aircraft hold, but where any prohibited items are found, the police may be called as appropriate.

Motorway Accidents

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the locations of all accidents that occurred on the motorways of England in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will plot this information on a map and place a copy thereof in the Library. [35306]

Mr. Watts: The ordnance survey grid reference location of accidents recorded by the police as occurring on motorways has been sent to the House of Commons Library. There were 6,716 motorway accidents in England in 1994. Information for 1995 will be available in August. A map plotting this information on the motorway network in England is not available.

Charter Aircraft

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to require foreign-registered non-United Kingdom aircraft carrying charter passengers to and from British airports to comply in full with the safety regime of the Civil Aviation Authority; and if he will make a statement. [35446]

Mr. Norris: No. As a signatory to the Chicago convention, the United Kingdom is obliged to accept certificates and licences issued in respect of foreign-registered aircraft provided that safety standards laid down by the International Civil Aviation Organisation are being met. Only aircraft on the United Kingdom register are required to comply in full with the safety regime of the Civil Aviation Authority. However, a foreign aircraft leased without crew to a United Kingdom airline must appear on that airline's air operators certificate and is then treated as a United Kingdom-registered aircraft.

EU Bus and Coach Directive

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many United Kingdom officials were involved in the preparation of (a) the fiche d'impact and (b) the compliance cost assessment for the EC bus and coach directive. [34989]

Mr. Norris: The Commission has not yet made a proposal for a European bus and coach directive and UK officials have not been involved in the preparation of a fiche d'impact. A compliance cost assessment for the UK cannot be prepared until the Commission makes its proposals.

Pollution (Milford Haven)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new measures have been introduced at Milford Haven to prevent grounding of laden oil tankers (a) within the Haven, and (b) in the Haven approaches. [35462]

Mr. Norris: The Milford Haven port authority has introduced the following interim precautionary measures in advance of the findings of the marine accidents investigation branch inquiry into the grounding of the Sea Empress.

(1) Vessels over 100,000 deadweight tonnes may not enter the Haven less than three hours before low water.

(2) All vessels with a gross tonnage of 65,000 tonnes or more, other than certain specified vessels, must carry two pilots for entry to, or exit from the Haven.

(3) A survey is being undertaken of the currents at the entrance to the Haven.

Train Operating Companies (Overcharging)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the rail regulator concerning the alleged overcharging of customers by train operating companies. [35664]

Mr. Watts: My Department has confirmed with the rail regulator that he will give careful consideration to any allegations of overcharging by train operators.

Driving Licences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 1 April, Official Report, column 358, if he will list those member states which have invoked grandfather rights when implementing the second EC directive on driving 91/439/EEC. [35037]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 2 July 1996]: From the information we have received to date, we understand that Belgium, Sweden, Luxembourg and Spain are likely to allow some drivers to renew their licences even though they cannot meet the standards in the directive.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Burundi

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to (a) international bodies and (b) the Burundi authorities regarding the conflict in Burundi. [35482]

Mr. Hanley: We are in close and regular contact with the United Nations, the Organisation of African Unity and other international bodies as well as the Government of Burundi. We have made clear our grave concern at the serious political and security situation in Burundi, our condemnation of politically motivated violence from whatever quarter, and our strong support for ex-president Nyerere of Tanzania in his efforts to broker a peaceful political settlement.

Female Genital Mutilation

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what occasions in the last 10 years he has provided financial and other assistance, in terms of health education, to countries which have implemented, or are seeking to implement, local campaigns to eliminate female genital mutilation. [34163]

Mr. Hanley: Detailed financial information is not held in the form requested. Many ODA-funded activities which address female genital mutilation do so in the context of wider initiatives which aim to empower women. The ODA has also supported direct research to change people's attitudes to FGM in areas where it is practised. We have funded conferences and meetings where country experiences in dealing with this issue can be shared and differing approaches to eradicate the practice can be compared. The ODA also seeks to promote innovative new approaches through it seedcorn fund for reproductive health.

TREASURY

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the gross amount of inheritance tax collected in the most recent year for which figures are available; what proportion of this sum is attributable to tax collected as a result of challenges by the Inland Revenue of the figures set out in the original grant of probate; and what estimate he has made for each of the most recent three years available of the amount of inheritance tax collected net of the expenses of collection. [35108]

Mr. Jack: The provisional outturn of receipts from inheritance tax in 1995–96 is £1,559 million. It is estimated that about 63 per cent. of inheritance tax is collected before the grant of representation—or probate—is obtained. The Inland Revenue cannot, however, distinguish between voluntary compliance and challenge and negotiation by the capital taxes office in the amount of tax collected after the grant of representation.

Estimates of the amount of inheritance tax collected net of the cost of collection are given below:

Year	Estimated receipts from inheritance tax net of cost of collection (£ million)
1993–94	1,313
1994–95	1,387
1995–96 (provisional)	1,535

Public Appointments

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new appointments he plans to the Board of Banking Supervision and the Securities and Investments Board. [35473]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Chancellor and the governor have agreed to appoint Sir Andrew Large, the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board—SIB—and Sir David Scholey, a non-executive member of the court of the Bank of England, to the Board of Banking Supervision. They have also agreed the appointment of Howard Davies, deputy governor of the bank, as a member of the SIB. We welcome these appointments, which will strengthen further the links between financial regulators.

Railtrack

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the sale of the Government's holding of debt in Railtrack. [35518]

Mr. Jack: The following bonds were offered for sale:

£134,837,000 9.125 per cent. bonds due 2006;

£100,163,000 9.625 per cent. bonds due 2016.

I am pleased to report that the sale was successfully completed on 1 July. Payment will be made to HM Treasury on 9 July. The proceeds from the sale, net of commissions, will total £246.1 million.

Value Added Tax

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much VAT has been repaid as a result of retrospective claims for each of the last five years; and if he will estimate how much VAT will be repaid next year. [35251]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 1 July 1996]: Figures for past refunds of VAT in respect of retrospective claims are not held separately. It is not possible to estimate future amounts to be refunded. Any figure will depend on the outcome of litigation currently before the VAT tribunal and the courts.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Physical Education and Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she will be in a position to publish the results of the survey her Department carried out on physical education and sport in schools. [34403]

Mrs. Gillan: I have today arranged for a copy of the report on the survey's findings to be placed in the Library.

Liverpool Community College

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received concerning the proposed closure of the Muirhead avenue east site of the Liverpool community college; if she will commission an inquiry into the proposal; and if she will make a statement. [35308]

Mr. Paice: The Department has received no representations about the closure of the site. I understand that it is one of 12 currently operated by Liverpool community college. While it is for the college to decide how to manage and develop its estate, the Government would encourage colleges to become more efficient in all areas of activity.

Kirklees Metropolitan Council

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was the amount of grant for Kirklees metropolitan council for its education new build programme in each year since 1979–80; [34797]

(2) what was the amount of grant for Kirklees metropolitan council for the improvement and repair of schools within the area for each year since 1979–80. [34796]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 27 June 1996]: The following table gives details of the credit approvals for Kirklees metropolitan council to fund its capital programme for schools.

Annual capital guidelines and supplementary credit approvals have been as follows

	ACG £000 Total	I/R	Additional SCA £000
1991–92	1,3,797	1,1,147	0
1992–93	1,4,071	1,1,355	750
1993–94	5,758	631	97
1994–95	2,572	53	0
1995–96	1,455	110	0
1996–97	1,465	74	90

[1] These figures include allocations for sixth form colleges and FE colleges.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

European Structural Fund

Mr. Congdon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the allocation of the European structural fund's community initiative reserves. [35587]

Mr. Eggar: The Government obtained for the United Kingdom and Gibraltar 187.21 million ecu from the Community initiatives reserve. I have allocated this between programmes and between areas as set out in the table.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the allocation of European structural funds money to British objective 2 areas. [35588]

Mr. Eggar: The Government obtained for the UK and Gibraltar 2,500 million ecu of objective 2 money for 1997 to 99. I have allocated this as set out in table.

Advanced Gas-cooled Reactors

Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what are the long-term implications of the damaged fuel pins found in advanced gas-cooled reactor stations; and if he will make a statement; [35295]

(2) what recommendations the nuclear installations inspectorate made on the operation of the AGRs with known fuel pin problems; and what implications it identified for the emergency shut-down system; [35296]

(3) when he expects the NII inquiry into the fuel pin problem to be completed; [35297]

(4) what factors led to the omission of reference to fuel pin problems in British Energy's prospectus. [35298]

Mr. Eggar: There is no omission in the British Energy prospectus. Reference to fuel pin problems is made on page 66 under the heading "fuel brace fretting".

As the prospectus notes, British Energy is continuing to examine the significance of this issue at its AGR stations and its potential on future fuel utilisation.

The NII has carried out preliminary inquiries into wear on fuel pins resulting from fuel brace fretting and is satisfied that the AGR stations remain safe to operate and that there are no implications for the emergency shut-down system.

The NII has asked Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear to provide further information on this phenomenon and will continue to monitor developments.

Sizewell B

Mr. Purchase: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the design, build and commission cost of Sizewell B pressurised water reactor station; what is the net revenue received by the Exchequer since Sizewell B was commissioned to date; and what is the estimated profit and loss against the sale price of Sizewell B. [35299]

Mr. Eggar: Sizewell B commenced generation in the year ended 31 March 1995. At that date, the historic cost of Sizewell B, as recorded in the financial statements of British Energy, was £2,510 million. The net income of any individual power station is a commercial matter for the company. Sizewell B forms part of the assets of British Energy and is not being sold separately, consequently there is no "sale price of Sizewell B".

Offshore Installations

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many inspections of offshore oil and gas installations have been undertaken by his Department in each of the past 10 years. [35460]

Mr. Page: Numerous inspections of offshore installations have been undertaken by the Department of Trade and Industry in each of the past 10 years, although precise figures are not available.

Until 1991, safety inspections of offshore installations were carried out by Department of Energy inspectors exercising powers in regulations made under the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971. In 1991, this function was transferred to the Health and Safety Executive. The Department of Trade and Industry does not carry out inspections relating to safety.

From 1986 to 1993, inspections of offshore oil and gas installations were undertaken by officers for the Department for the purpose of issuing UK oil pollution prevention—UKOPP—certificates under the Merchant Shipping (Prevention of Oil Pollution) Regulations 1983, SI 1983/1398. However, this has now reverted to the Department of Transport as from 1 June 1995.

The Secretary of State has powers under each licence granted in accordance with section 2 of the Petroleum (Production) Act 1934 to examine any installation erected in accordance with a licence and its equipment and any works executed. These powers are most commonly exercised by petroleum measurement inspectors to ensure that the methods of measurement used to account for petroleum won and saved from the licensed areas comply with the requirements of the licence.

Decommissioning

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish figures for the current balance in the decommissioning account for each of the nuclear companies due to be privatised; and where, in each case, this fund is held. [35578]

Mr. Eggar: This information is included in the audited financial statements of Nuclear Electric Ltd. and Scottish Nuclear Ltd. for the period ended 31 March 1996.

Marine Environment

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what monitoring is undertaken by his Department to ensure that oil companies comply with the conditions placed on discharges from offshore oil and gas installations to the marine environment; [35461]

(2) what provisions his Department has in place to ensure that (a) discharges to the marine environment from offshore oil and gas installations do not exceed permitted levels and (b) cumulative levels of discharges from offshore oil and gas installations do not damage marine wildlife and habitats. [35468]

Mr. Page: Both my Department and the Department of Transport's marine pollution control unit monitor discharges from offshore oil and gas installations by means of a programme of aerial surveillance. This is used to monitor whether oil spills are reported in accordance with the requirements of petroleum production licences. Aerial surveillance can also detect high levels of produced water.

When a company has been granted an exemption in accordance with section 23 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971, which permits the discharge of produced water, conditions attached to that exemption will require the company to take samples of produced water twice a day for analysis. The results of the analysis are submitted to my Department for inspection on a monthly basis.

Similarly, conditions attached to an exemption which permits the company to drill with oil-based mud will require the company to take samples at least once a day for analysis of the oil on cuttings. The results of these analyses are submitted to my Department for inspection after the well is completed.

The effects of operational discharges of chemicals in water and drilling muds from offshore oil and gas installations, including possible cumulative effects, are taken into account when agreeing limits for the discharge and use of chemicals for each installation. The Departments responsible for fisheries monitor the well being of the marine environment.

RJB Mining plc

Mr. Merchant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement regarding sums owed to his Department by RJB Mining plc in respect of its acquisition of mining assets of the British Coal Corporation. [35746]

Mr. Page: It was agreed at the time of the sale to RJB Mining that my Department would receive £116.7 million of the sale price of £815.3 million in the form of deferred payments up to December 1997. My Department received this initial deferred consideration instalment of £12.2 million, plus interest, last January.

The company has now repaid early the entire remaining deferred consideration, which amounts to some £117 million including interest. I welcome this demonstration of the industry's success in the private sector.

DEFENCE

Ground Proximity Warning System

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what delay has been caused to the ground proximity warning system trials by the accident on 1 June 1995; and what is the estimated service entry date for the equipment on each aircraft type. [34644]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The accident on 1 June 1995 involving a Harrier GR7 undertaking RAF assessments of ground proximity warning systems, GPWS, equipment caused no delay to the programme to fit GPWS to the GR7 or the associated trials being conducted for the procurement executive. It is expected that the first modified GR7 will be delivered to the RAF in early 1998. The Jaguar is being fitted with similar equipment, and the first modified aircraft is scheduled to enter service in October of this year. Eurofighter 2000 will have a GPWS capability from the outset of its entry into service in 2001. In addition to these mainly single-seater aircraft, the need for GPWS equipment, and its precise date of entry into service, for the two-seater Tornado GR4 is under consideration.

Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many scientific papers in the Porton technical papers (radiological) series have been produced by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down since 1966; when the radiological series was closed; and how many papers in the radiological series are currently unclassified. [34465]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 July 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the Porton Technical Paper (Radiological) Series. The Chemical Biological Defence Sector (CBD) at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

The Porton Technical Paper (Radiological) Series closed in 1964 and therefore no papers have been produced since then. There were 50 reports in this series of which 45 are currently unclassified.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been carried out since 1996 by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down to evaluate the long-term health effects of short-term exposure to the nerve agent GE; when these studies were carried out; and what were the conclusions of these studies. [34472]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 July 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning long term health effects of exposure to the nerve agent GE. The Chemical Biological Defence Sector (CBD) at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

Porton Down has not carried out any studies to evaluate long term health effects of exposure to the nerve agent GE since 1966.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of state for Defence what research has been carried out since 1996 by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down to investigate whether skin cancer can be caused by short-term exposure to mustard gas; when this research was carried out; and what were the results of this research. [34470]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document, I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 July 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning research on skin cancer. The Chemical Biological Defence Sector (CBD) at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

Porton Down has not carried out any studies to investigate whether short term exposure to mustard agent causes skin cancers.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current security classifications of each of the annual reports produced by the ethics committee overseeing the service volunteers programme at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down since 1966. [34466]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Prior to the establishment of the independent ethics committee in 1991, the work of the service volunteer programme was monitored by the medical sub-committee of the Defence scientific advisory committee—DSAC—which did not separately report on this aspect of its work. The reports of the DSAC were classified, as a minimum "Restricted". Since 1991 the independent ethics committee has produced annual reports which to date have all been classified as "Restricted".

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the policy of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment since 1966 on asking service personnel who are attending courses at the Defence nuclear biological and chemical centre at Winterbourne Gunner to take part in short trials at the establishment during their course. [34474]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 July 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the attendance of service personnel at DNBCC in studies at Porton Down. The Chemical Biological Defence Sector (CBD) at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

Volunteers are recruited to take part in studies at Porton Down by the means outlined in my letter to you published in Hansard on 11 January 1996 at Col 317. Before 1988 those who attended the Defence NBC School at Winterbourne Gunner may have been given the opportunity, if they wished, to participate in studies at CBDE whilst they were students at the centre. This informal recruiting procedure no longer occurs and all those who participate in the volunteer programme at Porton Down will have applied to attend through their unit's administrative staff.

I hope this information is useful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what details of the participation of service personnel in experiments and trials at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down are recorded on that individual's services medical records; and when this practice was introduced. [34471]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 July 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the details of participation in studies at Porton Down entered on Service Medical Records. The Chemical Biological Defence Sector (CBD) at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

Since 1990 no Service Volunteers have been permitted to begin a study until their service medical records have been received at Porton Down. An entry is always made on the individual's record to indicate that they have attended the establishment and participated in a study, although this does not give any details of the particular studies actually involved. For many years before 1990 it was also the practice to make an entry on an individual's service medical record although the system for forwarding records to Porton Down was not so reliable and we know that some entries were not made. Porton Down does, however, have other records against which it can cross check whether individuals were Service Volunteers.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down introduced its practice of considering the possible long-term health effects of a chemical before it is exposed to service personnel who are taking part in the service volunteers programme. [34469]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 July 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning the introduction of the practice of considering long term health effects of chemicals used in the human volunteer programme at the former Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment. The Chemical Biological Defence Sector (CBD) at Porton Down is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) for which I am responsible as Chief Executive.

Before conducting any tests, management and staff at Porton Down have always taken the most careful account of what is known about chemical substances to which Service Volunteers might be exposed during trials. This includes considering possibie long term effects on health. The independent Ethics Committee also considers this issue before approving proposed studies involving Service Volunteers.

I hope this information is helpful.

Defence Research Information Centre

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Brent, East on 9 May, Official Report, column 224-25, what are the security classifications of each of the four bulletins summarised in the table; how many approved customers are currently served by DRIC; and if he will make a statement on the range and nature of these customers. [34475]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 3 July 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your question following up my letter to you of 9 May about the Defence Research Information Centre (DRIC).

The security markings of the DRIC Abstracts. DRIC Standard Profiles and Overseas Citation lists mentioned in my letter can be classified as Secret, Confidential, Restricted or Unclassified depending on the content. The DRIC Newsletter is an Unclassified publication.

It is not easy to decide in some circumstances how many "end-user" customers are served by DRIC. For example if a library or information centre is the channel of communication with DRIC there will be a large number of end users. One measure which gives an idea about the level of demand is the number of transactions performed by DRIC over a year. Using this approach, we experience in the order of 8,000–10,000 customer transactions each year.

You also asked about approved customers. We define these as individuals or organisations who justify their need for, and are qualified to receive, the information requested—the cost of which is recovered by the appropriate charging mechanism. Approved customers cover a wide range of organisations including DERA; MOD; The Procurement Executive; The Armed Forces; MOD Next Steps Agencies; Other Government Departments; Overseas Governments; NATO; UK Contractors; Universities or Colleges; Overseas Contractors; Overseas Universities or Colleges.

I hope this is helpful.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to store rendered meat and bonemeal from the BSE cattle cull at RAF Burntwood; and if he will make a statement. [35105]

Mr. Soames: There are currently no plans to store rendered meat and bonemeal at RAF Burtonwood.

Firing Range, Glamoc

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what considerations led him to lease Croatian-controlled land around Glamoc as a live firing range. [35362]

Mr. Soames: The range is used by NATO-led implementation force troop contributors to maintain their tactical skills and operational effectiveness and to demonstrate the force's capabilities.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment was made by his Department of the humanitarian consequences of using Croatian-controlled territory around Glamoc as a live testing range. [35363]

Mr. Soames: The firing range at Glamoc is used by the NATO-led implementation force, IFOR, for training purposes, not for the testing of weapons, under an agreement with the local authorities. The same stringent procedures to ensure safety and to minimise the environmental and humanitarian impact of ranges are used by the British Army wherever it trains. The Glamoc range is in a remote area away from any centres of population and sited partly on heavily mined areas which are unsuitable for public access.

Weapons Testing

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make it his policy, in territory which has recently been the scene of armed conflict, to prohibit British forces from using such territory for testing weapons or missiles without an independent assessment of the likely humanitarian consequences; and if he will make a statement; [35357]

(2) if he will make his policy that Britain's armed forces, when considering sites for weapons or missile testing in areas of recent armed conflict, have particular regard for the views of the people who live there. [35361]

Mr. Soames: It is already standard practice in the selection, construction and use of live firing ranges, wherever they are, to have due regard for the views of people living nearby, and for the environmental, humanitarian and other consequences.

Land Mines

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many anti-personnel land mines were (a) exported and (b) transferred from the United Kingdom between 1979 and 1985 inclusive. [35358]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is not available.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) anti-personnel and (b) anti-tank mines owned by the United Kingdom Government are being held outside United Kingdom territory. [35359]

Mr. Arbuthnot: It is our established policy for security reasons not reveal information relating to stock levels of munitions held or planned.

Pilots (Training)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries from which pilots have visited the United Kingdom to receive advanced flying and tactical weapons training in each year from 1990 to 1995 inclusive, and since 1 January 1996. [35420]

Mr. Soames: Details of military assistance are confidential between Governments.

Bett Review

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Selby, (Mr. Alison) of 20 February, Official Report, column 96, if he will make a further statement on his Department's progress with consideration of the recommendations in Sir Michael Bett's report. [35110]

Mr. Soames: I have nothing to add to my answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 64.

Airborne Warning and Communication Systems

Sir Jerry Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated value of British manufactured offset in relation to the AWACS order to date; how much it is expected the total offset will be; and how much offset was originally promised by the American suppliers. [35211]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The AWACS offset obligation was discharged in 1992. By that time, Boeing had submitted to my Department reports listing contracts placed with United Kingdom firms totalling some $2.1 billion, of which we agreed $1.57 billion to count for offset credit. This latter figure exceeded the 130 per cent. target set in the offset agreement.

Married Quarters

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the independent advisers who have provided advice to his Department's proposed married quarters housing sell-off in the past six months. [35372]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I have nothing to add to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces gave the hon. Gentleman on 1 November 1995, Official Report, column 328.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 4 June, Official Report, column 343, what has been the total cost to date, inclusive of VAT, of the employment of consultants for his Department's married housing quarters sell-off. [35451]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The total cost to date of the employment of consultants since we began to develop the proposal to transfer the married quarters estate to the private sector announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 30 November 1995, Official Report, columns 810–11, amounts to some £4.4 million, inclusive of VAT. VAT for these costs is refunded to my Department; the VAT-exclusive cost to date is £3.8 million.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of married quarters in each English and Welsh county which are part of his Department's proposed housing sale. [35236]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information is not available in the form requested, and could not be obtained without disproportionate cost. However, figures are available divided by Defence estate organisation land agent—DLA—regions, as follows.

It should be noted that these figures relate to the estate for sale at the time when the information memorandum was published—23 February 1996. The size of the estate for sale remains subject to adjustment during the continuing management of the estate.

Naval Recruiting and Training Agency

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made by the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency in developing a partnering arrangement; and if he will make a statement. [35833]

Mr. Soames: As part of the Government's competing for quality and private finance initiative, in December 1995 the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency—NRTA—selected Flagship Training, a consortium consisting of Vosper Thornycroft, GEC/Marconi and Procord, as its preferred partner in naval training.

Following a process of detailed negotiation between the NRTA and Flagship Training, I am pleased to announce that it has been decided to proceed with the implementation of the partnering arrangement. With the formal framework now in place, the NRTA and Flagship Training can begin to develop specific proposals in respect of NRTA shore training establishments. This process is expected to take around six months to complete and the proposals that emerge will be the subject of further consultation with Departmental trades unions.

Official Service Residences

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names and locations of his Department's official service residences which are part of his proposed housing sale. [35237]

Mr. Arbuthnot: For security reasons, it would not be appropriate to provide this information in the form requested. When the information memorandum was issued—23 February 1996—the estate for sale included eight properties in Wiltshire, five in Middlesex, five in Buckinghamshire, two in Cambridgeshire, and one each in London, Somerset, Hampshire, Shropshire, Oxfordshire, Yorkshire, Bedfordshire, Gloucestershire and Lincolnshire, which, prior to the Cazalet review, qualified as official service residences by virtue of the posts held by their occupants. Following the Cazalet review, 14 of the properties now qualify as official service residences: four in Wiltshire, two in Middlesex, two in Buckinghamshire, and one each in Cambridgeshire, Somerset, Hampshire, Shropshire, Yorkshire, and Lincolnshire. The final size and composition of the estate for sale remains subject to possible changes during the continuing management of the estate.

Radiation Test Experiments

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each of the facilities currently or formerly operated by his Department since 1966 where radiation test experiments have been conducted on either service men or civilian volunteers; and if he will make a statement on follow-up monitoring conducted since these experiments. [34381]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 26 June 1996]: During the 1980s, atomic weapons establishment Aldermaston participated in a number of studies involving the use of radioactive material. Some were also conducted at Porton Down in the 1950s and 1960s, and are described in an answer I gave the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 25 June 1996, Official Report, column 65. Follow-up radiological monitoring would have been irrelevant because only very short-lived radioisotopes were used in the experiments.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit Subsidy

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish for 1994–95 the payments of housing benefit subsidy by his Department to each London borough and metropolitan district; and if he will list the financial penalties imposed as a result of non-compliance with regulations. [31562]

Disability Benefits

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) people who have claimed incapacity benefit since April 1995, (b) former invalidity benefit claimants, (c) severe disablement allowance claimants, (d) people who have claimed income support with a disability premium since April 1995, (e) people who claimed income support with a disability premium before April 1995 and (f) people with credits only have been found capable of work following an assessment under the all-work test in the year ended April 1996. [34322]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Found capable of work following the all-work test of incapacity	Number
Incapacity benefit claimants since April 1995[1,3]	24,620
Incapacity benefit claimants former in receipt of invalidity benefit[2,3]	25,200
Severe disablement allowance claimants[1,3]	660
Credits only[1,3]	28,540

[2] Source: 1 per cent. sample from the incapacity benefit computer system. Excludes a small number of cases paid clerically.

[3] It is not possible to identify separately those cases which are in receipt of income support.

[4] All figures are for Great Britain.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals against a disallowance of (a) incapacity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance, (c) income support with a disability premium and (d) credits (i) have been lodged, (ii) have been heard and (iii) are outstanding; and what was the success rate for claimants. [34269]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

	Incapacity benefit—all appeals including all-work test	Other all-work test appeals[2]
Appeals received 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996	36,573	8,453

[2] It is not possible to provide a further breakdown of this category.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people on incapacity benefits and credits have been (a) found capable of work following an assessment under the all-work test, (b) been disallowed benefit for failing to return the IB50 questionnaire without good cause and (c) been disallowed following failure to attend an examination without good cause, during the year ending April 1996. [34657]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

	Number
Found capable of work following all-work test	89,882
Disallowed benefit for failing to return the IB50 questionnaire without good cause	7,710
Disallowed benefit for failing to attend an examination without good cause	2,416

Benefit Values

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) each benefit, (b) its current value and (c) its value in 1979 or at the date of its introduction (i) in cash terms and (ii) at April 1996 prices. [34321]

Mr. Burt: The information has been placed in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what geographical area is covered by the (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough field office of the Child Support Agency; [35009]

(2) if he will list by month how many cases have been dealt with by the (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough field office of the Child Support Agency since 1 January 1995. [35010]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 2 July 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency field offices.

Mexborough does not have a separate Child Support Agency field office; this area is covered by the Rotherham field office.

The geographical area covered by the Rotherham field office takes in the following post codes: S60 to S66 inclusive, and parts of S31, S71 and S72.

The geographical area covered by the Doncaster field office takes in the following post codes: DN1 to DN8 inclusive, and parts of DN9, DN10, DN11 and DN14.

When the Agency was established, field offices dealt only with cases requiring local contact. The majority of work was dealt with by the Child Support Agency Centres. Since June 1995, field offices have been responsible for gathering all the information necessary for the Child Support Agency Centres to complete maintenance assessments. Figures regarding the number of cases dealt with by the Rotherham and Doncaster field offices are available from that date and are shown on the attached tables.

I hope this is helpful.

Funeral Expenses

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what evidence he has evaluated in respect of the scale of abuse in relation to the social fund funeral payments system. [34406]

Mr. Roger Evans: Expenditure escalated from £18.4 million in 1988–89 to £63 million in 1994–95; in some years, the increase was up to 6 per cent. above the rate of inflation. Changes were made to the funeral payments scheme in April 1994 and June 1995 to ensure that only those people with good cause for taking responsibility for the costs of a funeral are given help.

During 1993–94, the number of awards was 72,000, but during 1994–95 and 1995–96 this reduced to 68,000 and 62,000 respectively. During the same period, the number of claims increased from 95,000 to 98,000. Expenditure was reduced to £49 million in 1995–96.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many statutory instruments his Department introduced in (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) between 1 January 1996 and 1 May 1996 which had the effect of repealing one or more previous statutory instruments without replacing them with a new regulation. [35038]

Mr. Burt: This information is not available in the format requested. However, a list of regulations that have been repealed or amended was place in the House Library by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 8 May.

Benefit Targeting

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further plans he has for better targeting of expenditure on the income-related benefits. [35823]

Mr. Lilley: I have today passed two proposals to the Social Security Advisory Committee which are intended to ensure that resources are targeted in a more effective way.

The first proposal is to increase the levels of deduction from benefit that people receive for housing costs where there are non-dependant adults living in the home who are in remunerative work and whose earnings are considerable. It is reasonable to expect non-dependants who are financially able to do so to contribute more towards housing costs than they are doing at present. We propose to introduce two higher levels of deduction: £36 a week for non-dependant adults with gross incomes of between £200 and £249.99 a week, and £39 a week for those with incomes of £250 or more a week.

Similar changes will be made to the help people receive to pay their local taxes by increasing the deductions from council tax benefit to £3.50 and £4 a week for those non-dependants on the above levels of incomes.

The changes will take effect from April 1997 in housing benefit and council tax benefit and from April 1998 in income support and income-based jobseeker's allowance. They will reduce benefit expenditure on housing costs and local taxes, and reduce the burden on the taxpayer.

The second proposal is to change the arrangements for paying child personal allowances in the income-related benefits. At present, the amount of money we give to less well-off families with children at school is not directly linked to the educational year, but depends on the date of a child's birthday. An increase in allowance becomes due at the time of a dependent child's 11th or 16th birthday. This means that some families receive the increase much earlier in the year than others and the increase is not properly linked to educational changes, such as a move to secondary school. We propose to move the date of the increase to the first Monday in September following the relevant birthday. This will broadly align child allowances with the start of the school year when extra costs are more likely to be incurred. Families of pupils who decide to stay on in education at 16 will get their increased help—currently an extra £4.75 a week in income support—from the September of the new academic year.

Relatively few young people will be in non-advanced education in the academic year which begins after their 18th birthday. In the interests of simplicity and consistency, there will no longer be a change in the rate for young dependent people on reaching 18.

In family credit and disability working allowance, the changes will come into effect from the start of the award following the new September trigger date, just as at present increases take place from the award following the child's birthday.

The changes will take effect from April 1997 in income support, income-based jobseeker's allowance, housing benefit and council tax benefit and from October 1997 for family credit and disability working allowance. No one will suffer a cash reduction. The changes will apply only to those whose 11th, 16th or 18th birthday is on or after the date the new provisions would come into force.

There is also a beneficial change for those with child care costs which will help working families claiming family credit, disability working allowance, housing benefit and council tax benefit. The child care disregard, worth £60, will continue to be available until the award in which the increased personal allowance takes effect.

These two proposal are expected to save £80 million rising to about £150 million over the next three years, and will ensure that resources are used more effectively.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Nitrates

Mr. Burden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the impact of his Department's area of responsibility of European Commission directives on nitrates in water supplies. [25031]

Mr. Boswell: The standard for nitrate in water supplies is laid down in the EC drinking water directive (80/778). The EC nitrate directive (91/676) provides for waters to be identified as "polluted waters" in various circumstances, including when nitrate from agriculture has impaired their suitability for use in water supplies. Under the nitrate directive, farmers within designated nitrate vulnerable zones will be subject to restrictions drawn up in order to minimise the leaching of nitrate from agriculture into water sources.

Beef (Cold Storage)

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his assessment of the amount of beef in cold storage which has been in cold storage for more than (a) three years and (b) five years; [24945]

(2) what assessment he has made of the amount of beef in cold storage which has been in cold storage for more than (a) three years and (b) five years. [32242]

Mr. Baldry: Some 4,842 tonnes of beef have been held in intervention cold storage for more than three years and 95 tonnes for over five years.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the amount of beef which is currently being kept in cold storage in the United Kingdom. [32243]

Mr. Baldry: Some 9,000 tonnes of beef have been held in intervention cold storage as at 21 June 1996.

Organic Agriculture

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much direct and indirect financial aid from his Department has been received by farmers of organic agriculture for each year since 1985 (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of that received by conventional agriculture; and if he will make a statement. [32274]

Mr. Boswell: The generality of farm support, such as arable area payments, livestock premiums and environmental payments, is available to organic and conventional farmers on equal terms. It is not possible to determine how much of this support has been given specifically to organic producers.

The Ministry has introduced an organic aid scheme to give additional payments to farmers who convert to organic methods. To augment this, we have just launched a new organic conversion information service, providing free technical and other advice to would-be organic producers. We are also funding the UK register of organic food standards and a substantial programme of dedicated organic research. Total planned expenditure for these various activities in this financial year is £1.612 million.

Slaughtered Cattle

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to authorise the storage of cattle carcases arising from his policy to cull bovine spongiform encephalopathy-infected cattle at (a) existing or (b) closed military bases. [32909]

Mr. Baldry: All cattle suspected of having BSE are incinerated and there is no need for storage facilities in such cases. With regard to cattle slaughtered under the over 30 month scheme, the Intervention Board executive agency and the MOD have agreed a lease whereby a number of MOD sites may be brought into use as and when needed for the storage of meat and bonemeal prior to final disposal. So far, only the site at Quedgley in Gloucester has been used for this purpose. Deliveries were made there between 20 May and 6 June, and have now ceased.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by collection centres the number of animals slaughtered under the Government's cattle disposal scheme for each week since the week beginning Monday 29 April. [31628]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 10 June 1996]: The number of cattle slaughtered under the over 30-month scheme by collection centre is not available. However, the number of animals slaughtered by approved abattoirs for each week since the scheme started, up to the latest week available, is:

Bentley Colliery

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what mineral residues were discovered by his Agricultural Development Advisory Service in respect of discharges from Bentley colliery at Dam Hill drain; what action he is taking to stop them getting into the food chain in adjoining land; what discussions he has held with British Coal Property; and if he will make a statement. [34970]

Mr. Boswell: I am aware of ADAS involvement in the analysis of dredgings on behalf of the Selby internal drainage board prior to application of the dredgings to land. The spreading of dredgings from inland waters to agricultural land is exempt from licensing under the DOE's Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. However, landspreading of such waste is subject to quantitative limits and must result in benefit to agriculture or ecological improvement. Landspreading must also be carried out without endangering human health and without using processes or methods which would harm the environment. It is the responsibility of the Environment Agency to ensure compliance with the regulations.

Forest of Bowland

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those sites he proposes to designate as environmentally sensitive areas within the forest of Bowland. [34859]

Mr. Boswell: The Government have taken no decision to increase the number of environmentally sensitive areas in England.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 199, if he will undertake an immediate review of past EC directives to remove all gold plating. [35109]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 2 July 1996]: To review all past legislation implementing every EC directive would be a very substantial undertaking indeed. I do not believe that this would be beneficial or even a necessary exercise; and it would certainly involve disproportionate cost. Ministers in this Department have been fully aware for some time of the need to avoid gold plating of EC measures. Where this has taken place, it has been for clear policy reasons—for example, to provide enhanced protection to UK consumers going beyond minimum European standards. The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster announced to the House on 16 May the publication of a new "implementing EC law checklist". This checklist is designed to ensure that no unnecessary additional burdens are placed on business when EC directives are implemented in the UK.

Potato Prices

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the wholesale and retail price of potatoes for each quarter period in the past two years. [34336]

Mr. Boswell: Data on wholesale prices are not available for potatoes. However, average prices received by potato growers in Great Britain, compiled from data collected by the Potato Marketing Board, are shown in the table.

The average prices paid by households in Great Britain for fresh potatoes, compiled from the national food survey, are also shown.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Bodies

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many non-departmental public bodies he estimates will be in place by the end of 1996; and if he will list them and their functions. [33542]

Sir John Wheeler: The estimated number of non-departmental public bodies sponsored by the Northern Ireland Government Departments likely to be in place by the end of 1996 is 97.

A list of each of the bodies and their function has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Lindsay Robb

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will call for a report from the Royal Ulster Constabulary on how much Mr. Lindsay Robb was paid for his evidence in the case of Mr. Colin Duffy; and if he will make a statement. [34732]

Sir John Wheeler: Mr. Robb received no payment for giving evidence at the trial of Mr. Colin Duffy.

Departmental Subscriptions

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all (a) periodicals, (b) magazines and (c) academic journals subscribed to by his Department in the last three months. [33756]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 20 June 1996]: The information is not available in the format requested. The available information has been placed in the Library.

Orange Order Marches

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the undertakings given by the RUC to the mediation network and residents of Garvaghy road for 1995 to the effect that there would not be a similar march on the same route in 1996. [35294]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 2 July 1996]: I understand no such undertakings were given by the RUC to mediation network or the residents of Garvaghy road.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with the RUC about the re-routing of Orange order marches in Portadown away from predominantly nationalist areas. [35293]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 2 July 1996]: Whilst my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State is regularly briefed on the security situation, the routing of parades is an operational matter for the RUC and he is not routinely briefed in detail in relation to the routes to be taken for individual marches.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors preclude the July Orange march to Drumcree following the 1985 route by Obins street. [35300]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 2 July 1996]: The RUC assess each parade under the terms of the Public Order (Northern Ireland) Order 1987 and impose conditions or re-route if they consider it appropriate.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will meet representatives of the Garvaghy road residents coalition to discuss the rerouting of the Orange order march away from Garvaghy road on 7 July. [35292]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 2 July 1996]: The routing of parades is an operational matter for the RUC and a meeting with the Secretary of State is unlikely to be of benefit at this time. I understand that the RUC both at headquarters and at local level have met representatives of the local residents and that a further meeting is planned.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Cann: To ask the Attorney-General what instruction has been given to the Crown Prosecution Service to (a) prepare a full account of a serious or dangerous criminal event before proceedings have been finalised in cases involving mentally disordered persons and (b) transmit the account after completion of the criminal process (i) to clinicians responsible subsequently for the care of the patient and (ii) to C3 division of the Home Office. [34626]

The Attorney-General: The recommendations of the Jason Mitchell inquiry are under consideration. In particular, discussions are taking place between the mental health unit—formerly C3 division—of the Home Office and the Crown Prosecution Service about the way in which it may provide information in respect of restricted hospital patients, which will assist the mental health unit in carrying out its role.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Fees Office Computer

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Chairman of the Information Committee how many times and for what duration the Fees Office computer has been unavailable over the last three months; which company (a) supplied, (b) manufactured and (c) installed the machine; who is responsible for its maintenance; and on whose advice and when it was procured. [35371]

Mr. Waller: Responsibility for the procurement of computer systems and other goods and services for their departments lies with the head of each department of the House. I shall ask the Director of Finance and Administration as head of the relevant department to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Air Travel Costs

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what further rebate agreements have been reached in respect of air travel costs since those announced on 1 November 1995, Official Report, column 253. [35494]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I am pleased to advise the hon. Member that, at its meeting on 14 May, the Administration Committee endorsed a proposed corporate option agreement between the House and British Midland whereby, subject to a certain minimum target per annum being achieved, and in return for the House dealing with British Midland as a preferred airline, BM will assist the House in reducing its air travel costs.

The incentive discount is on a sliding scale, so that the greater the flown revenue, the greater the percentage, as well as actual, rebate. All BM flights in the executive fare, three-day executive return and Eurobudget categories undertaken on parliamentary business by hon. Members, their staff or staff of the House, and booked through the Travel Office since 1 April, qualify.

As with the earlier agreement with British Airways, which continues, individual hon. Members or Committees who prefer to deal with other carriers or agents are still perfectly free to do so. However, I hope that hon. Members will bear in mind that for the House to benefit from this new agreement, BM flights do have to be booked through the Travel Office, as is the case with BA flights.

Cash Dispensing Machines

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what steps he is taking to ensure the security of cash dispensing machines located within the precincts of the Palace. [35681]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I consider the current security arrangements for the cash dispensing machines entirely satisfactory. Cash dispensing machines have been available within the precincts of the Palace since 1990. In that time, there has been one incident where a machine has been damaged. The individual responsible was easily identified and action is being taken by the police and the House authorities.

SCOTLAND

Life Sentences

1. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his proposals for automatic life sentences for second-time violent and sexual offenders in Scotland. [34169]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Offenders who are convicted of a serious violent or sexual offence for a second time should be sentenced to life imprisonment. We are consulting on our proposals and will bring forward legislation at the earliest opportunity.

Inward Investment

14. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the level of investment from abroad that has been attracted to Scotland over the last six months. [34184]

Mr. George Kynoch: In the six months to March 1996, overseas-owned companies chose Scotland as the location for 24 inward investment projects involving planned investment of more than £550 million and the expected creation or safeguarding of more than 6,000 jobs.

Beef and Dairy Farmers

15. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is taking to keep the Scottish beef and dairy farming community fully informed of measures being taken by the Government. [34185]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We have put in place a regular newsletter sent to all beef and dairy farmers in Scotland. The latest edition was issued this week and I am placing copies in the Library. We have also established and publicised telephone helplines.

Curfew Orders

16. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his proposals to give the courts new powers to impose curfew orders, monitored by electronic tags. [34186]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We believe that electronically monitored orders could usefully add to the range of sentencing options available to the Scottish courts. We look forward to introducing legislative proposals which will offer the Scottish courts this new disposal.

Enterprise Zones

17. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has held with the representatives of local authorities and enterprise companies concerning the enterprise zones in their localities. [34187]

Mr. Kynoch: I discussed Inverclyde enterprise zone with Renfrewshire Enterprise on 30 November last year and Lanarkshire enterprise zone with Lanarkshire Development Agency on 17 April this year.

British Aerospace, Prestwick

18. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he has taken following his visit to British Aerospace at Prestwick on Monday 10 June in respect of employment prospects at Prestwick. [34188]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I can assure the hon. Gentleman that we shall explore all appropriate means to assist British Aerospace to secure the site's long-term viability. Since 10 June, our officials have had extensive contacts with senior management of British Aerospace to seek to identify what scope may exist to help the company attract additional work to Prestwick. I am taking a close interest in the progress of these discussions.

Council Housing

19. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the proposed level of central Government expenditure for the Scottish borders for public sector housing in each year to the year 2000. [34189]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish Office does not incur expenditure directly on public sector housing in the Scottish borders. However, housing benefit will be paid to some public sector tenants and expenditure will be incurred by local housing authorities and by Scottish Homes. I congratulate the former Berwickshire district council on having been the first local authority to transfer its entire stock to a housing association.

26. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the changes in council housing expenditure in Glasgow in real terms between 1989 and 1999. [34196]

Mr. Robertson: Decisions on the allocation of resources to individual authorities for 1998–99 will not be taken until early in 1998 following completion of the 1997 public expenditure survey. Expenditure by Glasgow district council on its own stock in 1989–90 was £129 million at 1995–96 prices.

Football

20. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet representatives of the Scottish Football Association to discuss the provision of public funds for the development of football. [34190]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I meet representatives of the Scottish Football Association from time to time to discuss a range of relevant issues.

Taxation

22. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from Scots on taxation matters. [34192]

31. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received on taxation levels in Scotland. [34201]

Mr. Kynoch: We have received a number of representations expressing concern. This Government do not propose to introduce taxation rates in Scotland which differ from those in the rest of the United Kingdom.

Homelessness

23. Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent steps he has taken to tackle homelessness in Scotland. [34193]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: We are currently consulting on a revised draft code of guidance on homelessness. This year, we are providing grants of more than £400,000 to voluntary bodies for homelessness projects. Tackling homelessness is also a national priority for both local housing authorities and Scottish Homes.

Forestry Roads

24. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the imposition of weight restrictions on forestry roads; and if he will make a statement. [34194]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish Office Development Department received five representations about proposed weight restriction orders published by the former Highland regional council.

Health Service

25. Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on what measures he has taken to ensure that patient care is the first priority of NHS management practices. [34195]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The priorities and planning guidance for the NHS in Scotland each year requires all those working in the NHS to give patient care the highest priority.

Orchard House Nursing Home

27. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the report of the inquiry into the management practices at Orchard House nursing home. [34197]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Decisions about the publication of this report are for Lanarkshire health board.

Prison Construction (Kilmarnock)

29. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his proposals to build a new privately financed prison at Bowhouse, Kilmarnock. [34199]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The proposed new 500-place prison will be designed, constructed, managed and financed by the private sector under the terms of the Government's private finance initiative.

Mental Incapacity

30. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Scottish Law Commission report on mentally incapacitated adults. [34200]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 18 June, Official Report, column 409, careful consideration has been given to the Scottish Law Commission's report on incapable adults. The report raises a number of issues which are both important and sensitive, and proposes many changes in the law relating to legal procedures for looking after the property, financial affairs and personal welfare of mentally incapable adults. Whilst my right hon. Friend acknowledges the consultation which has already been carried out by the commission in coming to the conclusions it has reached, he also recognises that many people will have strong views on the proposals which the commission has made.

Consequently, he has decided that, before legislating on the basis of the commission's proposals, there should be further consultation. It is proposed to issue a consultation paper this summer.

Forestry

33. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of persons employed in the forestry service in 1989; how many acres were then in its administration; and what are the current figures. [34203]

Mr. Kynoch: The Forestry Commission employed 5,118 people and managed 1,144,000 hectares of land in 1989. It currently employs 3,646 people and manages 1,080,000 hectares of land.

36. Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to devolve forestry administration to local communities. [34206]

Mr. Kynoch: We recently announced a series of new measures to allow local communities to become involved in the management of woodlands. When the Forestry Commission offers woodlands for sale, local communities will be able to buy them at the valuation price where this will help to promote the social and economic development of the community. Some local communities have already entered into forestry partnerships with the commission, and this is a flexible way of increasing communities' participation in forest management. The commission has recently published a practical guide, "Involving Communities in Forestry", a copy of which is in the Library.

Lenient Sentences

34. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on extending the Crown's right to appeal against lenient sentences to Scotland. [34204]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government have announced proposals to extend to summary proceedings the Crown right of appeal against unduly lenient sentences.

Radioactive Waste

35. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much radioactive waste has been dumped in Scotland in the last 10 years; and what plans he has to ban the dumping of imported radioactive waste in Scotland. [34205]

Mr. Kynoch: Since 1986, some 5,500 cu m of low activity solid waste has been disposed of in Scotland by nuclear sites. The position of the UK Government in relation to the importation of radioactive waste is set out in the White Paper, "Review of Radioactive Waste Management Policy", Cm 2929.

Miscarriages of Justice

37. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he informed the members of the Sutherland committee on appeals criteria and alleged miscarriages of justice of his response to their recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [34207]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend discussed the Government's conclusions with Sir Stewart Sutherland and Lord Ross, the Lord Justice Clerk, on Friday 7 June. He subsequently made a statement to the Scottish Grand Committee in Ayr on 10 June, the day the committee's report was published. The White Paper, "Crime and Punishment", published on 17 June, details the Government's response to the committee's report.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those parliamentary constituencies he has visited in the last three months on official business and those constituencies he intends to visit in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [33859]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Since 20 March I have visited the following constituencies on official or parliamentary business:

Constituency

Stirling
Livingston
Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale
Edinburgh, Central Hamilton
Glasgow, Hillhead
Gordon
Perth and Kinross
Aberdeen, East
Dundee, East
Kincardine and Deeside
Glasgow, Govan
Glasgow, Central Edinburgh, West
Dunfermline, West
Ayr

It is not my practice to give details of my future programme, but my office would normally write to the hon. Members concerned before visits to their constituencies on official business.

Saltire

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on which dates the Saltire is flown from public buildings. [35001]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Where a Scottish Office building has two or more flagstaffs, the Saltire is flown on the following days in addition to the Union flag:

6 February: Her Majesty's accession

19 February: Birthday of the Duke of York

10 March: Birthday of the Prince Edward

March: Commonwealth day (second Monday)

21 April: Birthday of Her Majesty the Queen

2 June: Coronation day

June: Official celebration of Her Majesty's birthday (date to be notified)

10 June: Birthday of the Duke of Edinburgh

1 July: Birthday of the Princess of Wales

4 August: Birthday of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother

15 August: Birthday of the Princess Royal

21 August: Birthday of the Princess Margaret

November: Remembrance day (second Sunday)

14 November: Birthday of the Prince of Wales

20 November: Her Majesty's wedding day

30 November: St. Andrew's day.

Bible John Case

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of the Strathclyde police inquiry into the Bible John case arising from the exhumation of the body. [34884]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Strathclyde police estimate the costs, excluding overhead costs, to be as follows:

Police salary costs: £26,318

Other costs: £6,204

Professor Donald Macleod

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the costs to public funds of bringing to court the case against Professor Donald Macleod, broken down to show those relating to (a) the police, (b) the Procurator Fiscal Service and (c) the Crown Office. [34963]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate informs me that the costs of summary cases which proceed to trial can vary considerably depending on a number of factors, including the length of the trial. Procurators fiscal do not keep a record of the amount of time spent on individual cases. The information requested about the cost of the case against Professor Macleod is not therefore readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Lothian and Borders police have been able to calculate that their salary costs amounted to approximately £3,000.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action the Crown Office proposes to take following the summing up in the case against Professor Donald Macleod. [35255]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has asked the procurator fiscal to submit a report on the trial. A decision on whether any further action should be taken will be made by Crown counsel following a consideration of that report.

Sex Offenders

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his proposals to require sex offenders to notify the police of any change of address in Scotland. [34177]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The White Paper, "Crime and Punishment" published on 17 June, set out my proposals to ensure that convicted sex offenders should be required to register their address with the police. I hope to introduce legislation for this purpose as soon as possible.

Under-age Drinkers

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his proposals to provide the police with powers to confiscate alcoholic drink from under-age drinkers in public places in Scotland. [34175]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has announced proposals to allow the police to confiscate alcoholic drink from under-age drinkers in public places. This will allow the police to respond in a practical way to the problem without criminalising the behaviour of under-age drinkers.

WALES

Inward Investment

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the definition of the A55 and M4 corridors in Wales outwith which he expects inward investment into Wales to channel at least 20 per cent. of new jobs coming into Wales; and what was the number and proportion of such jobs which went into the area outside these two corridors in each of the past three years. [34943]

Mr. Hague: For the purpose of Welsh Development Agency strategic guidance and targets, the eastern M4 corridor is defined as the coastal strip running from Chepstow in the east to Pyle in the west; the northern boundary is coincident with the southern boundary of the programme for the valleys area, extended east to include the southern half of Monmouthshire. In north Wales, from 1 April 1996, the eastern A55 corridor is defined as the non-rural part of the Wrexham county borough council area, the whole of Flinshire and the northern part of Denbighshire, including the towns of St. Asaph, Rhyl and Prestatyn. This is a slightly larger area than has previously been used. An illustrative map is being produced and, as soon as it is available, I will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

I will also arrange for the chief executive of the WDA to write to the hon. Member providing details of the jobs created outside these corridors in each of the past three years and for a copy of his letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Food Inspections

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the latest available information on the percentage of food health inspections carried out by each of the old district councils, indicating for each council (a) the number of inspections planned, (b) the number carried out, (c) the number of inspection staff employed and (d) the ratio of that number to (i) the population of the district and (ii) the number of food outlets requiring inspection. [34490]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information on the number of food health inspections planned and the number of inspection staff employed by the former district councils in Wales is not held centrally. The number of food outlets in each of the former districts, along with the number of inspections carried out during 1995 by each council, are detailed in the table:

Number of premises and inspections Welsh districts 1995

Trunk Road Maintenance (Powys)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on trunk road maintenance spending in Powys. [35256]

Mr. Hague: The allocation for trunk road current maintenance in Powys for 1996–97 is £2,497 million.

Voluntary Sector (Funding)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to ensure that changes in the arrangements for the funding of the voluntary sector in Wales do not interrupt programmes already in being; and if he will make a statement. [35257]

Mr. Hague: It is my policy to consult the voluntary sector over changes in arrangements for funding the sector.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his proposals for the allocation of funding to the voluntary sector in Wales. [35258]

Mr. Hague: The Government are committed to a strong and thriving voluntary sector in Wales. Funding from my Department supports the development of the voluntary sector and underpins the considerable contribution which the voluntary sector makes to the achievement of the Government's policy objectives.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 4 July 1996

TRANSPORT

Railways (Fencing)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what legislative provisions regulate physical access to the permanent way; and what responsibilities Railtrack has to protect the public by ensuring that the railway is adequately fenced; [34736]

(2) how many miles of unfenced railway line run through urban areas. [34737]

Mr. Watts: Under section 16 of the Railway Regulation Act 1840, section 23 of the Regulation of Railways Act 1868, section 55 of the British Transport Commission Act 1949 and railway byelaws, it is an offence to trespass on the railway.

Railtrack has a statutory duty under section 10 of the Railways Regulation Act 1842 and section 68 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act 1945 to ensure that fencing is provided and maintained for its railway lines. In certain limited cases, lines may be exempt from the requirement for fencing by the terms of the old private Act or the light railway order which originally authorised their construction. However, I understand that in some of these cases fencing is in fact provided even though the Act or order does not require it.

Following a review of existing railway safety legislation, the Health and Safety Commission has consulted on new draft regulations, including one which would require infrastructure controllers, so far as is reasonably practicable, to prevent unauthorised access by persons or animals which could endanger health or safety.

Railtrack is also subject to the same duties and liabilities in respect of persons on its premises as any other public limited company. These duties include the general requirements of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, including the duty to conduct the undertaking in such a way as to ensure, so far as is reasonably practicable, that persons are not exposed to risks to their health or safety.

M5 Link Road

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what level of delay in the completion of the M5 link road with the second Severn crossing will trigger penalty clauses against the contractors. [35676]

Mr. Watts: Any delay in substantial completion of the M49, which links the M5 to the second Severn crossing, beyond the contract completion date would render the contractor liable for a sum based on liquidated damages.

Trains (Service Checks)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how often InterCity West Coast trains are given a full service check; what changes there have been to this maintenance schedule within the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [35083]

Mr. Watts: This is a matter for InterCity West Coast, the train operator.

I understand that a full range of maintenance is undertaken, varying from daily maintenance to complete overhaul. There have been no changes in maintenance schedules within the last 12 months.

EC Bus and Coach Directive

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to introduce regulations to implement the EC bus and coach directive. [34990]

Mr. Norris: The Commission has not yet made a proposal for a European bus and coach directive. The implementation dates of the directive will no doubt be the subject of negotiation after the proposal has been tabled.

Air Safety

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date he expects to ratify the joint aviation authorities agreement on joint airworthiness requirements No. 36 on noise. [35510]

Mr. Norris: The JAA adopted JAR No. 36 on noise on 24 June 1996. The practice is that new JARS are incorporated into EC legislation.

Rolling Stock

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure that railway rolling stock destined for repair and maintenance arrives at the depot by rail. [35663]

Mr. Watts: Responsibility for deciding how and where passenger rolling stock is transported for repair and maintenance lies with the train operators and the passenger rolling stock leasing companies. In some instances, the nature of the fault renders rolling stock unsafe for transport by rail.

TREASURY

Customs and Excise

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recommendations contained in Sir Richard Scott's report relating to Customs and Excise legislation and procedures. [35979]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Sir Richard Scott made a number of recommendations in his report relating to Customs and Excise legislation and procedures. These may be found in chapter K4 of his report. All his recommendations have either been accepted by the Government as they stand or, in a few cases, following detailed consideration by the commissioners of Customs and Excise and their legal advisers, the concerns reflected in Sir Richard's recommendations will be met in an alternative manner to that proposed. The Government's detailed response to each recommendation is contained in a paper which I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Diplomatic Relations

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when diplomatic relations were (a) suspended and (b) restored between the United Kingdom and (i) Iran, (ii) Iraq and (iii) Syria during the past 15 years. [35316]

Mr. Hanley: Relations with Iran were formally broken by Iran on March 1989. We restored relations with Iran in September 1990. Relations with Iraq were suspended in February 1991 and have not been restored. Relations with Syria were suspended in October 1986 and restored in November 1990.

Missing Personnel

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent action the UN has taken in respect of US personnel missing in action in (a) Vietnam and (b) North Korea. [35153]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We are unaware of any recent UN activity in this area.

HEALTH

Prescription Charges (Crohn's Disease)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) for what reasons individuals suffering from Crohn's disease who need medication for life are not exempt from prescription charges; [35096]

(2) what plans he has to make prescriptions free for people suffering from Crohn's disease. [35106]

Mr. Malone: We have no plans to extend the exemption arrangements. In 1996–97, we expect 85 per cent. of prescriptions to be dispensed free, thanks to our extensive exemption arrangements, which are among the most generous in Europe. Many people with Crohn's disease will benefit from these.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all categories of staff working in the NHS who are not eligible to join the NHS pension scheme and the number of people currently in each category; what estimate he makes of the extra public expenditure that would be involved in giving full NHS pension scheme eligibility to each of these categories; and if he will make a statement. [35086]

Mr. Malone: All staff employed by the national health service are eligible to join the NHS pension scheme. Others who work in the NHS such as chairmen of trusts and health authorities, some self-employed contractors and the staff of contractors are not eligible. The costs for each group would depend upon take-up, whether this scheme would replace current pension arrangements and the salaries of the staff concerned, as well as the factors set out in my reply to the hon. Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Pickthall) on 26 June at columns 147–48.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS trusts (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings; and if this is in each case (i) under a statutory requirement or (ii) voluntary. [35089]

Mr. Malone: All national health service trusts are statutorily required to hold one annual meeting which is open to the public. No information is available centrally on the many NHS trusts which voluntarily admit the public to their board meetings.

All NHS trusts which are considering dissolution are statutorily required to consult the relevant community health council. No information is available centrally on individual NHS trusts which voluntarily conduct other consultation exercises either with the public or with outside commercial interests.

There is no statutory requirement for NHS boards to maintain a register of members' interests, but all NHS trusts are required by the codes of conduct and accountability to do so. These registers are available for inspection by the public.

There is no obligation on NHS trusts to publish the agendas and minutes of their meetings. Information is not available centrally on how many NHS trusts voluntarily do so.

General Practitioners (Practice Lists)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been removed by general practitioners from their practice lists in England for each of the last five years. [35107]

Mr. Malone: The information required is available only from 1992 and is as follows:

1992–93: 78,993
1993–94: 70,997
1994–95: 82,831

The majority of de-registrations are due to deaths or moving home.

Tuberculosis

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the interdepartmental working group on tuberculosis has completed its report. [36128]

Mr. Horam: Yes. Two reports of the interdepartmental working group on tuberculosis, entitled "Recommendations for the prevention and control of tuberculosis at local level" and "Tuberculosis and homeless people", have been released today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has completed his consideration of the advice he has received from the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation on the future of the schools Bacillus Calmette-Guerin immunisation programme. [36105]

Mr. Horam: We have accepted fully the advice of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation that Bacillus Calmette-Guerin should be routinely offered to all schoolchildren between the ages of 10 and 14. The advice we have received from the JCVI is in line with the current recommendation as set out in the Department of Health's memorandum "Immunisation Against Infectious Disease", copies of which are available in the Library. We would therefore expect all health authorities to offer BCG immunisation routinely to school children.

Infant Formulae

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will issue guidance on the donation of informational or educational equipment or materials in accordance with section 21(3) of the Infant Formula and Follow-on Formula Regulations 1995. [36106]

Mr. Horam: Draft guidance was issued for public consultation on 2 July, copies of which have been placed in the Library. It contains:

> proposed good practice to help ensure that information provided on infant feeding is objective and consistent; and proposed guidelines and criteria on the donation of informational or educational materials by the infant formula industry.

Comments have been requested by 10 September 1996.

Medicinal Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to reduce the deaths by poisoning attributed to (a) paracetamol, (b) co-proxamol and (c) dotheipin. [35452]

Mr. Malone: No immediate measures additional to those already in place are proposed. Paracetamol co-proxamol and dothiepin are effective drugs which are safe at the dosages recommended on the labelling. The Medicines Control Agency evaluates all new information on the safety of medicines carefully, particularly in relation to the controls on their availability.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action is he taking to reduce the incidence of adverse reaction to medicinal drugs. [35456]

Mr. Malone: All medicines that are effective have adverse reactions, some minor and some more serious. Effective methods and procedures are in place to reduce the incidence of these in patients taking medicines. Medicines undergo rigorous evaluation of quality, efficacy and safety by the licensing authority, and its expert advisory bodies before being allowed on the market, to ensure that the benefits of medicines outweigh their risks. Product information for doctors and patients give clear instructions on use and provide warnings and precautions on adverse reactions in order to minimise the likelihood and impact of adverse reactions.

Once marketed, medicines are monitored closely to identify previously unrecognised adverse reactions or changes in their frequency or severity. Effective procedures exist for investigation, expert evaluation and action on identified adverse reactions. Changes are made to a medicine's marketing authorisation and product information to minimise the occurrence and impact of any newly identified adverse reactions. Rarely, when risks are shown to outweigh benefits, a medicine may be withdrawn from the market. Doctors and pharmacists, and patients are informed of the adverse reactions of medicines they use through product information. A bulletin entitled "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance" is also distributed to doctors and pharmacists quarterly to inform them of new adverse drug reactions and provide advice on the safe use of medicines. For more urgent issues communication by letter and electronic communication network is used.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 89 in which two ambulance services the evaluation was commissioned; and how much is being spent on it. [35453]

Mr. Horam: The evaluation was conducted on Derbyshire Ambulance Service NHS trust and Essex Ambulance Service NHS trust.

The cost of the research was £52,462.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health service commissioners have market tested the provision of ambulance services; and with what results. [35580]

Mr. Horam: South Staffordshire Health Authority has market tested ambulance services for a part of its area which bordered on Greater Birmingham. The contract was retained by the West Midlands ambulance service.

Addictive Substances

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the relative physically addictive properties of (a) nicotine, (b) alcohol, (c) heroin, (d) cocaine, (e) ecstasy, (f) benzodiazepines, (g) caffeine and (h) cannabis. [35457]

Mr. Bowis: There is no scientific scale of "addictiveness" covering all these substances.

Bandages

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when (a) Biflex Thuasne bandages and (b) Velband bandages were last available on prescription from the national health service; and what alternative bandages are currently available on prescription. [35507]

Mr. Malone: Biflex Thuasne and Velband bandages have never been available on general practitioner prescription. A number of bandages are available on GP prescription and these are listed in the drug tariff, copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Read Codes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 1 July, Official Report, column 334 if he will place in the Library a copy of the report of the joint computing group of the British Medical Association and the Royal College of General Practitioners into medical coding and classifications. [35697]

Mr. Horam: The report will be placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Producer and Supplier Information

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many new initiatives his Department has taken in the current year to improve the flow of information between producers and their suppliers. [35476]

Mr. Page: The development of successful partnerships between customers and suppliers is of great importance in promoting the competitiveness of UK industry. The Department works closely with companies, trade associations and others on a wide range of activities and initiatives to encourage this. However, no central record of such supply chain initiatives is held.

British Energy

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the cash value of the liabilities of British Energy that will be met by the segregated fund. [35616]

Mr. Lang: British Energy's expected future payments in respect of nuclear liabilities covered by the segregated fund were approximately £3.7 billion undiscounted, as at March 1996.

Terrorist Damage

Mr. Eastham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 27 June, Official Report, column 202, in respect of compensation for terrorist damage, for how many years such insurance has not been available in Northern Ireland. [35526]

Mr. Nelson: Insurance cover for losses arising from damage to industrial and commercial property caused by terrorist activity has been unavailable in Northern Ireland for 22 years.

Barmac

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 1 July, Official Report, column 262, if he will detail the outcome of the 24 June meeting in respect of the Barmac N166 site objective 1 application; and if he will make a statement. [35618]

Mr. Eggar: The meeting between officials of the European Commission and my Department was exploratory and to discuss a draft application; no decisions were made. Commission officials indicated what further information would be needed before they could reach a final conclusion.

Court Facilities

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many times since 1992 witnesses have given evidence in court (a) behind screens and (b) with the use of voice distorters. [34883]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer. I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 4 July 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about witnesses and the use of screens and voice distorters in court since 1992.

These figures are not held centrally and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Companies (Payments)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to public funds of the consultation that he has undertaken on whether large companies should state their payment practice in their accounts. [35640]

Mr. Page: As the consultation was launched only on 27 June, it is impossible to judge at this stage what the total cost to public funds will be. However, the consultative document itself was produced in-house to keep production costs down. We estimate the printing and reprographic costs for the nearly 2,000 copies issued so far to be approximately £1,800. The only other significant item of expenditure to date has been the cost of mailing the document to consultees.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Remand Prisoners

Ms Corston: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average time that prisoners are held on remand in custody awaiting trial. [34516]

Mr. Streeter: For proceedings in the magistrates courts it is possible to give only the average number of whole weeks spent in custody between first listing and completion of the case, which in 1995 was seven weeks. That figure includes those cases which were subsequently committed to the Crown court, where the average waiting time between committal and start of trial in 1995–96 was 11.4 weeks.

Youth Courts

Mr. Michael: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the average time an indictable offence took (a) from offence to charge or summons, (b) from charge or summons to first listing, (c) from first listing to completion and (d) from offence to completion for cases proceeding through youth courts for (i) England and Wales, (ii) each region in England and Wales and (iii) each police force area in the latest year for which figures are available. [35622]

Mr. Streeter: The latest full year for which figures are available is 1995. The information requested is contained in the table. The table includes information on all indictable offences—both indictable only and triable either way. The source of the figures is the magistrates courts time intervals survey. This survey collects information on all defendants in indictable cases in one sample week of February, June and October each year.

Caution needs to be exercised when comparing figures from different areas because sampling error in the figures could make any conclusions invalid. This is especially true for areas where the sample size was less than 100. The figure for areas with a sample size of less than 25 have been omitted as the level of sampling error makes them unreliable and potentially misleading.

Crown Courts

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many Crown court centres have (a) separate waiting areas and (b) separate eating facilities for victims and their families; and what plans he has to increase the number of Crown court centres with these facilities. [34880]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 4 July 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about the provision of separate waiting and eating facilities in Crown Courts for victims and their families.

Of the 92 Crown Court centres, 79 provide separate witness and/or special witness waiting rooms. These are specifically for the use of victims appearing as prosecution witnesses. No Crown Court has designated eating facilities for victims or their families and there are currently no plans to provide them.

It would be difficult to increase the number of existing Crown Courts with permanent separate waiting facilities because of the physical constraints of the buildings themselves. However, all new Crown and Combined Courts include an area to give privacy to victims/prosecution witnesses while waiting to give evidence. One waiting area is provided for each criminal courtroom. Where there are no permanent separate waiting areas, special arrangements can be made for victims and their families should the need arise.

Legal Aid

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Lord Chancellor intends to publish his conclusions on the reform of the legal aid system in England and Wales. [35650]

Mr. Streeter: The Lord Chancellor has today published a White Paper, "Striking the Balance", which sets out the Government's policy for the reform of legal aid in England and Wales. Copies of the White Paper are available in the Vote Office.

ENVIRONMENT

Council Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of how many local authorities will contract out the administration and enforcement of the council tax, community charge and non-domestic rates in the next two years; and what percentage this represents of the whole. [34857]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. Decisions as to whether to contract out council tax, community charge and non-domestic rates work are for individual local authorities.

Miss Patricia Eaton

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total cost since 1980 of (a) staff time, (b) legal advice and representation and (c) litigation to (i) the Inner London education authority, (ii) the London residuary body and (iii) the London Pension Fund Authority of responding to the complaints lodged by Miss Patricia Eaton of Kidbrooke Park road, London SE3, relating to her treatment by the ILEA when she was in its employment. [34890]

Sir Paul Beresford: This is a matter for the London Pensions Fund Authority and I suggest that the hon. Gentleman should contact the chief executive for the information that he requires.

Parliamentary Boundary Changes

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 79, what factors led Ordnance Survey not to produce (a) county maps and (b) maps on a larger scale showing the new parliamentary boundaries; what assessment he has made of the legibility of the boundary lines of the maps proposed for issue in respect of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [35100]

Sir Paul Beresford: Ordnance Survey is responsible for the official, definite mapping of Great Britain; Ordnance Survey Northern Ireland is responsible for the mapping of the Province.

Ordnance Survey maintains a definitive dataset of electoral boundaries which are offered for sale as a computer-readable digital map product called boundary-line. This product has been well received by the market and reduced the potential market for the traditional paper sheets.

In reviewing its series of administrative maps, all of which needed revising to take account of parliamentary and local government boundary reviews, Ordnance Survey weighed up the diminished market against the costs of revising and reprinting some 56 map sheets and took an economic decision to discontinue printing the county maps. Parliamentary boundaries are now shown on two sheets, and local authority boundaries on a further nine sheets.

More detailed versions of the new parliamentary boundaries are in the course of being produced. When complete they will be available as large-scale data.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what fiduciary duties are laid on local authorities in respect of decisions concerning the investment of sums paid into an authority's collection fund which are not immediately required for making payments or transfers. [35315]

Sir Paul Beresford: Local authorities are under a general fiduciary duty to their taxpayers to act prudently in investing funds. They should also have regard to the capital finance regulations and professional treasury management codes, as appropriate. In addition, the investment of collection fund money is subject to specific regulations made under section 89(5) of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. The following regulations made under the section are still in force: the Local Authorities (Funds) (England) Regulations 1992 (SI 1992/2428).

EC Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 1 April, Official Report, column 14, if he will undertake an immediate review of past EC directives with a view to removing all gold plating. [35046]

Sir Paul Beresford: We take every opportunity to review the implementation of existing EC directives when regulations are updated as part of the normal process of regulatory reform. In doing so, we take account of the new "Implementing EC Law Checklist", the publication of which was announced to the House by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 16 May. This checklist is designed to ensure that no unnecessary additional burdens are placed on business when EC directives are implemented in the UK.

Health Action Plan

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the United Kingdom national environmental health action plan. [36107]

Mr. Gummer: Together with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Health, for Scotland and for Wales, I shall publish the United Kingdom national environmental health action plan, and an overview of it, on Monday 8 July.

Copies of the documents will be placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Expenditure Survey

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if his Department will reassess its use of the family expenditure survey in the assessment of United Kingdom poverty, so that provision is made in a new survey for the inclusion of homeless people; and if he will make a statement. [33049]

(2) if his Department will reassess its use of the family expenditure survey in the assessment of United Kingdom poverty, so that provision is made in a new survey for the inclusion of people living in institutions with special reference to hospitals, nursing homes, residential homes and prisons; and if he will make a statement. [33048]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 21 June to the hon. Member for Bristol, East (Ms Corston), Official Report, column 635.

Health and Safety

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost in each of the past five years of (a) sick pay and (b) compensation paid to employees of his Department or their families, or members of the public, as a result of (i) minor, (ii) major and (iii) fatal injuries related to the work of his Department, detailing incidents involving information technology and those involving expenditure of more than £5,000. [33514]

Mr. Burt: Such information as is available is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) minor, (b) major and (c) fatal injuries have been suffered by staff in his Department and its agencies in work-related incidents in each of the past five years, showing in each year how many were related to information technology and giving details of all incidents involving fatalities. [33513]

Mr. Burt: Such information as is available is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Funeral Costs

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to ensure that (a) a higher proportion or (b) all funeral expenses of those receiving social security benefit are met by the state. [34404]

Mr. Roger Evans: We have no plans to do so. However, all aspects of the benefits system are kept under review.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect of the new system of social fund funeral payments on prices and costs in the funeral industry. [34421]

Mr. Evans: It is estimated that the social fund funeral payments scheme accounted for 10 per cent. of all funerals in Great Britain in 1995. The restriction in the level of payment made is presumed to have had an effect upon the market.

Benefits

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number and percentage of individuals in benefit units where at least one contributory benefit is being received, by net income of the household adjusted for family size, broken down into equivalised income bands before and after housing costs. [35512]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Number and percentage of individuals in benefit units where at least one contributory benefit is being received, by decile of the whole UK income distribution, 1992–93

	Before Housing Costs		After Housing Costs
Decile of the whole UK income distribution	Number of individuals who are in benefit units where at least one contributory benefit is received (millions)	Percentage of individuals who are in benefit units where at least one contributory benefit is received	Number of individuals who are in benefit units where at least one contributory benefit is received (millions)	Percentage of individuals who are in benefit units where at least one contributory benefit is received

Notes:
1. Contributory benefits are unemployment benefit, contributory retirement pension, sickness benefit, invalidity benefit, maternity allowance and widow's benefit.
2. A benefit unit is defined as a single adult or a couple, together with any dependent children.
3. Individuals are grouped into deciles using the standard households below average income definition of income—weekly household disposable income adjusted for household size and composition (equivalised). Each decile of the income distribution consists of 5.7 million people.
4. Figures for number of individuals are shown to the nearest 100,000 people. Columns may therefore not sum due to rounding. Percentages are shown to the nearest whole per cent.
5. All estimates are subject to sampling error.

Information is derived from the 1992–93 households below average income dataset; 1992–93 is the latest period for which information is available. Figures for 1992–93 are for two calendar years' data combined.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Foundation for Sport and the Arts

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the amount of Government funding to the Foundation for Sport and the Arts in each year since its inception. [34745]

Mr. Sproat: The Foundation for Sport and the Arts is funded partly by a 2½ per cent. reduction in pool betting duty, and partly by a voluntary contribution of 5p in the pound on pools coupons, both of which are passed on by the football pools companies to the foundation. The total amounts received annually by the foundation, as recorded in its annual reports, is as follows:

1991–92: £39,568,711
1992–93: £63,541,000
1993–94: £67,922,000
1994–95: £68,245,000

Dance and Drama Scholarships

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of the number of students of dance and drama who will benefit from her recent announcement on the use of lottery funds for scholarship purposes. [25247]

Mr. Sproat: I regret the delay in replying.

My hon. Friend's deep interest in the issue of dance and drama training is well known and respected. He set out his views with passion and eloquence in introducing a debate on dance and drama students in the House last week. The announcement by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State directed the Arts Council to take account of the need to develop the skills, talents and creative abilities of young people in particular. It is for the Arts Council—the independent lottery distribution body—to draw up detailed schemes to put this direction into practice. To this end, it has recently issued a consultation document, and is holding a series of consultative meetings.

The Arts Council has also asked a small group of its members, headed by the chairman of the London arts board, to analyse the current situation facing dance and drama students and to make recommendations on the administration of grants to these students for the future. As part of its work, the group will consider whether lottery money can be used to help with the problems facing dance and drama students in a way which does not substitute for existing public spending. I look forward to hearing the outcome of this work.

National Lottery

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what has been the total amount available to local projects from national lottery funds in each year since its inception. [34947]

Mr. Sproat: The organisations responsible for distributing lottery funds do not subdivide them into amounts available for local, regional or national projects and these figures are not, therefore, available. Since its inception in November 1994, the lottery has raised more than £2 billion for projects of all sizes.

Individual Sporting Talent

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to encourage the development of individual sporting talent. [33670]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 July 1996]: In the sports policy paper "Sport: Raising the Game", we announced our intention to establish a British academy of sport, to provide a coherent and unified programme to allow those with the greatest talent to use that talent to best effect. In addition, on 1 April, the Secretary of State issued new policy directions to allow national lottery money to provide revenue support to develop sporting talents and skills, particularly of young people.

Royal William Yard, Plymouth

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the total cost to her Department of the inquiry into the type of slate to be used for re-roofing the buildings in the Royal William yard, Plymouth. [34896]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 July 1996]: The total cost of the inquiry has yet to be finalised, but it is estimated to be approximately £16,000.

PRIME MINISTER

Hafez Dalkamoni

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer of 13 May, Official Report, column 362, about the release of Hafez Dalkamoni, in what circumstances the release by one country of a prisoner who is a national of another country is not solely a matter for the authority of the detaining country; and if he will make a statement. [35824]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, to the hon. Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart), on 17 January 1996, Official Report, column 590, other than that Mr. Dalkamoni was released on 27 June and deported to Syria.

Constitution (Referendum)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Prime Minister what legislative provisions are currently in force which would enable a referendum on the constitution to be held in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [36108]

The Prime Minister: None. Powers previously taken in 1975 and in 1978 to hold referendums have been repealed.

G7 Summit, Lyons

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals to move the world economy closer to ecological sustainability he made to the Group of Seven summit in Lyons. [34504]

The Prime Minister: The subject of ecological sustainability was not discussed at Lyon. I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Hexham (Mr. Atkinson), on 2 July, Official Report, columns 425–27.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 4 July. [34580]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Ministers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the average length of time served by (a) Secretaries of State, (b) Ministers of State and (c) Under-Secretaries in each Government Department since he became Prime Minister. [35908]

The Prime Minister: This is a matter of public record.

Parliamentary Pay and Allowances

Mr. Dover: To ask the Prime Minister when the Government plan to publish the report by the Senior Salaries Review Body on parliamentary pay and allowances. [36025]

The Prime Minister: The Government have now considered report No. 38 from the Senior Salaries Review Body on parliamentary pay and allowances. The Government are grateful to the review body for undertaking this complex remit so promptly. The report is being published today—as Command Paper 3330—and copies are available from the Vote Office.

Following representations made during the Government's consultations with other parties on the report, the Government will table motions to allow the House to consider whether it wishes to implement the recommendations of the report in full.

The Government themselves, however, are clear that the recommended increases for Members' and Ministers' pay are too high and that the motions to give effect to these should not be passed in current circumstances. They will therefore oppose the motions and will table motions to bring into effect an increase in the salary of a Back-Bench Member from £34,085 to £35,108, that is by 3 per cent., with effect from 1 July 1996, and for similar increases in the pay of Ministers and other office holders. The Government will also table motions to implement the report's recommendation that further increases should take effect from 1 April each year and should be linked to movements in senior civil service pay bands.

WALES

General Practitioner Lists

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many patients have been removed by general practitioners from their practice lists in each of the last five years. [35093]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not available centrally.

Monitoring Officers

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names and status of the monitoring officers, and those who are designated deputies in the absence of the monitoring officers, in each unitary authority in Wales. [35520]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not held centrally.

Swansea Institute of Higher Education

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has recently received about the Swansea institute of higher education; what meetings relating to that college have been attended by his (a) Ministers and (b) officials; where and when; and if he will make a statement. [35670]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My right hon. Friend and I have not received any recent representations about the Swansea institute of higher education, or attended any meetings relating to the institute.

Officials attended three meetings towards the end of last month at the Higher Education Quality Council, the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales and the Welsh Office.

Orimulsion

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met Mr. O. J. Williams to discuss the application to build a jetty to import orimulsion into Milford Haven; and if he will make a statement. [35509]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There is no record of a meeting between my right hon. Friend and a Mr. O. J. Williams.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of cases by unitary authority of the various categories of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease for each year since 1985. [35637]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Details of suspected cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in the UK have been reported to the national CJD surveillance unit in Edinburgh since May 1990. Cases in Wales, since reporting began, are detailed in the table:

	Definite	Probable	Possible
May 1990 to April 1991	1	0	0
May 1991 to April 1992	2	1	0
May 1992 to April 1993	5	0	1
May 1993 to April 1994	3	0	1
May 1994 to April 1995	4	0	2
May 1995 to April 1996	5	0	0

For reasons of confidentiality, personal details, including authority of residence, are not published.

University Hospital of Wales (Road Construction)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen of the University Hospital of Wales NHS trust and of the Bro Taf health authority concerning the delayed completion of the phase 1 on-slip road connecting the A48 and the University hospital of Wales site; what plans there are for the on-slip construction project to be carried out by the private finance initiative; what plans there are to re-advertise the scheme via the contracts supplement of the Official Journal of the European Communities; and if he will make a statement. [35677]

Mr. Hague: None. The University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS trust is currently negotiating contracts with a consortium of private sector companies. There is no reason to re-advertise the scheme.

Robert Powell (Medical Treatment)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 June, Official Report, column 371, on what date it was determined that the previous Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Clwyd, North-West (Mr. Richards), would play no part in consideration of the NHS complaint by the family of the late Robert Powell. [35624]

Mr. Hague: At no stage was my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, North-West involved in this appeal.

Children's Services

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his oral statement of 17 June, Official Report, columns 521–35, if he will make a statement on his plans for children's services in Wales. [36129]

Mr. Hague: My Department has written today to all the local authorities in Wales enclosing an action plan setting out the timetable for the implementation of those recommendations contained in the Adrianne Jones report addressed to them. I have placed a copy of this letter and the associated action plan in the Library of the House. I have asked the local authorities to advise my Department by 14 October this year of the steps taken to implement the 17 recommendations that I expect to be implemented by 1 October 1996.

To assist local authorities in their task, and to implement those recommendations addressed to my Department, I have asked the chief inspector of the social services inspectorate for Wales to take immediate steps to recruit three additional inspectors. This will also enable the inspectorate to check that the implementation has been effective and that practice in local authorities continues to conform to the best practice recommended in Miss Jones's report. I have also decided to establish a development fund of £500,000 which will be used to help bring about the required improvements in practice and procedures. The fund will be available for use in this financial year and in 1997–98.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Socrates-Erasmus Programme

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many United Kingdom students benefit from the Socrates-Erasmus programme; and what steps she is taking to increase their number. [35478]

Mr. Forth: In the academic year 1994–95, 11,946 UK students studied abroad as part of the Socrates-Erasmus programme. This number is expected to rise for the academic year 1995–96 to nearly 13,000 students. For the past four years, the Department for Education and Employment has published a booklet entitled "The European Choice" which gives information about opportunities to study in higher education in another European country. Flyers advertising the booklet are sent out with the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service information pack to students to help inform their choice of higher education courses.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many statutory instruments his Department introduced in (a) 1994, (b) 1995, and (c) between 1 January 1996 and 1 May 1996 which had the effect of repealing one or more previous statutory instruments without replacing them with a new regulation. [35044]

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of statutory instruments referred to by the Department or former Departments in the periods in question was as follows:

1994: 0

1995: 1

1996 to 1 May: 0

School Places

Mr. Blunket: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her Department's circular 6/96, annex A, paragraphs 22 to 24, if an oversubscribed school may withhold the offer of a place on the ground that the applicant's parents are unwilling to sign a home-school contract. [35454]

Mrs. Gillan: The circular emphasises that school admission authorities should have the maximum flexibility to decide how places will be allocated in the event of oversubscription. Annex A gives advice on the law as it relates to admissions procedures. It does not say that places can be withheld where parents are unwilling to sign a home-school contract, rather that admission authorities may decide that parents willing to sign should be afforded higher priority when there are more applicants than places.

Training Providers

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what amount due to be paid to training providers in respect of training provided in 1994 and financed by the European social fund will not be paid as a result of exchange rate fluctuations; and if she will list the 50 organisations which have had the largest reductions and the amounts in each case. [35455]

Mr. Forth: It is not yet known whether any money due to be paid to training providers in respect of 1994 projects financed by the European social fund will not be paid as a result of exchange rate fluctuations. Training providers have been paid 95 per cent. of the total European social fund money to which they were entitled in their agreed final claim. Revised final claims have been submitted to the Commission for each European social fund programme. It is hoped to pay the remaining 5 per cent. to all applicants, but the precise amount will depend on the exchange rate on the day the money is received from the European Commission. The 50 organisations for whom the largest reductions were made and the amounts concerned are as follows:

SCOTLAND

Cairn Gorm Funicular Railway

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 730, if he will publish the financial and economic assessment of the proposed Cairn Gorm funicular railway provided by Highlands and Islands Enterprise; and if he will make a statement. [35216]

Mr. Kynoch: The financial and economic assessment undertaken by Highlands and Islands Enterprise of the proposed funicular railway is subject to commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what level of grant aid has been offered, by his Department or its agencies, to the Cairn Gorm Railway Co. to support the construction of a funicular railway on Cairn Gorm. [35217]

Mr. Kynoch: None. My right hon. Friend is considering a request from Highlands and Islands Enterprise for his approval to the proposed of financial assistance to the Cairngorm Chairlift Co. for the construction of a funicular railway on Cairn Gorm. No decision on the request has yet been taken.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 375, if he will list the criteria he will use to judge the application for approval to incur expenditure by Highlands and Islands Enterprise on the proposed Cairn Gorm funicular railway. [35215]

Mr. Kynoch: In considering the request from Highlands and Islands Enterprise for approval of the proposed financial contribution to the Cairn Gorm funicular railway, my right hon. Friend will take into account a range of criteria, including the need to ensure that the proposed contribution represents value for money.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research has been commissioned by (a) his office and (b) the Highlands and Islands Enterprise to estimate the socio-economic benefits of the proposed Cairn gorm funicular railway; what was the cost of this research; and if he will make the results available to the public. [35213]

Mr. Kynoch: No research into such matters has been commissioned by the Scottish Office. The research commissioned by Highlands and Islands Enterprise is an operational matter for the organisation and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Grampian Structure Plan

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he received the Grampian structure plan for consideration; and if he will make a statement. [35690]

Mr. Kynoch: The Grampian structure plan was formally submitted to my right hon. Friend on 13 February 1995.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will reach a final decision on the Grampian structure plan. [35678]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend will make a final decision on the Grampian structure plan as soon as possible.

Nurses' Pay

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many trusts to date have made pay offers to nurses; and what steps he is taking to ensure that the review body recommendations are acted upon. [35111]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: To date, 17 NHS trusts in Scotland have made formal pay offers to nurses. Trusts have been advised of agreements reached within the nurses national Whitley negotiating council and should be engaged in local negotiations to seek resolution of this year's pay round.

The timing structure of pay offers is a matter for local management. It is for each trust to decide whether to make public the position it has reached.

Private Estates (Public Funding)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what guidelines he has issued to ensure that grants and loans received by private estates from public funds are adequately monitored; and if he will make a statement; [35675]

(2) what responsibilities he has for monitoring payments made from public funds to private landed estates; and if he will make a statement. [35693]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Guidelines on each scheme operated by the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department are issued to all involved in considering applications or authorising payments. They are designed to ensure achievement of the scheme objectives and fulfilment of scheme conditions. There are no special procedures for monitoring payments from public funds to particular classes of applicant: standard procedures are applied to all recipients of assistance irrespective of their land tenure status.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will introduce mechanisms to ensure that details of public funds given to landed private estates are readily available to members of the public; [35694]

(2) if he will list the publicly funded (a) grants and (b) loans received by the Atholl estate in the financial year 1993–94; what mechanisms were adopted to monitor the use of each payment made in this period; and if he will make a statement. [35696]

Mr. Robertson: Details of public funds paid are subject to the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1974 and cannot therefore be made available without the express permission of the recipient. I have no plans to introduce mechanisms to ensure that details of public funds given to private estates are available to members of the public. Private estates are subject to the same monitoring conditions as all other applicants for financial assistance.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) of 16 April, Official Report, column 450, if he will list the locations of the information relating to financial assistance given to the Atholl Estate since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [35695]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Details of any financial assistance given to Atholl estate would be held in several locations. Some scheme details are held in the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department's local area office and some in the sub-office covering the area where the estate lands lie. The remainder are held in Edinburgh on the computer records appropriate to each scheme. For closed schemes, where all conditions would have been met, information will no longer be available.

Wheelhouses (Alterations)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received in the last year from the fishing industry in Scotland in connection with the subject of safety improvement grants for wheelhouse alteration; and if he will make a statement on his response to these representations. [35619]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I have received no representations on this subject.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what alternative eligibility criteria he has evaluated for safety improvement grants for the alteration of wheelhouses on fishing vessels. [34620]

Mr. Robertson: The Fishing Vessels (Safety Improvements) (Grants) Scheme 1995 does not provide grants for structural alterations to wheelhouses. However, equipment to enhance wheelhouse visibility is eligible for assistance—for example, the installation of wandering steering leads or the building of a dome—glass bubble—on top of the wheelhouse with a raised platform underneath upon which the watchkeeper could safely stand, raising his sight level and increasing visibility.

Fishing Grants

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to monitor the setting up by local authorities of recognised grant assistance schemes in respect of applications for Pesca and Financial Instrument for Fisheries Guidance funds; and if he will make a statement on the results of that monitoring. [35623]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend does not monitor the details of local authority involvement in Community Initiatives. It is the responsibility of the local authorities concerned to ensure that scheme details comply with the relevant regulations. However, Scottish Office officials have held a number of meetings with officials of local authorities and other bodies to offer advice on proposals for schemes, to help ensure that they are consistent with European Community rules and the Pesca programme.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Numbers

16. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the ratio of police officers per head of population (a) in Britain and (b) on average in the EU. [34532]

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the ratio of police officers per head of population in Britain; and what is the current EU average. [34538]

Mr. Kirkhope: In England and Wales, the ratio of police officers to population was one to 407 at March 1996. No comprehensive data are available from which an average for European Union countries could be calculated.

24. Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to increase the number of police officers on the beat. [34541]

Mr. Kirkhope: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has promised sufficient resources for 5,000 more officers over the three years to 1998–99, specifically to enhance visible presence on the streets. We have started to give out funding for this. Also, providing high visibility policing so as to reassure the public is one of our key objectives for the police service.

27. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Deaprtment is taking to increase the number of police constables over the next three years. [34544]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Government are providing an additional £180 million in funding to enable chief constables in England and Wales to recruit 5,000 more constables over the three-year period from April 1996.

Border Controls

17. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will raise at the next meeting of the European Council of Ministers the legal status of the declaration attached to the Single European Act which preserves British border controls. [34533]

Miss Widdecombe: We have no plans to raise the issue of border controls at the next meeting of the Justice and Home Affairs Council.

Public Houses (Children)

18. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new obligations have been placed on publicans as a result of the initiating of children's certificates in public houses. [34534]

Mr. Kirkhope: Licensing justices are required to consider whether premises for which a children's certificate is sought represent a suitable environment for children. Some have exercised their discretion to impose conditions on applicants ranging from no smoking rules to restrictions to one bar per pub.

Crime Clear-up Rates

20. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the trend in crime clear-up rates since 1987. [34537]

Mr. Kirkhope: Although the overall clear-up rate for recorded crime in England and Wales has fluctuated between 33 per cent. in 1987 and 26 per cent. in 1995, the number of offences cleared up has increased during that period from 1,229,000 to 1,270,000 last year. For violence against the person and sexual offences, the clear-up rates has remained fairly consistent at around three quarters of all such recorded crimes.

Police Advisory Committee for London

22. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for widening the representation on the Policy Advisory Committee for London. [34539]

Mr. Kirkhope: Members of the Metropolitan Police Committee are chosen on individual merit, not as representatives of particular groups or organisations.

Asylum Seekers

23. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the total number of asylum seekers in custody at the latest available date. [34540]

Mr. Kirkhope: At the beginning of June, a total of 751 people who had sought asylum at some stage were detained.

Prisoners (Education)

25. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently undertaking educational courses. [34542]

Miss Widdecombe: This information is not available in the form requested. Prisoners' education is recorded in hours. The total number of prisoner hours spent in education in 1995 was 9.4 million.

Firearms Certificates

26. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people under the age of 18 years have been issued with firearms certificates in the last five years. [34543]

Mr. Kirkhope: This information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The grant of a firearm certificate in each case is a matter for the chief officer of police, who must be satisfied that the applicant can be trusted to keep and use firearms safely.

Young Offenders Institution (Colchester)

28. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the establishment of a young offenders institution at Colchester. [34545]

Miss Widdecombe: On 17 April, I announced our intention to establish a young offender institution at the military corrective training centre at Colchester.

Preparations are going well and I look forward to announcing the opening of this new institution in the autumn.

Prisons (Ministerial Visits)

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits to prisons the Minister of State with responsibility for prisons plans in the next three months. [34530]

Miss Widdecombe: My plans to date include tours of the north-east and Bristol areas in September. I expect to visit at least a dozen prisons in the two areas. Other visits have yet to be arranged but I will make as many as possible, allowing for my other commitments.

Security Industry

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to regulate the private security industry; and if he will make a statement. [34524]

Mr. Sackville: Our proposals for access to criminal records by employers will go a long way to meeting the need for adequate checks on those who want to work in the security industry. We have to be sure that any further measures—such as those recommended by the Home Affairs Select Committee—are justified and would not place an excessive burden on businesses.

Overseas Domestic Workers

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the immigration status of domestic workers from overseas. [34536]

Mr. Kirkhope: Private servants in diplomatic households, and other domestic servants who are allowed to accompany their employers to the United Kingdom, may remain here subject to a condition restricting them to employment with that employer.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were detained in Doncaster prison, under Immigration Acts powers in each month since January 1996; what were their nationalities; how many were deported in each month; and to what countries. [34982]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 4 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many people were detained in Doncaster prison, under Immigration Acts powers in each month since January 1996; what were their nationalities; how many people were deported in each month; and to what countries.

Information on the number of persons detained in HMP Doncaster under Immigration Act powers is shown in the attached table for the last day of each month for the period January to May 1996. Two people were deported after discharge from HMP Doncaster between January and May; one in January and the other in May. Information is not available on the countries to which these persons were deported. Nationality information cannot be given as it would identify individuals.

Population of Immigration Act detainees in HMP Doncaster since January 1996, by nationality

Date	Number
31 January 1996	3
28 February 1996	2
31 March 1996	3

Applications for Settlement

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the average length of time since 1 January for determining an application for settlement based on marriage to a person already settled in the United Kingdom after the 12 months leave to enter as a spouse has passed. [35124]

Mr. Kirkhope: The average time to decide all marriage settlement applications during the period 1 January to 14 June was 66 days.

Ku Klux Klan

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate inquiries into the (a) recruitment and (b) other activities of the Ku Klux Klan in Great Britain with special reference to the west midlands; if he will call for a report on its activities from the chief constable of the west midlands; and if he will make a statement. [35621]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Government totally condemn any organisation which is intent on jeopardising the good race relations which we enjoy in this country. I understand that the West Midlands police are fully aware of the activities of a small group of people associated with the Ku Klux Klan. Any evidence that these individuals are engaging in criminal activities will be thoroughly investigated.

Prison Service

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the study of the relationship between Ministers and the Prison Service. [35863]

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. member for Rossendale and Darwen (Ms Anderson) on 14 March, columns 708–9.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he was asked by the British post in Islamabad to obtain information in the United Kingdom following applications for British passports by Tahihra Jabeen, Fazal ur Rahman Hussain, and Noor ur Rahman Hussain, Ref: Con/5267; on what date information was sent to the post; what recommendations he made on these applications; and if he will make a statement. [35233]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 2 July 1996]: A request for information was received on 11 October 1995 and a reply sent on 9 November. No recommendation was made since the consideration of an application for a British passport made abroad is a matter for the British post concerned.

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Home Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the availability of advice to people applying for immigration to the United Kingdom. [34535]

Mr. Hanley: I have been asked to reply.

We publish a comprehensive and instructive series of leaflets for different categories of visa applicant. They are readily available, along with other general advice on request, at all our entry clearance issuing posts in English and foreign language versions.

Bosnian Elections

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Home Affairs what arrangements are being made by Her Majesty's Government to enable Bosnians living in Britain to vote in the forthcoming Bosnian elections. [35081]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I have been asked to reply.

We have made available office facilities for a registration and absentee voting centre in the UK to be run under International Organisation for Migration and the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe supervision. The centre opened on 24 June. The Government have also assisted with the distribution of information about the registration and voting procedures in Bosnian, Serbian and Croatian to refugee organisations.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Road Schemes (Newtownbreda)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received suggesting roadworks schemes, in addition to those already planned, for easing the traffic congestion at the Forster Green junction, Newtownbreda; and if he will make a statement. [34583]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from V. Crawford to Mr. Peter Robinson, dated 1 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked the Chief Executive to reply to your question about suggestions for easing traffic congestion at the Forster Green junction, Newtownbreda. In his absence I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive.

As part of the public consultation process in relation to the Southern Approaches Transportation Strategy Review launched in January 1993, a number of representations were received suggesting the construction of a grade separated junction, ie flyover, at this location. Having considered these representations the Department subsequently concluded that, for the moment, only planned "at grade" improvements should be carried out pending the development of a new transportation strategy for the urban area as a whole.

I hope this information is helpful.

Medical Cards

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many new medical cards were issued by the Central Services Agency in each parliamentary constituency in each of the 12 months to June 1996; [35154]

(2) how many new medical cards were issued by the Central Services Agency in each parliamentary constituency in each of the 12 months to June 1995. [35155]

Mr. Moss: Statistics on the number of medical cards issued cannot be broken down by parliamentary constituency and are collected only on a quarterly basis. The table shows the number issued in each quarter between 1 July 1994 and 31 May 1996.

Medical cards issued by the Central Services Agency

Quarter ending	Number issued
1994–95
30 September 1994	67,465
31 December 1994	68,866
31 March 1995	79,097
30 June 1995	74,756
1995–96
30 September 1995	94,016
31 December 1995	73,213
31 March 1996	70,026
30 June 1996[1]	[1]44,848

[1] June 1996 statistics are not yet available.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many medical cards are in existence in West Belfast. [35156]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what procedure is followed by the Central Services Agency when a person reports his medical card as lost or stolen. [35160]

Mr. Moss: Where a medical card is reported as lost or stolen, the Central Services Agency requests details of the person's surname, birth surname (where different), forenames, current address, previous address if recently changed, date of birth and the name of the patient's GP. The patient's record is traced on the central health index and at least three of the data items given by the patient must match to confirm that the correct patient record has been traced. If the details match, the central health index is updated, and a new medical card is issued to the patient, normally within five working days.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes are proposed for the amount of information required to be on a medical card. [35242]

Mr. Moss: Certain changes are being considered to the medical card:

(a) to enable patients to register under the national organ donor registration scheme;

(b) to enable a GP, on accepting a child under five as a new patient, to indicate if child health surveillance services are to be provided; and

(c) to remove details about dispensing by doctors in the light of a review of dispensing arrangements.

No other changes are proposed.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are his plans for funding the administration costs arising from the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act in Northern Ireland. [36126]

Mr. Moss: All costs associated with the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act in Northern Ireland including the administration costs of the Northern Ireland Disability Council, the costs of providing an advice and support service and publicity costs will be borne on the Department of Health and Social Services administration and miscellaneous services vote, DHSS vote 4. Parliamentary approval of this new expenditure will be sought in a supplementary estimate for this vote. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £230,000 will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

Compensation Agency

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Compensation Agency's corporate plan for 1996–97 to 1998–99 and the business plan for 1996–97 will be published. [36127]

Sir John Wheelar: The Compensation Agency's corporate and business plans will be published today. The plans explain the agency's business and organisation and set out assumptions about work-loads and resources which underpin the plans and targets.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) UK legislation, (b) EU legislation and (c) international treaties, conventions or other obligations concerning animal welfare for which his Department has responsibility. [34288]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the animal welfare issues for which his Department has responsibility. [34287]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland is responsible for the welfare of livestock on farm, at market and at slaughter, the welfare of all animals during transport, the welfare of animals kept in pet shops, animal riding, boarding and zoological establishments and the general protection of all animals from acts of cruelty.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by group, division or other work unit the number of grades of staff working within his Department on animal welfare issues. [34289]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 25 June 1996]: The information is not available in the form requested. Welfare policy is directed by headquarters administrative and veterinary staff and implemented through veterinary and support staff engaged in field and slaughterhouse duties who have a welfare role as part of their remit.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle Records

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will establish a national cattle database as a means to identify, trace and age every bovine animal in the United Kingdom. [30830]

Mrs. Browning: We are urgently working on new measures to improve animal identification and traceability. A mandatory cattle passport for animals born after 1 July 1996 is being introduced. We shall also be introducing a system of double ear tagging. Currently, only one official tag is required.

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the estimated cost per head of (a) beef and (b) dairy cattle sent for slaughter in the Untied Kingdom on 1 March. [24493]

Mr. Baldry: The average live weight market price in the week ending 3 March was:

Cull cows: 79.06 per kg

Clean cows: 119.81 per kg

Figures on the cost per head are not collected on a weekly basis.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle were slaughtered in the United Kingdom under the 30-month scheme in the weeks beginning 20 May and 27 May. [35659]

Mr. Baldry: A total of 26,129 cattle were slaughtered in the week beginning 20 May and 25,170 were slaughtered in the week beginning 27 May.

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 5 June, Official Report, columns 478–79, if he will list the options currently under review by his Department for the eventual disposal of meat and bonemeal. [32807]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 13 June 1996]: The options of incineration, use as fuel in power stations and eventual landfill, are currently under review.

Cattle

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle (a) dairy and (b) non-dairy there are in the United Kingdom; and what is their estimated market value. [23213]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 1 April 1996]: According to the census carried out in June 1995, there were 4.7 million cattle in the dairy herd and nearly 7 million cattle in the beef herd. The farm gate value of total UK beef production for 1995 was £2.8 billion. It is difficult to estimate the market value of a cow in milk production, but based on an average figure of £1,200 per head, the UK dairy herd is worth around £6 billion.

Beef Imports

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much beef for human consumption has been imported into the United Kingdom from other EC countries in each month since 1 January 1995. [31009]

Mrs. Browning: The table shows UK imports of beef from other member states since January 1995. Information concerning trade since the BSE scare will not be available for a few weeks.

Milk Testing

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the contaminants for which milk is tested before sale; and if he will make a statement. [35057]

Mrs. Browning: Under the Dairy Products (Hygiene) Regulations 1995, it is the responsibility of industry to ensure that appropriate tests are carried out on milk to detect any residues of substances having pharmacological or hormonal action or of other substances which are harmful to human health, or which might be harmful to human health if those residues exceeded permitted tolerance limits. The regulations also include microbiological standards for milk. Local authorities are responsible for ensuring that the requirements are complied with and that dairy products are safe for human consumption. In addition, as part of its surveillance plan, MAFF carries out surveillance for a range of contaminants in milk. Results of the surveillance are published in annual reports or through the food safety information bulletin. Milk supplies are routinely tested for bacteriological quality and antibiotics, but not for other contaminants.

Access Agreements

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many access agreements have been concluded with farmers in each of the environmentally sensitive areas in the United Kingdom. [35312]

Mr. Boswell: The following number of management agreements in environmentally sensitive areas include land entered into the access tier:

	Number
Pennine Dales	2
South Downs	2
Broads	4
West Penwith	1
Suffolk River Valleys	6
South West Peak	1
Lake District	13
Cotswold Hills	1
Dartmoor	3
Essex Coast	1
Upper Thames Tributaries	2
Argyll Islands	1

ESAs in Northern Ireland do not provide for public access.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review his policy on concluding access agreements in environmentally sensitive areas where access routes traverse permanent grassland only. [35313]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry will review the access provisions of the agri-environment schemes in the next financial year.

Whaling

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the International Whaling Commission held in Aberdeen on 24 to 28 June. [36109]

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the use of the electric lance; and will he make a statement. [35469]

Mr. Baldry: The International Whaling Commission's 48th annual meeting was held in Aberdeen from 24 to 28 June. The UK delegation was composed of officials from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, assisted by officials from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and the Department of the Environment, and representatives of environmental organisations.

The United Kingdom's principal objective at this meeting was to ensure that the moratorium on commercial whaling, which has been in force since 1986, was not weakened in any way. I am pleased to report that this was achieved. A request by Japan for a quota of 50 minke whales for its coastal communities, which we and many others considered would have breached the moratorium, was once again rejected. The UK's opening statement made it clear that we would continue to oppose all efforts to end the moratorium, for the reasons set out in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan) on 8 May.

The UK and New Zealand put forward a proposal for a ban on the use of the electric lance, which is used to kill whales that are wounded, but not killed, by an explosive harpoon. Although this received a wide measure of support, it did not secure the majority of three quarters of those voting needed for adoption under IWC rules. However, it was clear that our argument that the electric lance is inhumane was widely accepted; even many of those who voted against a formal ban did not favour continued use of the electric lance. Japan, while continuing to defend its use of the electric lance, indicated that it planned to undertake research into possible alternatives, and would be reporting the results to the next IWC meeting. The IWC will return to this issue then.

The United States presented a proposal for an aboriginal subsistence whaling quota of five grey whales for its Makah indian tribe, and the Russian Federation sought a quota of five bowhead whales for indigenous peoples in Siberia. Both proposals aroused a good deal of concern, and as discussions progressed it became evident that neither was likely to obtain the three quarters majority needed for adoption. In those circumstances, both the United States and the Russian Federation withdrew their proposals.

Little progress was made on developing a revised management scheme, which is being devised to regulate all aspects of any future commercial whaling that might be permitted in the future. The United Kingdom continues to participate constructively in this work, as we believe that if commercial whaling ever did resume it would be essential to have in place tough and enforceable procedures to ensure that whaling took place only on stocks that were at healthy levels and was on a fully sustainable basis. The IWC did, however, endorse new guidelines on carrying out surveys and on calculating estimates of whale numbers; it also agreed new procedures designed to ensure better IWC oversight of these activities.

At the scientific committee meeting, there was a lengthy discussion of new estimates of minke whale numbers in the north-east Atlantic. The committee eventually agreed that the most recent estimate, derived from a survey carried out in 1995, was adequate for use in the revised management procedure—the part of a future revised management scheme under which catch limits for a particular stock would be calculated—and Norway claimed that this justified its decision to increase the number of whales it is planning to take this year under its commercial whaling operations. Most countries, however, continue to believe that Norway's whaling activities weaken both the moratorium and the authority of the IWC and a resolution was adopted by a large majority calling on Norway to reconsider its objection to the moratorium, under which Norway is legally entitled to continue commercial whaling, and to halt all commercial whaling operations immediately. The UK strongly supported this resolution.

We also supported a resolution calling on Japan to stop its scientific whaling and, in particular, to halt all scientific whaling within the southern ocean sanctuary. Again, this was adopted by a very large majority.

In the scientific committee, the outcome of the recent workshop on the effects of climate change on cetaceans was discussed, and steps were agreed to take forward work on this important issue. These were fully endorsed by the IWC itself through a resolution adopted by consensus. It was agreed, in particular, that the scientific committee would set up a standing working group to co-ordinate its work on environmental change, and that it would seek increased co-operation with other international organisations working on this subject.

A number of other issues were discussed during the meeting. The UK introduced a resolution on small cetaceans, which was adopted by consensus, drawing attention to earlier resolutions on threatened species of small cetaceans and encouraging the scientific committee to continue to identify species under threat and to advise on possible remedial action. A resolution was adopted on whalewatching. It endorsed guidelines proposed by the scientific committee and drew them to the attention of coastal states responsible for regulating whalewatching. Resolutions were also adopted on improving controls on trade in whalemeat and calling on Canada, which withdrew from the IWC in 1982, to rejoin the IWC if it wishes to authorise aboriginal subsistence whaling.

Overall, this was a satisfactory meeting for the UK, and we achieved most of our objectives. While we were not successful in securing a ban on the use of the electric lance, we made encouraging progress and are well placed to take the issue up again at the IWC's 49th annual meeting, which will take place in Monaco in October 1997.

Quarantine

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quarantine procedures were applied to the dog owned by Irene Sanders and rescued by British Airways on 23 November 1995; and how many representations he has received on this matter. [28145]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 7 May 1996]: I have received two letters concerning the news item on the independent television 10pm news on 23 November 1995 which showed a dog apparently avoiding the usual quarantine regulations on arrival at Heathrow. In responding to them I have explained that the filming of the meeting of the dog, its owner and the pilot of the aeroplane it arrived on took place after the dog had completed a full six months' quarantine in this country.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the representations received by his Department on the subject of quarantine in the last 12 months, indicating those supportive of the present system and those supporting change along the lines proposed by the Agriculture Committee in the fifth report of Session 1993–94 (HC 347). [28121]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 7 May 1996]: It would not be possible to provide this information in the manner requested without incurring disproportionate costs. However, from 1 January 1995 to 30 April 1996, my Department received 404 letters passed on by hon. Members from their constituents on the subject of quarantine of rabies-susceptible mammals. Of these, 349 supported change along the lines proposed by the Agriculture Committee, 42 supported the present system and 13 were on other quarantine matters.

A further 1,074 letters on the future of quarantine were received over the period, a large majority seeking change to the current system. Eight petitions supporting change were handed in.

Senior officials have twice met representatives from the organisation Passport for Pets.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce an investigation procedure to pursue complaints made by owners of animals held in quarantine about the conditions in which their animals are being held. [28929]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 14 May 1996]: There are already a number of procedures for dealing with complaints from owners of animals kept in quarantine premises. My officials investigate all complaints concerned with breaches of the Rabies (Importation of Dogs, Cats and Other Mammals) Order 1974, which covers security and the prevention of the spread of rabies. Complaints about the conditions in which the animals are kept can be referred to the veterinary superintendent appointed to the quarantine premises. Responsibility for investigating problems relating to the contract between the quarantine premises and owners of animals kept there fall to the local trading standards department of the local authority.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are taken by his Department to inspect the conditions dogs are kept in at quarantine kennels. [28932]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 14 May 1996]: It is a requirement under the Rabies (Importation of Dogs, Cats and Other Mammals) Order 1974 that all quarantine premises are under the control of a veterinary superintendent, appointed by agriculture Departments. The conditions of appointment are set out in the form ID51. I have placed a copy of this form in the Library of the House. These conditions state that the veterinary superintendent is responsible for the safe custody and strict isolation of each animal throughout its period of quarantine, and for ensuring that the standard requirements set out on form ID50 are complied with. He/she or his/her deputy, similarly appointed by my Department, must visit the premises daily from Monday to Saturday each week, and on Sundays if necessary. He/she must visually inspect all animals on at least two of these visits each week. He/she must also undertake a further individual examination of any animal which concerns him/her following inspection, or where he/she requested to do so by the kennel management or its owner.

DEFENCE

Married Quarters

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what representations he has received from representatives of the armed forces concerning the proposed married quarters sale; [35612]

(2) what representations he has received from the chiefs of staff concerning his Department's proposed married quarters sale. [35614]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Our proposals have been developed in full consultations with the chiefs of staff. The terms of the sale have been carefully designed to safeguard the interests of, and produce significant benefits for, the services and service families. The chiefs of staff share the Government's view that we now have the right basis for real improvements in service housing, which are long overdue.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what alternative proposals to his Department's scheme for the married quarters sale he has evaluated. [35613]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In recent years, we have considered several different approached to achieving our objective of improving the quality and management of service housing. These included different forms of sale, and retaining ownership. We believe that the proposals we have now put to bidders for the sale of the married quarters estate are the right answer, subject to reaching agreement on terms which satisfy the interests of the services and on a price which properly reflects the public interest.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning Mr. David Hart's involvement in his Department's married quarters sale. [35615]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minster of State for the Armed Forces on 22 March 1995, Official Report, column 218.

Vehicle Depots

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the investment over the last five years in the vehicle depots at Ashchurch and Ludgershall. [3314]

Mr. Soames [pursuant to his reply, 24 June 1996, c. 37]: I understand that there was an error in the answer sent by the chief executive for the Army Base Storage and Distribution Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write again with the correct information.

Letter from Kevin Goad to Mr. Geoffrey Clifton-Brown, dated 4 July 1996:

I very much regret that the information I gave recently in my reply of 24 June 96 to your question concerning the investment in the vehicle depots at Ashchurch and Ludgershall (PQ Ref: 1597H) was, in part, incorrect

It has come to my notice that there has been a basic calculation error involving the transcription of two columns of figures. This error concerns the figures shown against vehicle depot Ludgershall.

In my reply the figures shown for Ashchurch were correct, but the cost given for Ludgershall was in fact the cumulative total for both sites.

The corrected figures for Ludgershall are:-

Financial year

1991–92: £253,766

1992–93: £432,556

1993–94: £709,624

1994–95: £336,040

1995–96: £389,833

I hope this regrettable error has not caused too much inconvenience. I can only ask you, again, to please accept my sincere apologies.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Levene Report

Ms Emma Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the Levene report on the privatisation of public sector research establishments; and if he will make it his policy to take an immediate decision on the implementation of its recommendations. [35015]

Mr. Roger Freeman: I have been asked to reply. Sir Peter Levene has been invited to provide further advice on certain practical questions which emerged from Ministerial consideration of the first tranche of reviews of public sector research establishments. He has been asked to make an early report to Ministers. Decisions on the establishments will be announced as soon as possible. They will be supported by explanatory memoranda which will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 280

SESSION 1995–96

24th June—4th July 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
